With Peterborough in the circuit, the Canadian League should boom this year. Last season some of the clubs didn't make good, not getting the support to pay the salary list, but this year promises a revival and what is comforting to the hearts of the managers, good gates. The town in the league evidently like the game and want their team to stick, for when there was talk of removing the Guelph franchise offers were forthcoming to buy it and thus keep Guelph on the baseball map. The same thing happened in Berlin, where they claimed to have lost a big wad of money on the season. The trouble in London over the grounds appears to have been fixed up and the Cockneys will be in the game again. Peterborough is said to have lots of financial backing and all kinds of enthusiasm, and the Ottawa are rounding up a team that will make them all step lively to keep the pennant away from Lansdowne Park. With eight teams the Canadian League should put up some fine ball this summer.

NEW ARRIVALS IN THE CITY

Several immigrants arrived in the city yesterday and were disposed of by Immigration Officer Howson. They were a remnant of the party which passed through to Toronto. The entire party, numbering about five hundred, passed through Toronto Sunday night for many districts in Ontario, Western Canada and British Columbia. Most of them were steerage passengers and were booked for farms. They came across on the Empress of Britain and were sent out from Halifax on five special trains. A few stopped off in Toronto. 284 were for Ontario, 209 for Western Canada and 102 for British Columbia.

The setsunship Royal Edward is due to sail to-morrow from Liverpool with a party of about fifty emigrants on board, booked for Peterborough.

MAGISTRATE EDMISON IN NORWOOD.

County Magistrate Edmison was in Norwood this afternoon conducting an enquiry into an alleged charge of theft. In all probability the Lonsbury separation case will be dealt with. Accompanying the Magistrate was Mr. G. N. Gordon and High County Constable Cochrane.

NEW METHOD OF PAYING FOR STREET WATERING

has paid these men the way the city is called upon".

Ald. Brown—"There will be nothing lost if we let it stand over for a time.

Ald. Buller—"The Registrars might discuss it with the Committee. The next step would be to try and have our Member of Parliament have it rectified.

It was stated that in only one out of twelve municipalities were the registrars paid.

Mayor Bradburn—"I was in favour of the report. I have since talked it over and feel the clause might as well be left out. We won't be in any worse position.

Shirriff's True Vanilla

Imagine how much more delicious cakes taste when flavored with real vanilla extract. You can make certain of this by using extract of finest Vanilla beans by buying Shirriff's True Vanilla.

Ald. Duncan—"I would like to see it go through to-night."

Ald. Gillespie—"While it may be the law and may seem unjust if you take it up I don't think the Registrars would be unreasonable, if we point out the facts.

Ald. Anderson—"I think we should have this point of law decided. It will come up in the future.

The adoption of the report as presented, was moved by Ald. Anderson, seconded by Ald. Morgan.

An amendment was moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the clause be omitted.

New By-laws.

The following by-laws were passed:

1649—A by-law amending the milk by-law and providing that bottles taken from a house by a vendor shall not be refilled until he has taken them to his dairy and properly cleansed them.

1650—A by-law to grant the Salvation Army Band $200.

1651—A by-law providing for the issuing of debentures to borrow $10,000 for waterworks construction.

1652.—A by-law to restrict and regulate the running at large of dogs and the licensing of the same.

1653.—A by-law to provide for the fixing of the tax rate for 1911, and with levying of taxes in 1912 and the adopting of the roll made in 1911.

Ald. Anderson's Address.

In the reading of the last by-law Ald. Anderson said it was fortunate that the rate was kept at 22 mills this year. The Board of Education increased their demand by $3,000, the Public Library by $1,000, Police Commission by $1,700, and the firemen's salaries were higher by about $700, an increase in the assessment to the extent of $360,000 about balanced the extra demands. Last year there was a surplus not available this year, and the estimate had provided for some $3,000 for the Industrial Commissioner, which was not used, and it was not absolutely to keep strictly within the appropriations.

"But there are no amounts hidden away this year, to allow the estimates to be exceeded. This will have to be avoided otherwise there will be a deficit. The rate is a little preferable to last year's. The new payment of street watering takes away 1-2 a mill, but the doing away with the discount about balances that.

Taxes are Low.

You hear considerable talk about the taxes being high. This is somewhat unfair, for Peterborough's taxes are one of the lowest. Out of 15 cities, in the Province considering the municipal and school rates we are the fifth lowest, and taking municipal rates alone, Peterborough is third lowest. Again, I would ask that every care be taken to avoid a deficit this year." Ald. Anderson went into the details of his report, comparing the figures with the expenditure last year.

Watering the Streets.

Ald. Johnston asked what method was to be employed in paying for street watering. Numbers of people had spoken to him and there seemed to be considerable dissatisfaction with the new plan.

Mayor Bradburn—"It is impossible to legislate so that everybody will be treated alike. Last year a 1-2 mill was added to the tax bills and people paid on the assessed value of their property that fronted streets which were watered. The law was changed last year and street watering must be paid for by a frontage tax or out of the general taxes.

Ald. Johnson—"Why change the law? It was all right before. It dealt fairly with everybody.

Ald. Gordon.—"Blame the Whitney Government."

Ald. Brown—"If it is paid for out of the general tax how can you refuse anyone a watering service. I would like to know who has a right to it, and how you can refuse anyone.

Ald. Gordon—"I agree with Ald. Johnson. The principle of the frontage tax is the right principle. A man who receives no benefit should not be compelled to pay for it. I do not see why the store-keeper should be taxed more than anyone else. We must accept the new plan, but the principle on which it is based is wrong.

Mayor Bradburn — "There is no burden placed upon the storekeeper. They are not being taxed any more. They pay 1-3 of a mill on the assessed value of their property.

Ald. Anderson—"It relives them to a certain extent.

Mayor Bradburn—"There is no use in the citizens coming in from all over the city expecting watering service. We haven't the money to pay for the work, and if they insist we would have to shut down on watering the outlying sections that are included. We have not the money to meet the increased expense that would arise. A man who owns property assessed at $1,800 would have to pay only fifty cents a year and he gets that value out of the streets that are watered.

Ald. Graham—"I think a man can refuse to pay for what he does not get."

Mayor Bradburn—"What fire protection do I get for a vacant lot and yet I am paying for fire protection for it. You cannot legislate so that all will get the same equal benefit.

Ald. Morgan—"We are merely tools in the hands of somebody else. We are told to do a thing a certain way and we have to do it. We cannot go back to the old way we had last year. It was the only way. There is no benefit to the man in the outlying parts, outside of walking around the corner to a street that is watered.

Ald. Gordon—"The Whitney Government did it."

Ald. Buller—"The people on the outside have, in some cases, no hydrants, or no electric lights, and they are not kicking. I don't think they will kick. It is unfortunate that we cannot regulate it so that it would be equal for everyone. I don't see how we can do any better than we are.

Ald. Duffus expressed himself in a similar manner.

After all the discussion the by-law passed as read.

Ald. Brown stated that the Legal Committee could not do anything in regard to Mrs. Ferguson's claim for damages as the result of slipping on the sidewalk.

The Milk Trust.

"We went into the milk question," he continued. "There is a written agreement, but the men claim that it is more for self protection against "dead beats" than to raise prices. They are willing to produce it, if necessary. They claim the price is not higher than is warranted.

Ald. Duncan—"Did you find that a deposit was made?

Ald. Brown—"The men say not."

Ald. Gordon—"Owing to the shortage of fodder it has been shown me that prices are not excessive. I am convinced that the men are not unreasonably enhancing prices.

Ald. Johnston—"I don't think that prices are too high. Take the man who delivers 100 quarts a day. What he buys he pays 4 cents for. This allows him 3 cents a quart, or a profit of $3.00 a day for himself and expenses. It would be unjust to take exception to that.

St. Alphonsus' Lyceum.

Ald. Morgan said he understood that Ald. Brown was to bring in a report in regard to St. Alphonsus' Lyceum exemption from taxes. Apparently the Committee had laid it aside and forgotten it.

Ald. Brown—"We brought in a report and if any alderman objected to it he had a good opportunity then.

Ald. Duncan asked that the matter be left over until the next meeting. Ald. Morgan agreed.

Plumbing Inspector.

Ald. Gordon—"I would like to know if the Plumbing Inspector is applying the necessary tests."

Ald. Duncan—"I don't think anything is being tested.

I believe the smoke test is seldom used.

Ald. Brown—"If the Inspector (Mr. Peter Thompson) owes everyone as he did me he is all right. I consider him a 'crank' to society."

Ald. Graham—"I think he is a regular 'crank'. Every job I ever did has been thoroughly tested.'

Ald. Gordon—"I would like to have the Property Committee give us a general report, as to how the tests are being done. The city is growing rapidly and plumbing work is important.

Ald. Duncan—"I am willing to take the tatater up. I don't think the Inspector is doing his duty. I had work done last summer, and it certainly was not satisfactory."

Ald. Brown—"Probably he had an off day."

Ald. Duncan—"It is every day off".

Ald. Morgan—"Mayor Bush undertook to be guardian to him, but found he could not "plumb" him. He has held the job out of sympathy. His actions do not look right to me.'

Ald. Gordon's motion for a report on the question was seconded by Ald Anderson who said he did not believe the Inspector was doing his duty as it should be done.

C. P. R. Gets Property.

On motion of Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, the city will give 1-10 of an acre of land on the east side of the Spur Line to the C. P. R. This matter has been up before. The C. P. R. abandon any rights they may have to other land, defined, for this session. Both pieces are under water.

A communication from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., advising the Council that if it was desired that the Governor-General visit Peterborough that an invitation be sent early.

Moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that an invitation be extended to the Governor-General to visit Peterborough.

A circular letter from V. Clouthier Clerk of the Committee appointed to consider an Old Age Pension scheme was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council.

Settle with Contractors.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the Mayor and Ald. Duncan be authorized to settle with Rutherford Bros.

STOMACH DISTRESS AND DYSPEPSIA GO

Diapepsin Makes Upset Stomachs Feel Fine in Five Minutes

As there is often someone in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour gassy stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula, plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other diseases go in five minutes and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour, undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or any out-of-order stomach with the common, everyday cures advertised that they have made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

CONTRACT TO W. C. MEAD.

Will Provide the Flowers for the Parks This Year.

The tenders for the providing of flowers for the parks of the city were opened last night at a meeting of the Horticultural Society, and the contract awarded to Mr. W. C. Mead, of the West End green house.

The options of bulbs, etc., that will be given the members, were decided upon. The premium to be given for the securing of new members was endorsed. It was also decided to arrange for a more satisfactory distribution of the Canadian Horticulturist this year. A letter was read by Mr. F. Wise on an interesting subject in horticulture. The meeting was held in the office of the City Engineer with Mr. Peter Campbell presiding.

PRESENTATION OF CABINET OF SILVER TO MR. E. H. HOWSON

Mr. E. H. Howson on his return home, after being married in Hamilton, on Wednesday last, the announcement of which has already appeared in the Examiner, was presented on Monday evening by the Peterborough Lock Company and its employees, with a handsome case of silver. The presentation took place in the office of the company by the accountant, Mr. Cook on behalf of the employees and Hon. J. R. Stratton, President of the company. In making the presentation, Mr. Cook spoke in the highest terms of praise of Mr. Howson, and referred to the good feeling that existed between the company and the secretary-treasurer. He also congratulated Mr. Howson upon his marriage and spoke in felicitous terms of the many good qualities possessed by Mrs. Howson, who was no stranger in Peterborough.

Mr. Stratton, on behalf of the company, congratulated Mr. Howson, and wished him and his wife a long life of happiness and prosperity. "Mr. Howson," he said, "had been connected for some time with the Lock Company and the manufacture of locks, and it was but natural that he should engage in wedlock. He thought every young man that could afford to do so, should follow Mr. Howson's example, and he would be the better man by having the good influences of a good woman surrounding him. He wished Mr. and Mrs. Howson many years of happiness.

Mr. Howson, in accepting the handsome case of silver, thanked the company and its employees for their kind words and for the handsome present. The best of feeling had always existed between them, and it was his ambition to do his utmost to advance the best interests of the company, and he was glad to be able to say that he had always the hearty cooperation of all connected with the firm. He hoped that the good feeling that had always existed, would continue so far as he was concerned. He had his duty to perform to the directors, and in performing that duty he would always keep in mind the welfare of those under him, because he believed that both working together harmoniously would be for the best interests of all. He thanked Mr. Cook and Mr. Stratton for the kind words spoken of Mrs. Howson. They would always cherish the kind remembrance of them on the occasion of their marriage.

With cheers for Mr. Howson, the employees of the company, who had assembled for the occasion, dispersed.

The cabinet of silver bore the following inscription: "Presented to Mr. E. H. Howson by the Peterborough Lock Company and employees on the occasion of his marriage, February 28th, 1912."

The cabinet was procured from the Peterborough Hardware Company and contained two drawers, dinner and tea knives and forks, tea spoons and the other usual equipment that go to make the complete set.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-making qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use feed the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure lasting benefit.

WORK TO BE RUSHED

Work is to be rushed this spring on the big bridges of the Grand Trunk Pacific for the section of the line which follows the course of the Skeena River. The G.T.P. Steamer "Prince Rupert" left Vancouver last week with the advance guard of a large number of bridge and steel structural workers belonging to the Canadian Bridge Co. and a considerable quantity of material is to follow to Prince Rupert in the near future.

PETERBORO'S FAVOURITE SHOPPING PLACE

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

TO GO out into the world, and do something well enough to get paid for it, is often difficult. But it is likely to be very interesting and is seldom monotonous. To stay at home and keep a pleasant home for the farers-forth may be harder or easier — there is a difference of opinion about that — but it is almost always more monotonous.

Hence, it seems to me that it is the duty of those who go out of the home into the world each day, to try to bring back as much as they can to enliven the existence of those who stay at home.

Molly, the little stenographer lady, believes this with all her heart. And more than that, she lives it.

Long ago Molly made a little rule for herself about this matter. It was to try never to go home without asking something to the little mother. The result is that the little mother awaits Molly's homecoming, not only with the eagerness of a mother, but also with the anticipation of a child.

Understand me, I do not mean that the "something" is anything very large, or always something that costs money. Molly's slender salary has far too many home demands upon it to permit of that. Sometimes it is just a humorous story of happenings at the office that Molly brings home. Again it's some interesting piece of news about some mutual acquaintance, which will serve as a topic of conversation all through supper. When finances are low, and there is nothing else in sight, Molly make a business of visiting some source from which she can get such news, during her lunch hours. Again her offering is her mother's pet newspaper. Once a week she tries to bring home some good magazine. Five or ten cents' worth of her mother's favourite candy might seem like a very paltry offering to some, but to one whose pleasures are few, it is a welcome little diversion.

Saturday—pay day—is Molly's great day. Sometimes she brings home a whole pound of candy. But Molly's mother, although she appreciates this gift, thinks it means putting a good deal of money into something that will be gone in a day or two, so more often Molly brings home a less perishable offering. During her lunch hours, she often visits the shops "just to look around," and on these tours she watches for some nice little thing that can be bought to advantage, and picks it up on Saturday. In lean weeks it may be only a twelve and a half cent handkerchief "marked from twenty-five cents"; in fatter times it may be a pretty jabot or even the makings of a shirtwaist.

Twenty-five to fifty cents a week is Molly's financial investment. Infinite love and thoughtfulness and a tender sympathy for the monotony of her little mother's life are her legal capital. What wonder that her profits are beyond calculation.

If this little story makes you think, as it does me, I certainly do not need to add any moral or application.

MR. RITCHIE'S WORK WAS WONDERFULLY SUCCESSFUL WILL RETURN TO PETERBORO'

An exchange says.

The recent membership campaign of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce netted one thousand and seventy-five new members, making the present number twenty-eight hundred ad eighty-five, a gain of one thousand, two hundred and fifty-seven, since December 1st, when Ryerson Ritchie of Peterborough, took executive charge.

The internal organization of the new body ranks it among the more efficient Chambers of the country. It is closely modeled after the Chicago Association of Commerce, but its development will be distinctly local, and will differ in some important particulars. The executive control is vested in twenty-four directors. There are some twenty-five committees engaged in a wide range of commercial and public work. An Industrial Bureau will be established. The Convention Bureau has not yet been merged with the Chamber, but negotiations are in progress.

The various activities are grouped into departments, under men who were in the employ of the former institutions, as follows: Exchange, Finance and Business; Executive and Municipal; Foreign and National Affairs; Membership, Traffic Bureau, Washington Bureau; Municipal Inspection Bureau; Publicity; Information and Statistics and Maritime.

For three months, Ryerson Ritchie, as Executive Director, has been engaged in uniting the four once divided organizations and setting the internal machinery at work so as to coordinate the various activities and give he maximum efficiency. As soon as this was accomplished and the success of the membership campaign assured, Mr. Ritchie felt that the particular work which the directors asked him to undertake had been completed, and that all that was needed to insure success was a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together by the whole membership.

Mr. Ritchie received the warm commendation of the directors for his work as organizer. After a tour of the Pacific Slope he returned East, and will spend a large part of the summer at his "farm" near Peterborough, Ontario.

A Week's Remand Without Bail

For an alleged attempt to commit forgery with the aid of a certain document know as a check, which was drawn on the Bank of Montreal for three hundred dollars, and purporting to be signed by M. G. Robinson, J. H. Chamberlain and E. R. Winch, executrix of the Chamberlain estate, Reginald Winch was remanded for a week, without bail. This was done at the request of Crown Attorney Wood, who appeared for the prosecution. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared on behalf of the defendant.

Sandford Lindsay pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk in a public place. He resides near Norwood and was arrested this morning. A fine of two dollars was the sentence imposed by the court.

WAS IT W. A. B.?

The following letter to the Council must have been reminiscent to the Mayor and others. Mr. J. W. McCullough, Chief Health Officer of the Ontario Board of Health, stated that another complaint had been received at the office of the Board, to the effect that:

1. The Police Station is officially condemned every year.
2. The cells are wet and not drained properly.
3. The Chief Constable says "it is in an unsanitary condition, and unfit for use."
4. A man was found with his throat cut dead, in one of the cells recently.
5. The city puts its sewage into the river and poisons the whole Province.

The Council laughed at the letter, and Mayor Bradburn said: "Refer it to W. A. Bailey."

"THE ROBIN'S RETURN"

Although the thermometer registered two degrees below zero, and Mother Earth still slept undisturbed under her white pall as she has for months past, yet there was something that arrested the attention of a north-end resident as he left the house this morning, and caused him to wait with bated breath for a repetition of the sound—a sound that seemed to awaken memories of half forgotten days—when life was passed under other conditions than eternal snow and ice. Yes, there it was again! Unmistakable this time—the short, sharp note of the robin—not the sweet love song he sings to his mate in the long summer days, but the impatient, fretful note he gives when the first biting frost of early winter warns him to seek a warmer clime. To make assurance doubly sure, he was seen on the farthest tree in the orchard, and evoked a chorus of welcome from his admirers—"Hail, harbinger of spring, all hail!"

FIRST APPLICATION DARKENS THE HAIR

A Simple Remedy Gives Colour, Strength and Beauty to the Hair.

You don't have to have gray hair or faded hair if you don't want to. Why look old or unattractive? If your hair is gray or faded, you can change it easily, quickly and effectively by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. Apply a little to-night, and in the morning you will be agreeably surprised at the results from a single application. The gray hairs will be less conspicuous, and after a few more applications will be restored to natural colour.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur also quickly removes dandruff, leaves the scalp clean and healthy, and promotes the growth of hair. It is a clean wholesome dressing which may be used at any time with perfect safety.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist to-day, and see how quickly it will restore the youthful colour and beauty of your hair and forever end the nasty dandruff, hot, itchy scalp and falling hair. All druggists sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if you are not satisfied after fair trial.

AID SOCIETY FORMED FOR ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

At a meeting held on Thursday last at St. Joseph's Hospital an Aid Society for the Hospital was formed, with most encouraging prospects. The members have taken hold of the proposition with a great deal of enthusiasm and it is felt that the organization will be of great assistance to the Hospital. The following officers were elected:

Hon.-President—Mrs. Dunn.
President—Mrs. N. T. Laplante.
First Vice.-Pres.—Mrs. M. O'Brien
Second Vice-President—Mrs. (Dr.) Frederick.
Third Vice-President—Mrs. L. M. Hayes.
Secretary—Miss Margaret McGrath
Treasurer—Rev. Mother Superior.

There will be a meeting on Saturday afternoon at St. Alphonsus Lyceum at 3 o'clock.

THE RETURN OF GREAT PLAY

With Lillian Buckingham as the Star

No author or dramatist of the present day has been so prolific or uniformly successful as Cecil B. DeMille, co-author with Lillian Buckingham in "The Stampede," which will be seen here for a return engagement at the Grand on Saturday next, with Miss Buckingham as the star, supported by her own company. "The Warrens of Virginia," "The Genius" and "The Royal Mounted" are products of his versatile and diligent pen and now "The Stampede" is a fitting successor to his "Strongheart," called the American play. Miss Buckingham will be seen in the role of a half-breed Indian girl and the story is taken from the exposure of a vile conspiracy against the Witch Creek tribe of Indians, strongly suggesting the recent plot to deprive the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians out of valuable mineral concessions in Oklahoma. The production is complete in every essential and a vein of quiet wholesome comedy permeates the interesting story. Special arrangements have been made for the matinee whereby the seats on the entire lower floor will go at 50c. and the balcony at 35c. and 25c. Evening prices 35c., 50c., 75c. and $1.00. Gallery 25c.

PRESENTATION TO SMITH COUPLE

On Monday evening, March 4th, a large number of friends and neighbours assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Edmison, of Smith, the occasion being their coming departure from Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmison will be greatly missed among the host of friends whom they have won for themselves during the past twenty-five years. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present in games and music, and before concluding the chairman, Mr. F. Cann requested Mr. and Mrs. Edmison to come forward, when they were presented with a silver tea service by Mr. Albert Middleton, while the following address was read by Mrs. D. Mahood:

It is with feelings of regret that your many friends and neighbours have heard of the severance of your connection with us in our community. We have therefore assembled to spend a social evening together and also endeavour to show that respect which real worth is sure to command. During your residence among us, you have made many friends, to whom you were always ready to lend a helping hand. And we cannot let you depart without expressing in some tangible form the esteem in which you are regarded in the neighbourhood. As a memorial, we ask you to accept this silver tea service, trusting that it may be an emblem of pleasant associations in the past.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmison, our best wishes go with you to your new home, where we trust our Heavenly Father may spare you many years of health and happiness.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours,

GEORGE WALTON,
DAVID MAHOOD,

Mr. and Mrs. Edmison were taken completely by surprise, yet Mr. Edmison made a feeling reply and thanked their many friends whose kindly feelings towards them would always remain vivid in their memory.

A PROTEST

March 4th, 1912.

Sir,—Sure them lads at Mimico are not worse than us. Gee whiz, we make things hum if there is a dollar about. Say, we don't want the air blocked with trees at King Edward park; it stops us breathing and makes us blind. They should put the trees on the hills out side and put a well in the park.

Truly yours,
"TOMMY."

Daily Stock Quotations

Without apparently any difficulty, the market continued its strength, as shown yesterday. Foreign conditions seem not to influence the good American and Canadian stocks. General Electric opened this morning at 163 7-8 and by 12 o'clock was quoted at $165. This in addition to a 2 per cent. dividend, is equal to $167 per share, a rise of $6.00 per share in so many days.

C.P.R., after selling at 226 1-4 yesterday, opened at 226 this morning, and sold by noon at 226 5-8; also this stock carries a 2 1-2 per cent. dividend, thus the present price equals 231 1-8.

Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Union Pacific, Leigh Valley and Erie, were prominent among the railroads and United States Steel, G. E. Smelters and Asbestos amongst the industrials. Various opinions are expressed as to the immediate trend of the market's activity, but all seem to be of the one opinion, as to the ultimate higher prices for the long pull.

Hanging Up Wash.

For convenience sake when hanging up clothes, put the clothes pin in a basket with a handle to which are tied several metal snaps such as is used on hitch reins. When starting to hang up the clothes hang this fastener over the clothes line and push the basket along as you need to. This saves stooping and ensures having the pins at hand when you need them.

No matter how costly your dress or how perfectly it may be made, it will never hang correctly unless you have the New Corsets suitable for the New Dresses.

We have all the latest styles from 50c and up—But the better styles always give the best results.

NATIONALISTS DESERT GOV'T ON MANITOBA BOUNDARY VOTE

AMENDMENT DEFEATED

Ottawa, March 6.—There was a merry debate in the Commons that lasted most of yesterday, and it looks as if the schools question is again a live issue and means trouble for the Government. In the division on Sir Wilfrid's amendment to the boundaries settlement bill the Ministerial majority was 38.

Five Nationalists voted with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They were Dr. Paquet (L'Islet). A. Bellemare (Maskinonge), J. Guilbault (Joliette), Paul Lamarche (Nicolet), and Albert Sevigny (Dorchester). A. A. Mondou (Yamaska), did not vote and when challenged stated that he reserved his judgment until later in the debate.

The amendment of Sir Wilfrid Laurier which started the ball rolling was as follows: "That this bill be not now read a second time, but that it be resolved that while this House is favorable to the extension of the boundaries of the Province of Manitoba, it is of the opinion that the terms under which it is proposed to make the extension as set forth in this bill and in the order in council of February 20, 1912, are unfair and unjust both to the people of Manitoba and to the people of other provinces of the Dominion."

Sir Wilfrid, in opening, said that before the advent of the present Government, promises loud and many were made, that when the Conservatives came into power the Manitoba boundary dispute would be settled to the general satisfaction.

After perusing the present bill, he could only hope that the Government would not for the country's sake implement all their other promises in a similar manner. By it Manitoba received a certain amount of territory, but upon part of it was attached a stigma. She was given certain financial terms, which he did not object to because they were too generous, but because they were unfair and unjust to the other provinces.

After reading from the order-in-council, he asked: "Is this what they call equality and justice to Manitoba?"

Sir Wilfrid quoted further from the financial agreement, and then asked "is this a settlement? Can the Province of Ontario be satisfied with this?

"I know," he said, "the difficulty which confronted the Prime Minister in negotiating with Ontario and Manitoba. We gave them a well-defined and clear-cut boundary arrangement. We may have been right and we may have been wrong, but whether we were or not we were definite. The present agreement, though, is neither fair to one province or the other. I say, sir, that this agreement can be summed up in a very few words. It is a black eye to Manitoba and a gold brick to Ontario.

Sir Wilfrid then moved his amendment.

Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of the Interior, said he desired to be understood as supporting the bill because he found in it the principles of equity and of justice. Premier Borden had shown his determination to maintain the rights of Manitoba and to uphold the traditional policy of the Conservative party to maintain equal rights.

Touching on the schools question, he said: "I believe the people of the provinces will respect the rights of minorities and will do justice to all, and that the only natural and the proper thing for this House to do, either in the past or on this occasion, is to absolutely keep clear of the school questions and to leave them to the province for settlement and for the doing of any right that a minority can fairly claim. This act shows an advancement, a progress in our country in this respect that at last we have decided not to interfere in any way with a sovereign province in the matter of education.

The debate suddenly ceased with a dull thud. Division bells were rung, while the startled whips started scurrying in the members. There was tense feeling through both the House and the galleries when the members finally trooped in and the vote was called, for there was much speculation as to how many Nationalists would bolt.

Yeas were called and the five Nationalists stood up with the Opposition.

The galleries were crowded to the limit and there was scarcely an empty seat on the floor of the House in the evening when Mr. Lamarche rose at 8.20 to explain his position. Mr. Lamarche regretted having to break from his political friends, but he had made a pledge which he must keep. He calmly and dispassionately discussed the school question. The bill as it stood contained nothing objectionable, but there should be a clause protecting the rights of the minority. He argued the constitutional aspect of the case at length and claimed that they had the right to schools in the district.

Hon. F. D. Monk, who followed, said that he had always understood that the school question was settled in 1896. "I have always held that position," he added, "though I condemned the terms of that agreement." The Laurier settlement was, in the view of the minority, inadequate, but it was endorsed by Parliament, and by the electorate, and in view of the circumstances no power remained in the Dominion Government to deal with the injustice under which the minority suffered. He expressed the hope that Manitoba would relieve the minority of their disabilities.

Hon. Louis P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, asked why the Government should be reproached for giving to Manitoba what should have been given in 1905. For his part he would have been disposed to have considered the claim of Manitoba back to the time when the other provinces got their consideration.

"As to this school question," he said, "whatever the consequences may be for my future and myself, I am not going to play politics. Too long has this question been a football to be kicked by the party who wants to reach power."

Declines Representation.

Ottawa, March 6.—That the Province of Manitoba has no desire to be represented before the Supreme Privy Council on the ne temere case, is the tenor of the communication received by Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, yesterday, from the Provincial Government. The other provinces of the Dominion have already made application to the Minister for permission to be represented before the Privy Council when the stated case on the ne temere decree is to be pleaded, and it is understood that all the provinces have already selected their counsel except Manitoba, which has no wish to send counsel to London.

Ont. Should Get Rights

LOSES CONTROL OF T. & N.O.

Toronto, March 6.—Hanging fire since last Wednesday, the Ontario and Manitoba boundary discussion was resumed in the Legislature yesterday. J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex resumed the debate. He wanted to know if Ontario had the right to build the Government railway into the Province of Manitoba, and still retain control of it. He is of the opinion that the railway would pass under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Railway Board. "It means," said he, "that we get the port by giving up control of the Ontario Government railway and the whole matter apparently has been carried on without any knowledge of where this province is going to land."

The Speaker had ruled that nothing should be introduced in the discussion beyond what was contained in the original motion and the two amendments. Mr. Elliott, however, alluded to the financial end of the settlement, and Sir James interrupted, to say that as far as Ontario was concerned, there was no such thing as a financial end of it. Manitoba was the only province that secured money from the Federal Government, and Mr. Elliott w. trying to infer, apparently, that Ontario in some way had been related to a financial consideration.

Mr. Rowell interrupted that that was just his contention. He claimed that Manitoba had stepped in and secured a cash grant as well as the territory.

Sir James explained that the Legislature did not know anything about any such financial agreement. Referring to Mr. Rowell, he said, "he isn't frank enough to state that the financial arrangement was between Manitoba and the Dominion Government. There was not a word about Ontario. This province had no more to do with a financial arrangement than the kingdom of Morocco.

A. G. MacKay added to the discussion by making reference to financial arrangements that were made about the time of confederation.

"Well, it has come to the point that Ontario should assert her rights," said Mr. Elliott. "She has been the victim of neglect, and the time has come when we should not lay the blame on Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the present Prime Minister of the Dominion, or even the Prime Minister of this province; but we should sink our political differences in order that Ontario may get the rights to which she is entitled."

Mr. Elliott then moved an amendment regretting "that the Government has undertaken to deal with the division of 394,000 square miles of territory in Keewatin without consulting the Legislature; that the Government failed to realize the great importance of securing such an extension of the provincial boundary as would include her natural hinterland and a deep sea harbor on Hudson Bay, which would have enabled the provincial railway to be extended to tidewater; that the Government failed to properly and adequately present to the Government of Canada the claims of the province to the territory in question, and thereby seriously prejudiced Ontario's case, and led to the conclusion that the matter was regarded by the Government as being of minor importance to the province; that the Government, without securing the aid of the Legislature, admitted that this province 'had no legal right whatever,' and had consented to a division of the territory in question; that the order of the Governor-General-in-council of Feb. 20, 1912, providing for railway access to Port Nelson or Fort Churchill, by traversing lands within and subject to the jurisdiction of the Province of Manitoba, was entirely unsatisfactory; that the province would lose legislative control of its railway.

"It was the duty of the Government to prevent, if possible, a division of the territory in question, in accordance with the terms of the bill introduced in the House of Commons, and insist upon a division that will insure for Ontario the division of the largest possible portion of her natural hinterland and a deep sea harbor on Hudson Bay within her own territory. If the provincial railway was extended to Hudson Bay it would involve a cost of $10,000,000, which would mainly benefit the colonization of Manitoba. The alteration of the terms of the confederation compact, as outlined in the federal bill, without the consultation or assent of the other provinces, was a violation of the spirit of the British North America Act, and it is the duty of the Government of this province to protest against any alteration being made in the said financial terms without the consent of this province, and to demand that, if additional sums are granted by the Dominion of Canada to the Province of Manitoba, that this province should be treated on exactly the same basis."

With reference to Mr. Elliott's alarm that the Ontario Railway would not be under the jurisdiction of the Government on crossing the Manitoba boundary, Mr. T. H. Lennox (North York) said that that should surely satisfy Mr. Rowell, because that was one of his chief contentions during his campaign, that the T. & N. O. Railway should be under the control of the Dominion Railway Board. He said that the Liberal Government in 1882, would have been willing to give a 40,000 square miles of the present Ontario territory to Manitoba, and shut off Ontario from the remotest possibility of getting a port on Hudson Bay.

Motorman Was "Green"

Could Not Control Street Car on Dundas Grade, Toronto

PASSENGERS IN A PANIC

Toronto, March 6.—When an inexperienced motorman lost control of the brakes and his car thundered down the Dundas Bridge incline, jumped through an open switch and crashed into a slowly moving westbound car yesterday afternoon ten people were more or less seriously injured.

The victims are:

Mrs. Rosalene Hunns, 1,626 Dundas street; slight concussion, skull cracked.

David Mcgraw, 353 Berkley street; face crushed.

Running down grade at about forty miles an hour was the palace car in charge of Burns which jumped the switch. Before the collision occurred the passengers were aware of the danger on account of the speed. The women became panicky and hysterical and all crowded toward the rear of the car. There were only about twenty passengers in all. Along the level of the bridge the trolley was going at a fairly good rate. The moment it struck the gradual descent the speed accelerated. The green motorman, who was handling the controller, could do nothing to slacken it. Burns, standing alongside of him in the vestibule, realized the danger, shoved the novice out of the way and applied the emergency, but his efforts were futile. The novice opened the door of the vestibule and joined the passengers.

The power had been turned on leaving the bridge, and, when Burns applied the air brake and the emergency there was no response. A few yards ahead, at the corner of Lansdowne avenue and the foot of the bridge, the switch was wide open. A westbound car was just leaving the white post after discharging a number of passengers, and its nose just crossing the intersection.

When the eastbound car plunged through the switch it rammed the other car head-on and poked a huge dent in the front vestibule. The report of the concussion, the explosion of the compressed air tanks, the screams and yells of passengers and the crash of splintered wood could be heard for blocks. The trailer of the eastbound car was swung across both tracks and the westbound car itself was thrown partially on its side by the impact. Every window was smashed to bits.

William Vasey, motorman on the westbound, and Burns, were the most seriously injured. Both were penned in the wreckage in the vestibule. Burns was game. Buried almost to his shoulders and held fast by the flooring and steel, he waited for ten minutes, suffering intense agony, but emitting scarcely a moan, while men were extracting him.

Burns was reported as in a very precarious condition, with his chances of recovery very slight. Besides several broken ribs, his chest was crushed. The conductors on the cars were not badly hurt.

Dr. Reid's office, located a few yards away, was converted into a temporary hospital. Eight of the victims were taken there on being removed from the panic-stricken passengers, and given primary aid. Four were immediately hurried to the Western Hospital. Two women were hurried to the home of Dr. J. W. Russell on College street, and were attended to and then taken away, one to her home and the other, Mrs. Hunns, in an unconscious condition, to the hospital.

New Sights for Ross Rifles.

Ottawa, March 6.—The Dominion Rifle Association secretary expects in a few days to receive a new rifle sight for attachment to the Ross rifle, which will overcome the N.R.A. objections to the Canadians at Bisley. They are made by the Birmingham Small Arms Co. and approved by the N.R.A. The D.R.A. will have it tested before giving an opinion. It is said that the sight fits along the side of the barrel of the rifle, doing away with the objection to a sight on top.

TO RECONSTRUCT SCHOOL.

Mediaeval Instruments of Punishment To Go From Mimico.

Toronto, March 6.—Matters of general administration and constitution of the Mimico Industrial School largely occupied the attention of the second sitting of the commission of enquiry into charges of cruelty at that institution at the City Hall yesterday. A large number of listeners crowded into No. 1 committee room to hear the evidence. Most of them sat out the long session, which lasted from 2 o'clock till after 5 o'clock.

Remarks dropped by the commissioners and the trend of their questions to various witnesses, showed that plans of wide reconstruction are being considered. These showed that the parole system in use in Massachusetts, where the schools are done away and the boys apprenticed out is being considered, as is the plan separating mental deficients at their entry to the school. The question of a centralized control in the hands of the Government was also indicated, as was that of vastly increasing the usefulness of the teaching of trades. These matters and several others were shown to be in the minds of the commissioners by the trend of their questions.

One remark made by Dr. Bruce Smith indicated that the commission has determined that there shall be no more chains, no matter what form the reorganization shall take, and after the sitting, Supt. Ferrier declared that the handcuffs were gone never to return. The fate of the strap also, such straps as have been in use, appeared to be sealed.

Dr. Smith remarked that he did not think that after the investigation it would be necessary to formulate any rules concerning the use of handcuffs for there would be none.

British Army Rifle.

London, March 6.—The British soldiers' opinion of British weapons was quoted in the Commons yesterday, when, in defending an attack on the army's equipment, Col. Seely said our army was better armed than any continental army. In the South African war he rode a horse which was killed at 3,005 yards by a Mauser bullet. Our bullet, he believed, would kill at a little longer range.

In seven vital points in a rifle Britain had an overwhelming advantage, and two of these were most vital—rapidity and accuracy. In one point alone—trajectory—continental armies had an advantage; but any soldier would say, "Bother trajectory; give me the rifle that shoots straightest and fastest." That was what the British rifle did.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"And the detectives are still here?"

"I just saw one."

"George?"

Again his head came nearer.

"Have they searched the lobby? I believe she had a weapon."

"Laura!"

"I know it sounds foolish, but the alternative is so improbable. A family like that cannot be leagued together in a conspiracy to hide the truth concerning a matter so serious. To be sure, they may all be short-sighted, or so little given to observation that they didn't see what passed before their eyes. The boys look wide-awake enough, but who can tell? I would sooner believe that—"

I stopped short so suddenly that George looked startled. My attention had been caught by something new I saw in the mirror upon which my attention was fixed. A man was looking in from the corridor behind, at the four persons we were just discussing. He was watching them intently, and I thought I knew his face.

"What kind of a looking person was the man who took you outside last night?" I inquired of George, with my eyes still on this furtive watcher.

"A fellow to make you laugh. A perfect character, Laura; nose only homely but agreeable enough. I took quite a fancy to him. Why?"

"I am looking at him now."

"Very likely. He's deep in this affair. Just an everyday detective, but ambitious, I suppose, and quite alive to the importance of being thorough."

"He is watching those people. No, he isn't. How quickly he disappeared!"

"Yeas, he's mercurial in all his movements. Laura, we must get out of this. There happens to be something else in the world for me to do than to sit around and follow up murder clews."

But we began to doubt if others agreed with him, when on passing out we were stopped in the lobby by this same detective, who had something to say to George, and drew him quickly aside.

"What does he want?" I asked, as soon as George had returned to my side.

"He wants me to stand ready to obey any summons the police may send me."

"Then they still suspect Brotherson?"

"They must."

My head rose a trifle as I glanced up at George.

"Then we are not altogether out of it?" I emphasized, complacently.

He smiled—which hardly seemed a propos. Why does George sometimes smile when I am in my most serious moods.

As we stepped out of the hotel, George gave my arm a quiet pinch which served to direct my attention to an elderly gentleman who was just alighting from a taxicab at the kerb. He moved heavily and with some appearance of pain, but from the crowd collected on the sidewalk, many of whom nudged each other as he passed, he was evidently a person of some importance, and as he disappeared within the hotel entrance, I asked George who this kind-faced, bright-eyed old gentleman could be.

He appeared to know, for he told me at once that he was Detective Gryce; a man who had grown old in solving just such baffling problems as these.

"He gave up work some time ago, I have been told," my husband went on; "but evidently a great case still has its allurement for him. The trail here must be a very blind one for them to call him in. I wish we had not left so soon. It would have been quite an experience to see him at work."

"I doubt if you would have been given the opportunity. I noticed that we were slightly de trop towards the last."

"I wouldn't have minded that; not on my own account, that is. It might not have been pleasant for you. However, the office is waiting. Come, let me put you on the car."

That night I bided his coming with an impatience I could not control. He was late, of course, but when he did appear, I almost forgot our usual greeting in my hurry to ask him if he had seen the evening papers.

"No," he grumbled, as he hung up his overcoat. "Ben pushed about all day. No time for anything."

"Then let me tell you—"

But he would have dinner first.

However, a little later we had a comfortable chat. Mr. Gryce had made a discovery, and the papers were full of it. It was one which gave me a small triumph over George. The suggestion he had laughed at was not so entirely foolish as he had been pleased to consider it. But let me tell the story of that day, without any further reference to myself.

The opinion had become quite general with those best acquainted with the details of this affair, that the mystery was one of those abnormal ones for which no solution would ever be found, when the aged detective showed himself in the building and was taken to the room, where an Inspector of Police awaited him. Their greeting was cordial, and the lines on the latter's face relaxed a little as he met the still bright eye of the man upon whose instinct and judgment so much reliance had always been placed.

"This is very good of you," he began, glancing down at the aged detective's bundled up legs, and gently pushing a chair towards him. "I know that it was a great deal to ask, but we're at our wits' end, and so I telephoned. It's the most inexplicable —There! you have heard that phrase before. But clews — there are absolutely none. That is, we have not been able to find any. Perhaps you can. At least, that is what we hope. I've known you more than once to succeed where others have failed."

The elderly man thus addressed, glanced down at his legs, now propped up on a stool which someone had brought him, and smiled, with the pathos of the old who sees the interests of a lifetime slipping gradually away.

"I am not what I was. I can no longer get down on my hands and knees to pick up threads from the nap of a rug, or spy out a spot of blood in the crimson woof of a carpet."

"You shall have Sweetwater here to do the active work for you. What we want of you is the directing mind —the infallible instinct. It's a case in a thousand, Gryce. We've never had anything just like it. You've never had anything at all like it. It will make you young again."

The old man's eyes shot fire and unconsciously one foot slipped to the floor. Then he bethought himself and painfully lifted it back again.

"What are the points? What's the difficulty?" he asked. "A woman has been shot—"

"No, not shot, stabbed. We thought she had been shot, for that was intelligible and involved no impossibilities. But Drs. Heath and Webster, under the eye of the Chanoners' own physician, have made an examination of the wound—an official one, thorough and quite final so far as they are concerned, and they declare that no bullet is to be found in the body. As the wound extends no further than the heart, this settles one great point, at least."

"Dr. Heath is a reliable man and one of our ablest coroners."

"Yes. There can be no question as to the truth of his report. You know the victim? Her name, I mean, and the character she bore?"

"Yes; so much was told me on my way down."

"A fine girl unspoiled by riches and seeming independence. Happy, too, to all appearance, or we should be more ready to consider the possibility of suicide."

"Suicide by stabbing calls for a weapon. Yet none has been found, I hear."

"None."

"Yet she was killed that way?"

"Undoubtedly, and by a long and very narrow blade, larger than a needle but not so large as the ordinary stiletto."

"Stabbed while by herself, or what you may call by herself? She had no companion near her?"

"None, if we can believe the four members of the Parrish family, who were seated at the other end of the room."

"And you do believe them?"

"Would a whole family lie—and needlessly? They never knew the woman—father, maiden aunt and two boys, clear-eyed, jolly young chaps whom even the horror of this tragedy, perpetrated as it were under their very nose, cannot make serious for more than a passing moment."

"It wouldn't seem so."

"Yet they swear up and down that nobody crossed the room towards Miss Challoner."

"So they tell me."

to me."

"She fell just a few feet from the desk where she had been writing. No word, no cry, just a collapse and sudden fall. In olden days they would have said, struck by a bolt from heaven. But it was a bolt which drew blood; not much blood, I hear, but sufficient to end life almost instantly. She never looked up or spoke again. What do you make of it, Gryce?"

"It's a tough one, and I'm not ready to venture an opinion yet. I should like to see the desk you speak of, and the spot where she fell."

A young fellow who had been hovering in the background at once stepped forward. He was the plain-faced detective who had spoken to George.

"Will you take my arm, sir?"

Mr. Gryce's whole face brightened. This Sweetwater, as they called him, was, I have since understood, one of his proteges and more or less of a favourite.

"Have you had a chance at this thing?" he asked. "Been over the ground—studied the affair carefully?"

"Yes, sir; they were good enough to allow it."

"Very well, then, you're in a position to pioneer me. You've seen it all and won't be in a hurry."

"No; I'm at the end of my rope. I haven't an idea, sir."

"Well, well, that's honest at all events." Then, as he slowly rose with the other's careful assistance, "There's no crime without its clew. The thing is to recognise that clew when seen. But I'm in no position to make promises. Old days don't return for the asking."

Nevertheless, he looked ten years younger than when he came in, or so thought those who knew him.

The mezzanine was guarded from all visitors save such as had official sanction. Consequently, the two remained quite uninterrupted while they moved about the place in quiet consultation. Others had preceded them; had examined the plain little desk and found nothing; had paced off the distances; had looked with longing and inquiring eyes at the elevator cage and the open archway leading to the little staircase and the musicians' gallery. But this was nothing to the old detective. The locale was what he wanted, and he got it. Whether he got anything else it would be impossible to say from his manner as he finally sank into a chair by one of the openings, and looked down on the lobby below. It was full of people coming and going on all sorts of business, and presently he drew back, and, leaning on Sweetwater's arm, asked him a few questions.

"Who were the first to rush in here after the Parrishes gave the alarm?"

"One or two of the musicians from the end of the hall. They had just finished their programme and were preparing to leave the gallery. Naturally they reached her first."

"Good! their names?"

"And who followed them? Who came next on the scene?"

"Some people from the lobby. They heard the disturbance and rushed up pell-mell. But not one of these touched her. Later her father came."

"Who did touch her? Anybody, before the father came in?"

"Yes; Miss Clarke, the middle-aged lady with the Parrishes. She had run towards Miss Challoner as soon as she heard her fall, and was sitting there with the dead girl's head in her lap when the musicians showed themselves."

"I suppose she has been carefully questioned?"

"Very, I should say."

"And she speaks of no weapon?"

"No. Neither she nor any else at that moment suspected murder or even a violent death. All thought it a natural one—sudden, but the result of some secret disease."

"Father and all?"

"Yes."

"But the blood? Surely there must have been some show of blood?"

"They say not. No one noticed any. Not till the doctor came—her doctor who was happily in his office in this very building. He saw the drops, and uttered the first suggestion of murder."

"How long after was this? Is there any one who has ventured to make an estimate of the number of minutes which elapsed from the time she fell, to the moment when the doctor first raised the cry of murder?"

"Yes. Mr. Slater, the assistant manager, who was in the lobby at the time, says that ten minutes at least must have elapsed."

"Ten minutes and no blood! The weapon must still have been there. Some weapon with a short and inconspicuous handle. I think they said there were flowers over and around the place where it struck?"

"Yes, great big scarlet ones. Nobody noticed—nobody looked. A panic like that seems to paralyse people."

"Ten minutes! I must see every one who approached her during those ten minutes. Every one, Sweetwater, and I must myself talk with Miss Clarke."

"You will like her. You will believe every word she says."

"No doubt. All the more reason why I must see her. Sweetwater, someone drew that weapon out. Effects still have their causes, notwithstanding the new cult. The question is who? We must leave no stone unturned to find that out."

"The stones have all been turned over once."

"By you?"

"Not altogether by me."

"Then they will bear being turned over again. I want to be witness of the operation."

"Where will you see Miss Clarke?"

"I think I know the place. You shall have the use of this elevator. It has not been running since last night or it would be full of curious people all the time, hustling to get a glimpse of this place. But they'll put a man on for you."

"Very good; manage it as you will. I'll wait here till you're ready. Explain yourself to the lady. Tell her I'm an old and rheumatic invalid who has been used to asking his own questions. I'll not trouble her much. But there is one point she must make clear."

Sweetwater did not presume to ask what point, but he hoped to be fully enlightened when the time came.

And he was. Mr. Gryce had undertaken to educate him for this work, and never missed the opportunity of giving him a lesson. The three met in a private sitting-room on an upper floor, the detectives entering first and the lady coming in soon after.

As her quiet figure appeared in the doorway, Sweetwater stole a glance at Mr. Gryce. He was not looking her way, of course; he never looked directly at anybody; but he formed his impressions for all that, and Sweetwater was anxious to make sure of these impressions. There was no doubting them in this instance. Miss Clarke was not a woman to rouse an unfavourable opinion in any man's mind. Of slight, almost frail build, she had that peculiar animation which goes with a speaking eye and a widely sympathetic nature. Without any substantial claims to beauty, her expression was so womanly and so sweet that she was invariably called lovely.

Mr. Gryce was engaged at the moment in shifting his cane from the right hand to the left, but his manner was never more encouraging or his smile more benevolent.

"Pardon me," he apologised, with one of his old-fashioned bows, "I'm sorry to trouble you after all the distress you must have been under this morning. But there is something I wish especially to ask you in regard to the dreadful occurrence in which you played so kind a part. You were the first to reach the prostrate woman, I believe."

"Yes. The boys jumped up and ran towards her, but they were frightened by her looks and left it for me to put my hands under her and try to lift her up."

"Did you manage it?"

"And sat so?"

"For some little time. That is, it seemed long, though I believe it was not more than a minute before two men came running from the musicians' gallery. One thinks so fast at such a time—and feels so much."

"You knew she was dead, then?"

"I felt her to be so."

"How felt?"

"I was sure — I never questioned it."

"You have seen women in a faint?"

"Yes, many times."

"What made the difference? Why should you believe Miss Challoner dead simply because she lay still and apparently lifeless?"

"I cannot tell you. Possibly, death tells its own story. I only know how I felt."

"Perhaps there was another reason? Perhaps, that, consciously or unconsciously, you laid your palm upon her heart?"

"Did I?" she queried, musingly. Then with a sudden access of feeling, "I may have done so, indeed, I believe I did. My arms were around her; it would not have been an unnatural action."

Kidney Pains in the Back

Could Not Stand or Even Turn in Bed —Legs Greatly Swollen

All Doctor's Medicine Failed—Cure Effected by Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Again this great medicine has triumphed over kidney disease of a severe type. From a bed of suffering and helplessness Mrs. Walsh was restored to health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Kidney pains in the back tortured her. Dropsical swellings had set in and she had no reason to hope for cure since the doctor's medicine failed to even relieve her. Read what the husband says about this remarkable cure.

Mr. Thos. D. Walsh, Pictou, N.S., writes: "Two years ago my wife took to her bed after suffering for a long time from kidney pains in the back. She was not able to stand on her feet or even turn herself in bed. The doctor's medicine was no benefit whatever, that we could see. Sometimes her legs would swell considerably. Reading about a woman in similar condition being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we purchased two boxes, ad when these were used she was able to sit up. With three more boxes she was restored to health and doing her own housework.

"As for myself I also found these pills all that is claimed for them. I give this statement in order that others may obtain the same ease from suffering as that experienced by my wife and myself."

One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN TWENTY HAS A STRONG BACK.

THE KIDNEYS ARE TO BLAME NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The poisons that ought to be carried off are sent back into the blood, taking with them a multitude of aches and pains. There is no use of expecting relief until the kidneys are restored to health.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the quickest and most reliable remedy. Mrs. Ed. Baxter, Upham, N.B., writes:—"I take a good deal of pleasure in telling you what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I was troubled with my kidneys for a number of years, and my back was so lame I could not sweep the floor. A friend of mine advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and after using three boxes I am as well as ever. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from lame back or kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WHO WILL WED PRINCE EDWARD?

Gossips Are Already Busy Picking Out a Wife for the Prince of Wales

Society gossips in England are busy speculating as to who is to be the future Queen of England. There are, for instance, two princesses born in the same year 1894, as the Prince of Wales. They are the Princess Caroline of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg, who is the youngest sister of the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg, the daughter-in-law of the Duchess of Albany; and the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania, whose mother is also a Saxe-Coburg. Of the following year there are the Princess Marie, the only daughter of Prince Rudolf Lippe, or her cousin, Princess Calixta, a daughter of Prince Frederick William, who was born at Botsdam. There are also the Grand Duchess Olga, the Emperor Nicholas's eldest girl; and the Princess, Irene, the eldest daughter of the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia. In the next year, there is the Princess Helene of Greece the Duke of Sparta's charming daughter; and in the following year again one might mention the Czar's second daughter, Tatiana, or the Princess Calixta of Lippe's younger sister, Eleanor, or Princess Marie of Schaumburg-Lippe, whose mother was a Danish Princess, who by the way several times, before she died, tried to commit suicide, because she found life with her husband unbearable. If we turn to 1908 we have the Princess Marie of Anhalt, a niece of Prince Arcoost, an Nadejda, a younger daughter of the Grand Duke Peter of Russia. If his Royal Highness should decide to defer his marriage until a year later, and to choose from among still younger Princesses, there are the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, the Princess Marie of Roumania—five years the junior of her sister, Elizabeth, or Louise, the youngest daughter of Prince Frederick of Saxe-Meiningen, or Duke Ernest of Saxe-Altenburg's eldest daughter, Charlotte, or the Duchess of Albany's niece, Princess Helenan of Waldeck-Pyrmont, or Princess Margaret, the eldest of Prince Oscar of Sweden's three daughters, who is therefore a cousin by marriage of her namesake, the Crown Princess of Sweden.

WAIST LINES DESCEND

It is Gradually Returning to the Primary Position

Gradually, inexorably, the waist line is descending to its primary position. A bond street corsetiere declares that whatever the divergence of opinion on other points of the forthcoming fashions, there could be none with regard to the position of the waist line as exemplified in the new curve.

"We are abandoning the straight, flat, high-waisted figures, which have been a subject of so much contention, for a more natural shape, she said. "This will be free alike from the excruciating aspect of the so-called wasp waist, and from the woodeness of the geometrical figure. The new corset is long and high, the extension in length being chiefly upwards, and this tends to the elimination of the entirely flat figure. The waist line is almost normal, and the remainder of the figure straight, except a slight curve at the back. There is no cause for alarm, however, as this is not the herald of the much dreaded bustle. Indeed, it is unlikely that we shall every return to such absolute distortion of the human form, as modern corset designers have in view the comfort and ease of the wearer as well as graceful outline."

Electricity to Replace Waiters.

A new hotel in Paris is going to try the experiment of having all the service performed by electrical devices, which will almost replace the domestic servants. The dining-room is fitted with the ingenious electric table to which everything is sent up from below, the dishes running around the table and stopping before each person, then disappearing again when no longer wanted. A periscope such as is used on a submarine makes the table visible from the kitchen underneath, and orders are given by loud-speaking telephone without leaving the table. Both telephone and periscope are concealed in the chandelier. The new hotel is to contain many special devices of the kind.

FACE WAS LITERALLY COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

Four Different Doctors Did Her No Good.

Two Bottles of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS Cured Her.

Bad blood is directly the cause of the face breaking out in pimples, and it is impossible to eradicate them unless you put your blood into good shape

Burdock Blood Bitters is compounded from roots, herbs, barks and berries, and is without a doubt the best remedy procurable for the purpose of driving all the blood impurities out of the system.

Mr. Geo. E. Miller, Clavering, Ont., writes:—"Last fall I was very much troubled with pimples. My face was literally covered with them. I went to four different doctors, but they could do me no good. One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got two bottles, and before I had taken all the first one, the pimples had nearly all disappeared, and by the time I had taken all the second one the pimples had disappeared completely, thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I would advise anybody who is troubled with any blood trouble to use Burdock Blood Bitters.

THE QUEEN OF SPAIN

One of the Pleasures of Her Life is the Care of Her Children.

If young King Alfonso of Spain succeeds in escaping the revolutionary wave that at intervals threatens his throne it will be largely due to the domestic virtues of his wife. Every woman loves a motherly mother, more especially when she is a youthful and handsome Queen, and the young Queen's loving care of her babies is a continual source of pleasure and edification to the whole of the female portion of the population of Spain.

Queen Victoria has set at defiance all the hidebound traditions that hitherto hampered the acts of Royalty and more especially the acts of Spanish Queens. She has discovered that it is one of the pleasures of life to nurse her own children, and she takes the greatest pride in the fact that she cares for them herself. Quite recently she was photographed in the gardens of the palace of La Granja, pushing the babies in their perambulators, fondling them on her knee, and performing other little motherly acts.

The young Queen bathes her babies with her own hands. As every Canadian mother knows, this is a most important feature in the modern science of baby culture. It is said, too, that she has become quite an expert in the art. The Queen has plenty of attendants to help her in her task, but the important fact to remember is that she does the actual bathing herself.

Court etiquette and Spanish indolence in the past have consigned the care of royal children entirely to others. Probably this is why the Spanish Royal children shown in old paintings look lifeless and hopeless. It was an historical custom to engage as nurse a peasant women from Catalonia, a dark, husky person in a very picturesque national costume, who was entirely ignorant of hygiene, cleanliness, and the care of a baby. The Queen resolutely refused to turn her babies over to this character, and compromised with the ancient custom by giving a full set of new clothes to one of the peasant candidates for the position. Thus has a modern Princess broken down once and for all the hidebound traditions of one of the most conservative countries on the continent.

The three-year-old little Spanish Prince, Don Jaime, returned to his fond mother's arms, after a three month's stay in Switzerland under the care of Dr. Henri Raymond, the Swiss specialist, who operated on the young prince for throat and ear trouble. The little Prince's hearing and speech are much improved, and the pains in his head have disappeared, though he is not entirely cured. But the net and happy results is that Don Jaime is not dumb, and that he can now lisp his mother's name, to her intense joy. Meanwhile, the Prince of the Asturias and his little sister Princess Beatrice, are thriving and romping like ordinary children.

A KAISER CELEBRATION

Great Pomp to Mark the Twenty-fifth Year of His Reign.

Preliminary arrangements indicate that the celebration in 1913 of the twenty-fifth year of the Kaiser Wilhelm's reign will be marked by much pomp and circumstance. The most ambitious project yet advanced contemplates the organization of a great art exhibition to be held during that year in Berlin. The Kaiser's well-known interest and activity in art matters, it is said, makes such a plan especially fitting. There are difficulties in the way, however, for the only exhibition hall large enough for the purpose is unsatisfactory in many respects. The authors of the plan, however, are not to be deterred by this consideration and are working for the erection of a magnificent new art palace, which will thus become a permanent memorial to the Kaiser. How the project will be received by German artists, who are by no means united in their views as to the effect of the Kaiser's activity in art matters, is yet to be determined.

ARE COMPOSERS SHORT-LIVED?

Many of Them Have Been Afflicted with Great Infirmities

This question naturally arises when considering the short lives of many of the masters of music of the days gone by. It is somewhat striking also to note that a number of these great musicians were afflicted with physical infirmities.

Mozart, who lived only to the age of thirty-five, died of consumption. Schumann, who died at the age of forty-six, was for some years before his death confined in an asylum.

Beethoven reached the age of fifty-seven, but that would perhaps be considered a long life in these days, when a man is too old at forty! For many years previous to his death this great man of music was quite deaf. Mendelssohn died at the age of thirty-six, Schubert at thirty-one, Weber at forty, Chopin at forty, Purcell at thirty-seven, Bellini at thirty-three. There are, of course, a few exceptions. Bach, Haydn and Handel all outlived their three score years and ten. The latter, however, was for some years totally blind.

But still, when looking at these ages generally, one may well ask the question—are musicians short-lived? If the short lives of these great masters of the years gone by bear any weight on the subject, it is certain that they are.

WONDERFUL HEROISM

Never Saw Such Heroism as in a Colliery Disaster

"Thomas Stoke, hero."

Roughly written in chalk, this simple tribute appeared on the mortuary shell containing the body of one of the four victims of the Cannock Chase Colliery explosion, which were brought up from the old Hednesford pit. Mr. George Lowery, manager of the East Cannock Colliery, said: "I have never seen such heroism in my life. Deeds have been done which I shall never forget. Men took their lives in their hands in their keen desire to get to the missing men."

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing rats, which is due entirely to this new discovery.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. McDermid and Jury, your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Peterborough, and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

NAVAL AVIATION

France is Taking a Forward Step in That Direction

Following on the initiative taken by M. Millerand, who, after consultation with the leading officers of the staff and the directors of his department decided to ask Parliament for nearly $5,000,000 to be devoted to military aviation. M. Delcasse, Minister of Marine, is now seeing what can be done for the organization of a service of naval aviation. Captain Daveluy has, in conformity with his instructions, devoted several weeks to the drawing up of an elaborate plan and the heads of the central naval administration, under the President of the chief of the General Staff of the navy for the purpose of examining this scheme. It is pointed out that while several other navies have already devoted special attention to aviation, it has been somewhat neglected in France, and it is argued that no time is to be lost, the more so as "eclaireurs" are not included in the naval programme which has been submitted to the Chamber, so that if squadrons of battleships are not to be absolutely blind, they must be provided with groups of aeroplanes. As a matter of fact, Captain Daveluy calculates that a good deal can be done at the modest expenditure of $200,000, and no doubt is entertained that this sum will be voted by Parliament without the faintest opposition or criticism.

NOVEL UMBRELLA

Brink Designed so That it Will Cover Biggest Hat.

With the big hats that have been in vogue for several years, women have had difficulty in protecting their headgear from the rain. In the first place, a woman's umbrella is of lesser circumference than a man's and in the second place she can only get half of it over her head, as the hat brim keeps the central staff at a distance. A Pennsylvania man has designed an umbrella that will cover the biggest "merry widow" ever built. Instead of one straight stick the staff is in two sections that are connected by links pivoted to each. When the umbrella is closed these links fold up parallel to the stick, but when it is open they hold the cover some six or eight inches to one side of the handle and can be locked into that position. Thus, a woman's hat brim may strike the lower section of the staff, but the upper section sets in over her head and completely covers her.

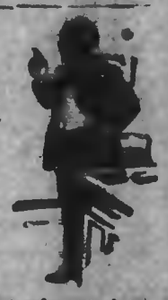
Strong Healthy Women



If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge those who want "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

HARRIS HEAVY PRESSURE is true to its reputation as the Best Babbitt Metal for all general machinery bearings.

CONSERVING DYNAMIC ENERGY

Mental and Physical Force That Is Wasted Through Ignorance Would Move the World

THE world thinks that it moves along its way without loss of energy! It does not realise that the human aggregation wastes more force in foot pounds total than would be sufficient to drive all the battle ships of nations; that the unnecessary energy expended by man, woman and child would more than actuate every dynamo, every electric light station, all systems of railroads, all motive control.

Men hurry along, forgetting in their mad rush that they are wasting a tremendous amount of physical strength.

Mr. T. H Brigg, who is one of the world's greatest exponents of dynamic, mechanical and physiological economy, says:—"I always have been interested in mechanics, their application to human life and to the results that might be obtained by the simple introduction of certain mechanical principles. In how far they might or might not be carried out is not for me to say. Suffice it, then, to estimate as nearly as I can the great waste of energy, not only in so far as mankind is concerned, but with reference to horses and draught animals of any kind.

"The normal man in walking starts from a vertical position, and in the act of walking he relaxes the forward part of the muscles of his forward foot; he raises the other so that it shall be in readiness to alight on the ground so as to prevent the man's body from falling.

"Were it not for the expenditure of energy by the rear foot, that raises the body again over the centre of movements, a fall would result. Why? Because the act of walking is nothing but a series of intercepted falls, and the foot that is on the ground is the point of gravity about which the body rotates.

"Now, then, the waste of force is more strongly shown in this instance than elsewhere for the reason that four-fifths of the people of the world take longer strides than are necessary."

Mr. Brigg, carrying out his theory, said that a man walking at the rate of four miles an hour expended a retarding energy of double his own weight, this ratio being variable directly to the gait of the man.

In Figure 1 the triangle formed by the lines A-B, B-C and C-A represent a normal stride, but the instant that a man lengthens his step he increases the absolute work that he does by several hundred per cent. That is to say, for every inch that the pedestrian takes beyond his average step the retardation of the ground tends to thrust him backward far beyond his ordinary strength.

So if the line from the perpendicular A-C is lengthened to B¹ the pedestrian is not only decreasing his strength but decreasing his endurance.

Mr. Brigg went on to say that "all things being equal, the totality of the sums of angles are equal, and we know that the sum of any two sides of a triangle is greater than the third side."

In Figure 2 it is apparent that a horse never lengthens his step under normal conditions and that the ratio of its energy is proportionate to its weight.

"Retarding Energy."

When asked about the term "retarding energy" Mr. Brigg said:—"By that I mean the placing of a human being's foot, or of an animal's foot if you like, before the other, so as to check the body and prevent a fall. The vertical line drawn from the horizontal at that moment and a line drawn thence from the centre of gravity to the ground at the point of contact with the advanced foot, completing the triangle, give you a complete designation of the forces exerted."

"What happens if one steps on an orange peel?" was asked.

"The coefficient of friction is then so greatly reduced that the upward thrust of the sidewalk is reduced to a minimum, and a vast amount of energy is wasted in trying to recover that which the inhibitive muscular instinct demands.

"It must be understood," Mr. Brigg continued, "that whatever force is exerted against an inanimate object reverts directly on the person who exerts it. Much more so than is necessary, I admit."

"Why?"

"For the reason that the human body does not permit of gradations of innocular sense. When one goes into a dark, strange room one attempts to feel one's way about—usually with dire results. Why is it that chairs are to hard and tables so immovable to various portions of one's body? Simply because the body moves forward with a far greater expenditure of energy than is necessary and the result is a heavier or lighter blow, depending on the weight of the inanimate object."

To the question, "What manner of men waste more energy than others?" Mr. Brigg said:—

"Undoubtedly porters, longshoremen, in fact any who transport or who are the means whereby loads are moved from one place to another. Why, the loss of energy, the sheer waste of it in this class alone would be equal to countless horse-power in any branch of properly applied mechanics. Take the case of a nursery maid. Would she rather carry a child or push it before her in a perambulator or walk without either? You say, 'Walk without either,' but you are wrong. She would far rather push the perambulator, for the simple reason that by so doing she saves herself to the extent of the weight that she bears on its handle bars. We will say that she leans twenty pounds of her weight on them; she then reduces her expenditure of energy by forty pounds a stride, which in a two-mile walk amounts to a very large weight.

Doing Things Wrong Way.

"Yes," Mr. Brigg said, "the conservation of energy lies solely in the application of mechanically perfect angles. So vast an amount of human strength is expended in trying to do things in the wrong way—or in not caring how they are done—that the waste of the world at large is phenomenal.

"In Figure E the model of a man is shown conserving energy. The average porter leans forward to start a pull, thus throwing all the weight on his back hip muscles instead of on his left leg, biceps and chest. The rear foot in the figure is relaxed, the whole upper body being devoted to the task in hand. But how many know how to do this? Very few."

From many examples that were shown by Mr. Brigg it is evident that the tendency of the workingman is to misplace his load and by so doing to amplify largely that which under scientific methods he could do with a great percentage of ease.

If then a calculation should be made as to the energy that is wasted in the city of New York by the work-a-day world, it would seem that the sum total would doubtless be sufficient to do many more things than those mentioned by Mr. Brigg.

When it is indubitably a fact that the energy exerted by a horse in leaping a five foot gate is only equalled by the energy that is expended by a sufficient number of men that can throw the horse's body a like height and distance, and that were it possible to place the horse's body in a cannon the powder that would be necessary to blow it over the fence would send a projectile many miles from Sandy Hook, it will be realised that there are more than the fabular "thousand and one" ways in which forces are expended that the world little dreams of.

Were a regiment of men required to keep step over any appreciable distance the loss of energy that would be exerted by the short man in trying to equal his stride to that of a taller one would equal millions of pounds per hour. In a like case were a regiment to keep step while crossing a long bridge it would swing horizontally, not vertically, for the reason that ten per cent of the thrust of a man's step is from right to left and then from left to right, so that the bridge, taking up the waste, swings, or has the tendency to swing, from side to side.

The Indian, toeing in as he does, is very saving of his forces, and this is particularly noticeable if one follows his trail in snow.

"Does a bicycle waste or conserve energy when compared to either walking or riding on a horse?"

"You will see in diagram A," Mr. Brigg answered, producing it from a portfolio, "that the work done in either walking or running is far greater than that dissipated when on wheels, for the reason that a bicycle continues along an even plane, or nearly so, whereas in walking the body has to adjust itself to a quick succession of almost falls, and therefore expends greater energy. When riding on a horse the body merely sustains the check of the animal's stride, but in this case there is a great force waste, for the reason that the rider attempts to preconceive the length of the horse's stride. Naturally it follows that once the motor cells of the brain are actuated, the body—in a normal person—responds within an almost inappreciable difference in time, and the reason is that, no matter how good the rider, is wasting not only physical but mental forces."

Mental Energy Wasted.

"Do you then believe that there is a waste of mental energy?"

Mr. Brigg hesitated. "That is a difficult question to answer for it cannot be put down in black and white in so far as figures are concerned, but I may say that the normal being wastes a vast amount in motorial cells. And this waste arises from three causes:—

"First—The lack of inception as to that which he had originally intended to do;

"Second—The fact that he allowed his original object to be lost by a crossing thought; and,

"Third—That his motorial cells are therefore actuated by so diverse a number of impulses of the brain that they are unable to segregate without a distinct effort.

"This is easily proven. Supposing a man seated at a table in a restaurant; a glass of a liquid is before him; he is thirsty; his motor cells obey the first impulse of his brain and his hand starts. His cuff, catches a fork. Instantly the motor cells are decalibrated because their original intention is crossed by another impulse, which is to seize the object that was disturbed. Had the man's hand continued to the glass there would have been a waste of mental energy, but" Mr. Brigg laughed, "that would not have been human nature!

"No, we expend, I should say, about quadrillions of tons per hour in wasted mental energy.

"A mental loss—you may ask yourself!

STEALING FROM DORE.

WHILE Gustave Doré was at Ischl wandering about the mountains he became much interested in a country building and sketched it on the spot. He put the sketch in a book in the pocket of his coat and went back to the hotel to dinner. After dinner he looked for the sketch—it was gone.

Angry at the theft, the artist called the landlord and made complaint, but no trace of the book was found. From Ischl Doré went to Vienna, and there he found a letter and a parcel awaiting him. The letter, which was anonymous, read thus:

"Sir:—I stole your book at Ischl. The sketch was so charming that I could not resist the temptation of having it in my possession, and I knew very well that you would never consent to sell to me. My theft is neither my trade nor my habit, and I beg you to accept as a souvenir of my crime and my enthusiasm for your talent the walking stick which will reach you at the same time as this letter."

The cane was a massive one with a gold head, in which was set a gem of value.

On another occasion the artist lost his passport while on a tour in Switzerland. At Lucerne he asked to be allowed to speak to the Mayor, to whom he gave his name.

"You say that you are Monsieur Gustave Doré, and I believe you," said the Mayor, "but," and he produced a piece of paper and a pencil, "you can easily prove it."

Doré looked around him and saw some peasants selling potatoes in the street. With a few clever touches he reproduced the homely scene and, appending his name to the sketch, gave it to the Mayor.

"Your passport is all right," remarked the official, "but you must allow me to keep it and to offer you in return one of the ordinary form."

IT would at least be thought that the affections called sore throats—that is, the swelling, tenderness, heat and redness of the back of the throat and of the tonsils which occurs so often in the winter time—would be due directly to cold. Ordinarily it is thought that the impact of cold air upon the back of the throat when breathing deeply must bring about these symptoms of inflammation. We know now, however, that the presence of bacteria of various kinds makes more than anything else for sore throats. It has been found that those who work in infectious material of various kinds, or who breathe in much sewer gas, or who have much to do with the handling of garbage, or with the disposal of sewage, suffer more frequently from sore throats than the rest of the community. The statistics of the cities of London, Paris and Berlin exemplify this very strikingly. In Paris many men work in the sewers, which are in large galleries, and the sewage canals are so open that even boats may go on them and all sorts of work may be carried on by means of artificial light. It might be thought that the men who work here all day long and every day in the year would suffer more from intestinal diseases than the rest of the population because they are so closely associated with intestinal dejecta. Statistics show, however, that what they suffer from most are affections of the throat.

The problem as it can be seen in Berlin is even more interesting. The German capital is an absolutely inland city with two small rivers, the Havel and the Spree running through it. These would be called scarcely more than creeks in most parts of this country. When Berlin began to grow into a world city these little streams became choked with sewage and proved hotbeds for the fostering of disease. The problem of the disposal of Berlin's sewage seemed very serious then. It was confided to Virchow, the great German pathologist, who arranged for the sewage farms on which the sewage of the city would be spread as a fertilizer. After the war with France, in 1871, when Berlin increased very rapidly in population, these sewage farms had to be extended enormously. The German capital grew in population from half a million to nearly two million in about twenty-five years. Many thousands of persons had to be employed in these sewage farms in intimate daily contact with the sewage from the great city. It might be expected that they would be in particularly precarious condition as regards the development of disease, that above all the stomach and intestinal diseases would be frequent among them, since they are handling material that often conveys them.

Virchow watched with great care the statistics of disease among these sewage workers. They were instructed never to eat except after very careful washing of their hands, and the changing from working into other clothes after labor was imposed on them. There was less intestinal disease among them than among the rest of the population of Berlin. They suffered, however, from more sore throat than the rest of the population and the spread of these diseases had to be watched rather carefully. It came to be generally recognized that sore throat probably spread much more from material that got into the mouth with the food, or from the hands in some way, than through the air.

We had a striking exemplification of that last spring near Boston. About May 15 an epidemic of very severe sore throat set in in the suburbs of Boston and spread very rapidly. Altogether nearly 1,500 persons suffered from it. There were twenty-seven deaths, but there were a great many complications and much suffering. There were abscesses in the tonsils, in the ears, in the glands of the neck and in various parts of the mouth. The time of its occurrence just at the most balmy period of spring was particularly surprising for those who think of sore throat as due to cold air, or wet feet or some other concomitant of the winter time. When the cause for the epidemic was traced, however, it was found to be due to milk which had come from a large and ordinarily very well regulated dairy in which, however, something had happened to bring about contamination of the milk.

Such epidemics of sore throat from milk have often been traced in Europe, and they expect to have at least one rather severe and widespread epidemic of this kind every year somewhere in England. Evidently it is what we put into our mouths rather than what we breathe in that produces the sore throat.

Australasian Penal Colonies Now Self-Governing Communities.

THE position which the Australasian colonies are gaining in the world, particularly since their federation on the plan of the United States, has attracted the attention of the world to them and recalled the singular and striking fact that great penal colonies, where at one time disorder and crime prevailed, have become orderly and strictly self-governing communities.

The story of the penal settlements of Australia and Tasmania, and the carnival of cruelty and of crime that attended the convict system, is most remarkable in the light of subsequent events. The crimes for which convicts were sent from England to Botany Bay and Van Diemen's Land were in great part abominable, and the explanation was certainly terrible.

The convicts were put at work in the broiling Australian sun. Often they worked in chains, and the chains were not counted as diminishing their capacity for hard labor. Even the most conducted of them were let out to farmers and the proprietors of sheep ranges. If these farmers happened to be humane, the convict might be reasonably happy. But in many cases the farmer regarded his convict helper as a slave, so indeed he was, and a beast of burden, to be used as cruelly as possible.

The result was that as many of the convicts as could do so escaped to the woods and became "bushrangers" or highwaymen. They preyed on the natives and on the settlers, committing robberies that were not infrequently attended with murder.

In Tasmania such ravages were particularly alarming. The malefactors were under the leadership of one Mike Howe, a highwayman, who had been sent from England to the colony on a long sentence and had escaped to the bush. His band of convicts raided the natives to provide themselves with wives, and these women served them efficiently as guides in the thickets and [illegible]

They became [illegible] that the general settlers [illegible] which [illegible] proposed a plan [illegible] which he sent to be "treated as a gentleman," they were very glad to make the arrangement. But the Governor General at Sydney refused to give his sanction to the pact, and Howe took to the bush again. He was pursued by troops and in a dreadful hand to hand conflict was overcome, and beheaded by a gigantic soldier known as "Big Bill."

Howe's followers continued the war fearlessly, but at last there came a division. The convicts tired of bushranging and little by little settled down to [illegible] like [illegible] of peaceful [illegible] and the [illegible] of them who were already [illegible]

THE ITALIAN FAILING

Not Likely to Make Much of a Success of Tripoli Colony

According to Lawrence Mott, who has had many opportunities of studying the Italian character and the trend of Italian policy, the chances of Italy making a success of the Tripolitan colony experiment are quite as doubtful as the question of her success in war. Mr. Mott recalls Italy's failure in Abyssinia, and declares that unless the Italians are prepared to abandon the policy of centralization that they have been wedded to they will fail in Tripoli. To the Italian, Rome is the headquarters of everything. Every Italian looks to Rome for his instructions, and the officials who will act on their own initiative if they happen to be serving their country anywhere but in the capital are few indeed. Mr. Mott says that if the Italians had left the conduct of the military operations in Abyssinia in the hands of the generals on the spot they might have defeated Menelik. Even in the present war there is a disposition to act on advice from Rome rather than according to the exigencies of the situation as they present themselves to the generals in the field.

Tripoli will not be a successful Italian colony if the Italians attempt to manage its affairs from Rome. They must first find the right man to put in charge, then turn him loose and let him handle the affairs of Tripoli. The French made the mistake of directing Algerian business from Paris, and the result was much trouble and disappointment. The French, moreover tried the "strong arm" method with the natives, and to-day France holds Algeria by her troops, whereas in British colonies troops are not more numerous than policeman are at home, and discharge much the same functions. If Italy is to succeed she must enlist the Arabs as allies, prove to them that they have as much to gain as the Italians themselves by making Tripoli a garden land, and teach them the arts of the European farmer, shepherd and vine-dresser, for these are the arts that must make Tripoli a great colony if it is to be rescued from barbarism.

Girl Cured of Disfiguring Pimples

By Cuticura Ointment. Broke Out on Face when Twelve or Thirteen. Were Most Embarrassing. Had Tried Everything.

A Nova Scotia girl, Miss Mabel Morash, of Dover West, writes: "When I was about twelve or thirteen years of age, my face broke out with pimples, and I tried everything to get rid of them, but failed. The pimples were the worst on my forehead and chin. They came out in groups and developed later into sores. Being on my face they caused great disfigurement, and were most embarrassing.

"After trying so many remedies without success, I saw the Cuticura Ointment advertised, and I sent for a box. I then applied it to the pimples, and in a week I saw a great change in my face. I kept using it, and in a few months it rendered a complete cure. Now you cannot tell I ever had pimples, thanks to the Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Mabel Morash, Mar. 31, 1911.

Baby's Face Like Raw Beef

"My baby boy had a large pimple come on his forehead. It burst and spread all over his face which soon looked like a piece of raw beef, all smothered with had pimples. It was awful to look at. The poor little thing used to scratch it and cry terribly. I took him to a doctor but he only got worse until I was quite frightened that he would always be disfigured. Then I got two tins of Cuticura Ointment, together with Cuticura Soap, and in two months had quite cured him. Now of course I use Cuticura Soap for all my children (Signed) Mrs. E. Perry, 99, Waterloo Rd., Aldershot, England, May 21, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. MUST HOLD INDIA FOR YEARS TO COME

Sir Andrew Fraser Tells About British Administration in the Far East

"If we are to discharge our duty to humanity we shall have to hold India for a long time to come," said Sir Andrew Fraser during his recent visit to Canada. He spent thirty years of the thirty-seven during which he was Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in close contact with the life of the people. Caste is a very real thing even yet, in spite of the influence of railways and other agencies which tend to break it down, and until caste is removed from India, Sir Andrew asserted, it was perfectly absurd to talk of an Indian nation; no dream was more foolish. British rule was the only thing that kept the many nations in India from flying at one another's throats.

That there was unrest the speaker not only freely admitted, but even expressed his gratification at it; that was a condition that was hopeful, for the Crown officials had been striving for years to awaken the people from their sleep of thousands of years. The people were beginning to press forward towards civilization and enlightenment, and there was nothing to regret in that. Of course there was connected with this unrest some sedition; it was always possible for a few men to do mischief; a hare-brained fanatical zealot might be ready to [illegible] life in order to take a [illegible]. But the great majority of the people were intensely loyal to the British Crown, and especially all the Rajahs and those who had important interests at stake in the country.

REMOVES ICEBERG DANGER

An Instrument Which Will be Tested by the Marine Department

An invention which will minimise if not abolish altogether the risk from icebergs to steamships has been presented to the department of marine and fisheries by Professor Howard Barnes of McGill University. One of the department's vessels will be placed at the disposal of Professor Barnes for experimental purposes.

The instrument is claimed by Professor Barnes to detect at a distance of several miles the presence of masses of ice.

The cruise of Professor Barnes, who will be accompanied by several experts, will be in the Straits of Belle Isle, at a period when the iceberg season is in full swing. The government vessel will poke its way through the ice, and the instrument will record as in the manner of a thermometer the propinquity of the ice floes.

It is also claimed that the little instrument will not only register by its fluctuations the nearness of ice, but also of land. Experiments for this purpose will also be made.

Mr. John Knight, editor of the Canadian Bankers' Magazine, has the following editorial on filthy lucre: "The reappearance of smallpox in Montreal although not alarming, reminds one of the risk to which bank tellers are peculiarly exposed in the daily handling of paper money. Vaccination and scrupulous attention to cleanliness are the surest means of avoiding that loathsome scourge. Let those who deride the practice of periodical vaccination reflect upon the strides made both in the practice and study of medicine during the present century. Seven years ago, an American doctor in referring to the achievements of his profession in battling with disease, made this striking reference to the results following the introduction of vaccination. He said that a citizen of our times could be carried backwards and dropped down in the streets of London of a century ago, nothing that he could see would so greatly surprise him as the large number of faces marked with smallpox. There were then over five thousand deaths from that dreaded disease to each million people."

FARM FOR OPOSSUMS

A Peculiar Industry in an Australian Locality

Foxes are not the only animals which are being bred in captivity for commercial purposes. From Australia comes the information that a farm exclusively for opossums has been started in Gippsland, Victoria. This farm is said to contain 2,000 acres of eucalyptus bush land. Another farm comprising 500 acres has been started in southern Tasmania, and another of 150 acres in New South Wales. The chairman of the Sydney Stock Exchange has become much interested in the possibility of commercial breeding of opossums for their fur, and expects to start a large farm for this purpose near Sydney. In Western Australia there seems prospects of a company being formed for the breeding of opossums on a stretch of eucalyptus country comprising about 200,000 acres. Many instances are also being reported of farmers in various parts of Australia taking up the breeding of opossums as a special feature of their farms, in this way using the timbered sections of their land, which would not have much value for any other purpose.

SUNFISH WASHED ASHORE

It Measured Eight Feet From Tip to Tail.

An enormous sunfish, weighing about six hundred pounds, and measuring eight feet from tip to tail, was washed ashore dead at Bangor Bay, County Down. The sunfish is a denizen of tropical seas and the death of this specimen is explained by the fact that it could not live in water of so low temperature as that surrounding the British Islands. As it would have been an inconvenient task to bury the carcass it was towed out into deep water when the tide was up. A smaller sunfish was washed ashore on another part of the coast and this gives rise to the idea that these fish were attracted out of their own waters by the great heat that prevailed this summer.

SMOTHERED IN FLOUR

The little two-year-old child of Mr. Bernard Farrell, living near Westport had been left with some playthings in the kitchen by its mother while she went about her work in another room. Thinking the child was unusually quiet she went to see if it was all right, but it was nowhere to be found. Some flour scattered about near the barrel led her to look there, and to her horror she found her baby head downward in it, with his feet visible. Life was extinct when she took him out. The child had been smothered in the flour.

THE CITY OF TRIPOLI

The city of Tripoli has between thirty-five and forty thousand inhabitants; the indigenous races, Berbers, Arabs, and negroes, of course, making up the bulk of the population. There are eight thousand Jews, and four thousand Maltese. The Europeans are almost negligible; the Italians (chiefly Sicilians), who are most numerous, tallying about six hundred. The Turks consist only of the few troops and the governing officials, at whose head is the governor-general and commander-in-chief, now one Regeb Pacha. He is, of course, the personal representative of the Sultan. The desert population of the entire vilayet or province is very difficult to estimate, but in the most recent local and official reports it is given as about 900,000. Tripoli has thirty mosques and thirteen synagogues but until within a few years it had no schools whatever, the children receiving a smattering of letters and Koran texts in the mosques. It is better now; there are eight public schools of various grades, elementary, normal, technical and military, whose good effects are already to be seen on the younger generation.

THE ITALIAN FARING

Not Likely to Make Much of a Success of Tripoli Colony

According to Lawrence Mott, who has had many opportunities of studying the Italian character and the trend of Italian policy, the chances of Italy making a success of the Tripolitan colony experiment are quite as doubtful as the question of her success in war. Mr. Mott recalls Italy's failure in Abyssinia, and declares that unless the Italians are prepared to abandon the policy of centralization that they have been wedded to they will fail in Tripoli. To the Italian, Rome is the headquarters of everything. Every Italian looks to Rome for his instructions, and the officials who will act on their own initiative if they happen to be serving their country anywhere but in the capital are few indeed. Mr. Mott says that if the Italians had left the conduct of the military operations in Abyssinia in the hands of the generals on the spot they might have defeated Menelik. Even in the present war there is a disposition to act on advice from Rome rather than according to the exigencies of the situation as they present themselves to the generals in the field.

Tripoli will not be a successful Italian colony if the Italians attempt to manage its affairs from Rome. They must first find the right man to put in charge, then turn him loose and let him handle the affairs of Tripoli. The French made the mistake of directing Algerian business from Paris, and the result was much trouble and disappointment. The French, moreover, tried the "strong arm" method with the natives, and to-day France holds Algeria by her troops, whereas in British colonies troops are not more numerous than policeman are at home, and discharge much the same functions. If Italy is to succeed she must enlist the Arabs as allies, prove to them that they have as much to gain as the Italians themselves by making Tripoli a garden land, and teach them the arts of the European farmer, shepherd and vine-dresser, for these are the arts that must make Tripoli a great colony if it is to be rescued from barbarism.

GIRLS AS SOLDIERS

Some of the Chinese girls who organised an Amazon corps to support the rebel cause went to Hankow. The girls of the corps want to be soldiers. They applied for arms and for permission to proceed to the battle field to kill the Imperialist troops. The project, started by two teachers in a school was taken up with enthusiasm, and many practiced the art of war with a view to active service.

Girl Cured of Disfiguring Pimples

By Cuticura Ointment. Broke Out on Face when Twelve or Thirteen. Were Most Embarrassing. Had Tried Everything.

A Nova Scotia girl, Miss Mabel Morash, of Dover West, writes: "When I was about twelve or thirteen years of age, my face broke out with pimples, and I tried everything to get rid of them, but failed. The pimples were the worst on my forehead and chin. They came out in groups and developed later into sores. Being on my face they caused great disfigurement, and were most embarrassing.

"After trying so many remedies without success, I saw the Cuticura Ointment advertised, and I sent for a box. I then applied it to the pimples, and in a week I saw a great change in my face. I kept using it, and in a few months it rendered a complete cure. Now you cannot tell I ever had pimples, thanks to the Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Mabel Morash, Mar. 31, 1911.

Baby's Face Like Raw Beef

"My baby boy had a large pimple come on his forehead. It burst and spread all over his face which soon looked like a piece of raw beef, all smothered with bad pimples. It was awful to look at. The poor little thing used to scratch it and cry terribly. I took him to a doctor but he only got worse until I was quite frightened that he would always be disfigured. Then I got two tins of Cuticura Ointment, together with Cuticura Soap, and in two months had quite cured him. Now of course I use Cuticura Soap for all my children (Signed) Mrs. E. Perry, 99 Waterloo Rd., Aldershot, England, May 21, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, but hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. Address Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 82 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

MUST HOLD INDIA FOR YEARS TO COME

Sir Andrew Fraser Tells About British Administration in the Far East

"If we are to discharge our duty to humanity we shall have to hold India for a long time to come," said Sir Andrew Fraser during his recent visit to Canada. He spent thirty years of the thirty-seven during which he was Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in close contact with the life of the people. Caste is a very real thing even yet, in spite of the influence of railways and other agencies which tend to break it down, and until caste is removed from India, Sir Andrew asserted, it was perfectly absurd to talk of an Indian nation; no dream was more foolish. British rule was the only thing that kept the many nations in India from flying at one another's throats.

That there was unrest the speaker not only freely admitted, but even expressed his gratification at it; that was a condition that was hopeful; for the Crown officials had been striving for years to awaken the people from their sleep of thousands of years. The people were beginning to press forward towards civilization and enlightenment, and there was nothing to regret in that. Of course there was connected with this unrest some sedition; it was always possible for a few men to do mischief; a hare-brained fanatic might be ready to [illegible] in order to make a name for himself, but the great majority of [illegible] were intensely loyal to the British Crown, and especially all the Rajahs and those who had important interests at stake in the country.

The little two-year-old child of Mr. Barnard Farrell, living near Westport had been left with some playthings in the kitchen by its mother while she went about her work in another room. Thinking the child was unusually quiet she went to see if it was all right, but it was nowhere to be found. Some flour scattered about near the barrel led her to look there, and to her horror she found her baby head downward in it, with his feet visible. Life was extinct when she took him out. The child had been smothered in the flour.

WHY SHOULD WOMEN SUFFER?

Those that are almost daily afflicted with headache, backpains, depression, neuralgia, and "don't care" feeling, can be quickly cured by "Nerviline." Just a few drops of this wonderful remedy in sweetened water makes you feel better at once—gives you relief from unnatural aches and pains. Thousands use Nerviline every day—it does them good. Why not you?

Nerviline Cures.

"I wouldn't think of being in the house unless I had a bottle of Nerviline handy," writes Mrs. A. E. Banner, of Belleville. To stop headaches, cure pains, and drive away sickness, nothing compares with Nerviline.

Every dealer in the land sells Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

TORONTO GENERAL TRUSTS CORPORATION

BIG FIELD FOR PROJECT.

Most of the Cities of the United States, including Boston, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago, have properly equipped Arena Buildings, wherein there can be accommodated hockey, skating and other indoor winter sports, as well as the Horse Show, cattle shows, and all kinds of conventions, band concerts and other summer exhibitions. Yet, Toronto has presented the anomaly of a big city with a population of over 350,000 within its limits and as many more in its near vicinity, with no institution of the kind. Such an enterprise will be accepted with favor and supported with enthusiasm.

MANAGEMENT:

Mr. Lawrence Solman, who is well-known throughout Canada for his successful management of theatrical and summer amusements, has kindly consented to act as Managing Director.

HOCKEY AND SKATING:

Here in Canada, besides the ventures in Ottawa, Quebec, Vancouver and Winnipeg, in Montreal the Arena has since its inception in 1909 proved to be a magnificent success. Never has hockey been more popular and never have the attendances been so large. Not only has professional hockey flourished, but the College and Ontario Hockey Association games have been better patronized than ever.

Besides provision for public skating, it is proposed during certain hours, to run a skating club, on exclusive lines, similar to that of the Earl Grey Club, of Montreal.

HORSE SHOW, Etc.

It is needless to remark how cramped the Canadian National Horse Show has been, the accommodation being totally inadequate to meet the demand in every direction. Stables for eighty horses have been included in the plans. Then again, there is the Auto Show, Pure Food Shows, Vaudeville Shows, endless conventions, band concerts and industrial exhibitions, for none of which Toronto has a properly equipped building.

ICE PLANT:

A new venture in connection with these undertakings is that a hundred ton artificial ice plant is being installed, under contract with the De La Vergne Company, dated June 23rd, 1911. This plant will not only maintain the skating ice during the winter, but will also manufacture fifty tons of ice per day for family consumption during the summer months. This ice plant will make it possible to always have, regardless of weather conditions, a cool building in summer and a reliable clean ice surface for all winter sports and an absolutely safe place for skating without exposure to severe cold. The profit on the sale of ice during the summer season will, it is expected, not only pay for the cost of running the ice plant during the winter, but furnish a very considerable revenue.

THE SITE:

The Arena Gardens Building has been erected on that block of land situate on Mutual, Shuter and Dalhousie Streets, and is accessible by the street cars from every point in Toronto. It is about seven minutes' walk from the King Edward Hotel and the General Post Office.

THE BUILDING:

The building, from plans prepared by Ross & McFarlane, of Montreal, is being solidly built in brick, steel and cement by Peter Lyall & Sons, Limited, under contract dated August 29th, 1911, and covers a ground space of 334 x 190 feet. It has an ice or skating surface of 200 x 85 feet, with a ten-foot promenade all round.

SEATING CAPACITY:

The seating capacity will include two tiers of boxes of about fifty on each side, and seats for over 5,000 spectators in pit form all around the arena. In this connection it should be pointed out that the seating capacity of the Montreal Arena is about 4,000, and that on many, many occasions each season, the demand for tickets has far exceeded the supply. Every possible convenience is being prepared in the way of club rooms, tea, waiting, and smoking rooms, lavatories and dressing rooms.

PROSPECTS:

With the undoubted steady growth of population in Toronto, and the unflagging interest in hockey, skating, and all kinds of summer entertainments, to say nothing about the other sources of income which will be the natural outcome of having an establishment of the kind in the city, there is offered in this undertaking an avenue of investment which should increase in volume with the growth of the City.

A formal prospectus has been filed with the Honorable Provincial Secretary of the Province of Ontario.

Additional application forms will be supplied on request by the undersigned:

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 5.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable was very quiet again to-day, there being no improvement in the demand and prices bid were generally out of line. The local and outside demand for oats continues good. The market for spring wheat flour was strong, and prices were advanced 10c per barrel under a good demand from all sources, and stronger cable advices. A stronger feeling has also developed in the market for all lines of millfeed, and prices were advanced $1 per ton all round owing to the continued good demand and limited supplies available. Butter is firm with a steady demand. Cheese is quiet. Demand for eggs is good. Provisions steady.

Niagara Peace Bridge.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 6.—At the Board of Trade meeting last night the hundred years' peace celebration was discussed at length.

A brand new peace bridge plan was broached when George McMicking suggested that a bridge, similar to that at Bridgeburg, be constructed between the Chippawa, Niagara Falls, New York, and other plans for a peace bridge on the lower river, have all proposed to place the structure a short distance below the upper bridge.

MANY ARE INJURED.

Car Falls Fifty Feet From Bridge at Saskatoon.

Saskatoon, Sask., March 6.—Buried deep in the mud of the South Saskatchewan River, which runs through Saskatoon, there were, it was feared anywhere from six to ten bodies. Fullman passengers of the Regina express, of the Canadian Northern Railway, which, after being derailed, crashed through a bridge over the frozen river bed between Saskatoon and Nutana at six o'clock Monday evening.

By noon, however, it was established that there had been no one killed, but two of the dozen injured are likely to die.

The wreckage of the car and bridge burned, imperilling all the passengers in the debris, and rendering them frantic before they were rescued.

The car fell 50 feet when the bridge collapsed.

Rev. F. H. King, Watrous, concussion of the brain.

E. H. Ashby, Saskatoon, injured about the head.

Rev. E. W. Hughes, Regina, bruised about the body.

David Walters, Regina; spine seriously injured.

W. E. Kirsch, Saskatoon, both legs broken.

Reginald Wright, bruises about the head and shoulders.

Sam Washington, porter, Saskatoon, hand amputated.

A. S. Mihalk, commercial traveler, Toronto, ankle sprained.

F. G. Lewin and Mrs. Lewin, internally hurt.

John McDiarmid, contractor, Winnipeg, shoulder dislocated.

D. J. Taylor, western manager of the Goold Shapley & Muir Co., home in Winnipeg, right side hurt.

The cause of the derailment is not known, but the fact that it was the last car which left the track undoubtedly prevented a great loss of life. As it is, the wonder is that there are not several fatalities. Had the river been open few would have escaped death by drowning.

The bridge is practically in the heart of the city and within a short distance of the C.N.R. depot, so that the work of rescue was begun almost at once, with plenty of willing hands to assist. All the doctors in town were requisitioned.

The bridge is built in five spans of about 250 feet in each, and is supported by four massive stone pillars in the stream. It is located at a bend in the river.

The accident recalls the C. P. R. wreck at Spanish River two years ago, when several derailed coaches plunged over the bridge on to the frozen stream. The death list, from fire, drowning and injury, was over forty.

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purifying the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organisms are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle, cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

Women's Advocates Think Suffragettes Are Overdoing It.

London, March 6.—In pursuance of the Government's intention to fully test the efficacy of the existing laws to deal with the latest tactics of the militant suffragettes before resorting to special legislation to make the funds of the suffrage societies liable for damage done by their members, the police last night raided the offices of the Women's Social and Political Union in Clements' Inn. They arrested Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Pethick Lawrence, joint editors of Votes for Women, who were taken to the Bow street police station.

The police also had a warrant for the arrest of Miss Christabel Pankhurst, but did not find her there. They took possession of the offices. The leaders of the union are charged with being responsible for the latest window-smashing campaign. They will presumably be tried under the conspiracy laws.

Members of the union seen last night declared that the new departure in inflicting hard labor sentences upon those convicted of taking part in Monday's demonstration, and in arresting the leaders will only produce a bigger crop of volunteers for militant work.

The weakness of the suffragist case, however, is seen in the fact that the great majority of women denounce the militant actions, which they declare are being carried too far.

Even the Women's Freed League, an important body which has already secured many reforms for women, deprecates the measures which the militant suffragettes are taking and the doings of the Social and Political Union, contending that the suffragists ought to be satisfied to await the outcome of the present Parliamentary session, which has offered the best hopes of advancing the cause.

PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY MARCH 6 1912

DIED AT THE AGE OF 100

Mr. John Stinson, of Fowler's Corners and Verulam, Reached Ripe Old Age

HAD 59 DESCENDANTS

BOBCAYGEON, MARCH 5.—There recently passed away in North Verulam an old gentleman, John Stinson, who had reached the ripe age of one hundred years. He was a native of Ireland and emigrated to Canada seventy years ago. His first home was on the road between Peterborough and Bridgenorth, and afterwards he removed to a farm not far from Fowler's Corner, where his son Sam now resides.

In 1878 he removed to Verulam having purchased what is now known as Brandeston and the adjoining property. His late years were spent among his children, of whom four sons and three daughters survive him. Among his descendants are thirty-one grandchildren and twenty-one great grandchildren. He was a man of strict business integrity and moral uprightness. He was a life-long member of the Presbyterian church.

SHOCKING CRUELTY

Special to The Examiner:

WINCHESTER, ONT., MARCH 6.—At four o'clock this morning the Coroner's Jury in the case of Catherine Sait Pierre, returned a verdict of manslaughter against her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Bickford. Evidence of shocking cruelty was presented. The child was forced to sleep in a shed in zero weather. Her toes were frozen and dropped off.

Illness Of Queen Mother

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, MARCH 6.—There are disturbing rumours concerning the illness of Queen Mother Alexandra, who has been ill with influenza for some weeks. Specialists have been called in, but no bulletin has been issued.

COULD HAVE SAVED MONEY

For instance there are many people who do not buy the right medicine for their ailments, and pay out many dollars before they learn just what to do.

Mrs. Alex. Dumas, of Malone, N. Y. knows this now. She says "A very heavy cold settled on my lungs last winter and for three months I coughed almost constantly. At night I could hardly get any sleep. I tried several medicines but none of them did me any good. Then I thought I would use Vinol and it began to help my cough from almost the first dose. "I do not cough at all now, I can sleep well and have gained much strength, all because I took your splendid tonic."

When you buy Vinol for your cough, or to build you up, you are getting the best remedy that can be had and will not need to experiment with any others. We guarantee Vinol to do you good, and will give back your money if you are not well satisfied. Special to The Examiner.

PEKIN, MARCH 6.—News has been brought here of the massacre of several British Missionaries, by bandits, in the interior of North China and British Consuls are taking the matter up with the Government.

6 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeston, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Fourteen Arrested

Examiner Special:

LAWRENCE, MASS., MARCH 6.—Fourteen arrests were made this morning of people who interefered with the former strikers returning to work. Many of the mills have given increases in wages and are operating to full capacity again.

QUESTION OF NIGHT CLASSES FOR THE WINTER MONTHS DEALT WITH BY THE SCHOOL BOARD

Board of Education Met in Regular Monthly Session—Additional Supplies to be Purchased for the Chemistry Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute—Other Business Transacted.

WHAT THE BOARD OF EDUCATION DID.

Decided to submit the Supervision committee's report to the Minister of Education.

Refused to sanction Mr. Fair's suggestion that a deputation accompany the report to the Minister of Education.

Voted $100 towards the procuring of supplies for the further equipment of the chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute as recommended by the Inspector.

Gave the Supervision committee power to deal with the matter of establishing night schools, to take effect after the midsummer vacation.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening in the board room. There were present Messrs. R. Fair, W. H. Hill, B. F. Ackerman, Col. Miller, T. H. Adams, V. Eastwood, L. M. Hayes, Dr. Burnham and Dr. Morrison. Dr. Burnham occupied the chair in the absence of the regular chairman, Mr. J. Crane.

Dr. Morrison reported for the Supervision committee as follows:

Gentlemen,—Regarding a letter from the Deputy Minister of Education re gymnasium accommodation at the Collegiate Institute, which was referred to this committee, we beg to report as follows:

In view of the fact that during the past five years this Board has expended in Public school and Collegiate Institute Buliding, the sum of $166,000.00, and this year will spend another $85,000.00, making a total of upwards of $250,000.00, and further that we believe, that the Public schools should receive our first attention, for the great majority of our children do not go beyond these schools, and therefore it is our intention to make them the best possible, and with the addition of the necessary schools in the East and West Wards, we can say without boasting, that we will have one of the best set of Public schools in the Province, and with well equipped Public schools, we are at once benefitting the Collegiate Institute by being able to give them scholars, trained and having a good ground work.

Further our present arrangement for gymnasium accommodation, in which we have the use of the well equipped Y.M.C.A. gymnasium and the services of an expert teacher, reduces the objection of it not being under the same roof as the Collegiate, to a minimum. It is the policy of the Board that if in the near future, Technical Education should be made a part of the curriculum of the Collegiate, this Board will have to supply additional accommodation for such classes. Then the question of an addition to our present building would be before us and provision could be made for a gymnasium in that addition. Until then or until such other time as we feel that the people would vote the necessary money for the purpose, we cannot hope for any better arrangement than that, which at the present satisfies everyone, but seemingly does not meet every requirement.

Your committee would recommend the purchase from Mr. McClelland of a clock for the Collegiate Institute, at the price of $18.00.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. A. MORRISON,
Chairman.

It was moved by Dr. Morrison and seconded by Mr. W. H. Hill, that this report be adopted, and that a copy be forwarded to the Minister of Education. The latter action being deemed necessary in view of the fact that the Deputy Minister of Education has been strongly advocating additional gymnasium accommodation at the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. R. Fair thought that the report should be accompanied by a deputation consisting of the members of the Board.

Dr. Morrison took exception as did the rest of the Board.

As regards supplies for the Collegiate Institute, consisting of a clock, cabinets for the museum specimens, and other apparatus, Dr. Morrison stated that the committee were not prepared to make a definite report. He also suggested an annual appropriation of $50 to be utilized in the purchasing of supplies for the chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute. Articles consisting of a wireless telegraph outfit, a barometer and other equipments had been recommended by the Inspector on the occasion of his visit to this city.

Mr. Eastwood moved that the sum of $100 be granted the Supervision committee for this purpose, with power to act.—Carried.

Mr. Fair queried the Board as to the progress of the Building committee.

Dr. Morrison, as chairman of the committee, said that the plans were almost ready and a special meeting of the Board would be held in the course of probably ten days, when the matter would be fully dealt with.

The question of arranging for the inauguration of a night school, to commence after the midsummer holidays next received the attention of the Board.

Dr. Morrison, who presented the matter, concluded his remarks by moving that the Supervision committee be given power to prepare plans and look into the matter with a view to establishing night schools.

Mr. Adams seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously by the Board.

Inspector Mowat reported upon a defective ventilator in connection with one of the Public schools. The matter will be dealt with by the Supervision committee.

Communications Received.

From the Y.W.C.A. Board, asking the Board of Education for the use of the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall on or about Friday evening, March 29th, the Association to meet the expense arising from the use of the hall.

The matter was referred to the Supervision committee with power to act.

FAMILY DISPUTES

Magistrate Edmison Deals With Two Cases in Norwood Yesterday Afternoon

DUMMER CASE DROPPED

A family dispute in Norwood was responsible for County Magistrate Edmison's presence in that town yesterday. By the united endeavours of the Magistrate, Mr. G. M. Gordon, High County Constable Cochrane, and a number of the relatives of the parties concerned in the proceedings the case was amicably settled.

Children Will Become Wards of the C. A. S.

The Lonsbury separation case was also dealt with. It appears that the couple cannot agree together. One accused the other of neglect of duty, that savoured of non-support.

It was deemed advisable, in the interests of the three children of the couple, who are seeking an order for separation, to have them handed over as wards of the Children's Aid Society.

Kidnapping Case Settled.

The case in which a Dummer Township man was seeking to secure possession of his child, which had been taken from him, by his wife, who, it is alleged was assisted in the matter by her brother, was settled by mutual consent. Unless further developments arise no prosecutions will follow.

FREIGHT TRAINS COLLIDE

Examiner Special:

ORANGEVILLE, MARCH 6.—One cattleman, whose name is unknown, is severely hurt, three cars were disched and some stock destroyed, as the result of a collision of freight trains on the Owen Sound Division of the Canadian Pacific Railway, near here, this morning. Traffic, both ways, was suspended for some hours.

SEARCHING FOR MISS PANKHURST

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 6.—The police are scouring London for Miss Christobel Pankhurst, who with Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, and other leaders of the militant Suffragettes were supposed to have been arrested last night on a conspiracy charge. It seems Miss Pankhurst slipped away from the police somehow.

In the police court this morning, three other prisoners were arraigned Bail was refused and remands were made to one week.

MR. DUMBLE EXPLAINS THE REGISTRARS' CHARGES QUOTES REGISTRATION ACT

Police Magistrate Says Some of the Councillors Hardly Understood the Matter They Discussed—Number of Actions May Have to be Instituted.

To the Mayor and Council, Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—I have observed, in the report of the Council meeting that some of the Councillors charge the ex-officio registrars with asking from the Council payment for "work which they did not do." I feel that some of the Councillors hardly understand the matter they discussed, and I desire to explain. The Manhood Franchise Act enacts that the Board of Registrars shall be composed of the County Judge, the Police Magistrate, the Registrar and the County Court Clerk, three of these also compose the Court of Appeal. The duty of carrying out the entire work is entrusted to them. The days for registration are fixed, and the hours of sitting. The Government, no doubt, entrusted this responsible duty to a body of men whose positions and qualifications fitted them for the work, and whose honourable position was a guarantee for efficiency and honour. Now, every one of these ex-officio registrars holds offices which require them to be in their offices the hours Judge could not and is not allowed to Judge could not and is not allowed to absent himself from his judicial duties, the same is obligatory on the Police Magistrate, the County Court Clerk and the Registrar, so that the hours of office and the hours fixed for registration overlap. We have not notwithstanding all the inventions, succeeded in being able to be in two places at the same time. This is recognized in the Registration Act, and so it provides Clause 4: "The Board shall be constituted in every "city for preparing lists of persons "entitled to be registered as Man"hood Suffrage voters and shall be "called "The Board of Man"hood Suffrage Registrars" and ev"ery member thereof shall be a Re"gistrar within the meaning of this "Act."

And Section 5 as follows: "The "Board shall consist of the officials "hereinafter mentioned, who may "from time to time appoint so many "other Registrars as shall be neces"sary to carry out the provisions of "this Act."

"For their services, under this "Act the officers employed shall be "entitled to be paid as follows: A "Registrar for each sitting, and each "member of the Board of Appeal for "each day on which a sitting is held "$10.00, &c."

Now, Sirs, let me suggest to you that the Registrars are paid for the whole duty and responsibility placed upon them and for the guarantee of the correct and honourable performance of a responsible duty. The Statute never contemplated that they should abandon their other official duties to sit all day doing clerkly work, but that they should oversee, and be responsible for the proper performance of the work. In Toronto, where they are supposed to know something of law, the ex-officio Registrars are constantly paid. So also regarding the Dominion Registrations, though the accounts were audited by the Dominion Civil servants, the charges to the ex-officio Registrars were always paid without question.

I write in the hope that this explanation may make it unnecessary to institute a number of actions.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. Dumble.

Peterborough, March 5, 1912.

HAS THE SOUTH POLE BEEN DISCOVERED

Editor Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 6.— This city is all agog to-night with the rumour that Captain Scott, R. N., has reached and reported the discovery of the South Pole. An evening paper published an item to-day to this effect. While such an announcement is hourly expected, it is taken rather gingerly in remembrance of the trouble Doctor Cook put the world to with his reported discovery of the North Pole some time ago. There is no confirmation of Scott's reported discovery. His wife has not heard from him.

AD. CLUB WILL CREATE BETTER FEELING AMONG BUSINESS MEN

Affords Them a Liberal Education in Advertizing Which They Could Not Have Received Otherwise —Mr. C. H. Ashley's Spirited Address.

ELIMINATE TRADE EVILS

Mr. C. H. Ashley of the Saturday Night Publishing Co., Toronto, was the speaker at the meeting of the recently-formed Ad Club of this city, in Hooper's Palm Parlours, last night. The attendance of business men, retail merchants, advertising men and others interested in the movement was quite encouraging. Thus far the meetings have taken the form of a dinner at 6.15 p.m., following which an address is given. A double function is thereby combined. The members of the Club are enabled to meet under pleasant conditions, and from the experience of prominent advertising men they secure invaluable business hints that they can apply to their every-day methods.

Mr. Ashley's address was a little heart to heart talk with writers and consumers of advertising space. He outlined the aims and objects of the Ad. Club movement, pointed out the benefits the individual member can secure, indicated the work the Club can do for the community at large, pointed out faults in advertising make up and copy, criticised poor ads. and generally stirred up enthusiasm among the members that should go a long way to make the Peterborough Ad Club a success.

"In one hundred and one cities in the United States the movement had been so strong, so active, and successful that in not a few of them it has usurped the prerogatives of the Boards of Trade and almost of the City Councils. Dozens of Clubs have been instrumental in improving city lighting, sanitation and beautification and have made themselves the most dominant factors in those cities. But it is only in believing in themselves that they have been able to accomplish these results."

Speaking of what the Club will do for the individual, Mr. Ashley stated that it would eliminate the spirit of selfishness and teach the members that not in competition, but in co-operation was the road to success; that the keeping to one's self so-called brilliant ideas is a menace to

DIRECTORS PAID CLAIMS

Mr. John Bolton Received One Quarter of Amount—Fair Directors Paid for Bear Incident

HIS SON WAS BITTEN

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition have paid practically a total of $800 in settlement of the various claims arising out of the injuries to John Bolton, Jr., who was bitten by a trained bear at the Fair last September. There was an opinion among the members that the directors had a fair case of defence, but finally decided to avoid litigation proceedings and paid the claims. Fifty dollars was the share that Mr. Bolton, father of the boy, received. Dr. Greer's bill amounted to $70. Bennet and Goodwill's fees were $50 and the hospital bill amounted to $11. Some of the directors feel much displeased over this action, for reasons which probably concern themselves alone. Mr. Bolton receives only a fraction of the total claim.

LIVELY DEBATE

Agriculture Committee of the Commons Discussed Immigration

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 6.—There was a lively interchange in the Agricultural committee of the Commons this morning between Donald Sutherland, M.P., formerly Director of Colonization of Ontario and W. D. Scott, Supt. of Immigration in regard to the placing of immigrants in Ontario. Mr. Sutherland charged that there was discrimination against Ontario, but Scott proved to the contrary and gave instances where Ontario farmers had refused to take men sent to them. There was, however, a growing practice of farmers providing separate homes for farm labourers and engaging them by the year instead of for the season only and in this way it was hoped many of the old difficulties would be overcome. The difficulty was that fifty per cent. of the immigrants now coming to Canada were coming to relatives or friends and most of them were located in the west. It was impossible to divert these people to Ontario or any other eastern province.

NO RELIGIOUS TEST.

There is very natural opposition to the clause of the bill to nationalize Queen's University, Kingston — that the University should be "national" and that it shall be distinctly "Christian." It cannot be distinctly Christian if it excludes any Canadian citizen from its educational benefits. The essence of Christianity is invitation, not repulsion. Its watchword is "come." We are beyond the days when religious tests are conditions of educational advantages. If we applied the religious test in state-aided universities and schools, their usefulness would be greatly impaired. We should have the Jews and a great many Gentiles, whom we recognize as citizens, excluded. Would one Hebrew, of one "heathen Chinee" in a list of 300 or 400 students, be a corrupting influence, or would he be brought under improving influences? In Canada, no school or university receiving state aid, teaches, or should teach religion ;and if no religion is taught, why apply religious tests to exclude students? ?

GOOD ROADS.

Every reform, in its working out, meets with obstacles, difficulties to be overcome. In the working out of the Good Roads Act, the Ontario government finds that while counties, under some persuasion may adopt the conditions of a one third of the cost of county road systems, it is difficult to get counties to assume the responsibility of maintaining the roads after they are built. This is a serious matter; for, next in importance, to building highways properly, is the maintenance of them in good condition. This is a matter easily remedied. The remedy is that the province take fuller responsibility and assume the duty, as is proposed by an amendment to the Act, of providing that the government aid shall include, also the maintenance of county road systems. The principle of government control already embodied in the Good Roads Act, should be extended. During the construction of county road systems, the provincial engineers have the oversight, something that is necessary to secure the construction of the roads on proper principles. Here is an opening for the Examiner's frequently-tendered suggestion—that the province undertake the entire construction of these county highways, bear the whole cost, do the whole work, whether in connection with construction or maintenance. There is nothing unjust or ufair in this. The revenue of the province belongs to the whole people, and the whole people should get the advantages of its proper expenditure The progress of the good roads movement will be slow, if we wait for the initiative or even consent and cooperation of the counties. There are many things that keep counties from adopting county road systems. One of the greatest troubles is to agree upon the roads in a county that should form such a system. Local jealousies have to be overcome, dormant interest awakened, and the courage to face assumption of two-thirds of the cost, aroused. If the government took full charge of county systems, selection of roads, and cost of construction, the question of site could and would be settled fairly, and localities would acquiesce, especially in view of the province assuming the whole burden of construction. There seems to b no reason why the government should not build road systems in every county. It has the power and the means—the money—the money of the people. Then we should have an universal and uniform system of good county roads, and the efforts of the municipalities could be concentrated upon improving the lateral highways, giving access to the county road systems. We cannot expect the best results from leaving the initiative to localities. The people have been spoiled by the operation of the wasteful and inefficient system of statute labour which has developed habits of sloppy road work and kept dormant, healthy public sentiment in regard to the importance of good roads. If we accept the principle of paternalism of governments in regard to Hydro-Electric matters, we could, with far greater justification, demand that the government go as far in the matter of the construction and maintenance of roads. Cheap electricity is a good thing; but good roads, universally obtained, would be a far greater provincial boon than cheap electric energy. Good roads, good transportation facilities, are the basis of prosperity; cheap power is, comparatively, only an incident.

THE LOYAL WEST.

The West is loyal to itself—has such concentred self-respect that it can only say good of itself, and that in terms as wide as its prairie sweeps. And the West has reason to be proud of itself. Alberta, for instance, has achieved something in the way of progress that has no counterpart in the history of human progress. The Examiner has received the anniversary number of the Calgary Morning Albertan. On the sixty-first of its 72 bright pages, is a group map, showing the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and the neighbouring states of the United States. The outline map has the figures of the population and the increase per cent. for the past few years. The increase of Alberta is given as 424.96 per cent., Saskatchewan, 396 per cent., and the increase in the various states from 11 per cent to 120 per cent., (in Washington state the highest). The growth of Calgary is marvellous. The population, in 1906, was 17,000. Five years later, 1911, it was 55,000, and this year it is estimated at 60,000; bank clearings in 1908, were $64,815,221; in 1911 they were 219,245,878. Assessed value of taxable property, in 1908, was $17,941,628, and in 1911, it was $120,000,000. Building permits in 1908, were $2,240,450; in 1911, the figures were $12,609,478. These and like figures of phenomeal growth in every department of civic service, are set forth in diagram and figure, in this splendid anniversary number of the Albertan, which, in enterprise, typographic skill and opulent illustration cannot be beaten in any newspaper establishment in any city on the continent. The whole of the 72 large pages is studded with statistcis, literally stunning in their surprises. Wonderful as they are, they are evenascent as spring-time snow; they will all be dead to-morrow, and buried under new records of greater growth. The anniversary number for 1912 of the Albertan is a type of the boundless optimism of the West, which believes in itself; and with reason; if the agricultural, commercial and industrial resources of Alberta are only half as great as the Albertan sets them forth; if they correspond to the enterprise, go, and inexhaustible spirit of the Albertan: if they are as real and big and compelling as its anniversary number, and as it paints them, then the optimist is an inevitable individual.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Some newspapers are cracking jokes over a Tennyson being a milk-man. The great Tennyson would have made a model milk man, from the consumers standpoint. He gave irreproachable metre—measure—and if the milk man Tennyson does the same, he is an ornament to the profession.

Last September the "loyalists" elected Borden to settle the naval question, in a way worthy of Canada's loyalty to the Empire. Mr. Borden takes the "Nationalists" way, not the "loyalists" way. Shelving the navy suits the "Nationalists"; does it suit the "loyalists?"

SOMETHING HIGHER.

The Mail and Empire has the following:

Sir Wilfrid announces that he will lead the Liberal party as long as his health remains good. While, we are glad to learn from himself, his leadership has not been bad for his own health, it certainly has not been good for the health of his party.

The health of a "party" seems to be the height of the standard of a hide-bound partisan like our respected contemporary. It ignores the fact that there is a higher ambition than serving a party, that the country has claims upon a statesman, and that that statesman is truly great who subordinates considerations of party advantage and office holding to working for such an ideal as the good of the state. And Sir Wilfrid is such a statesman. Though he was the victim, in a party sense, of an acute attack of temporary political insanity last September, he had in that event the satisfaction of knowing that after fifteen years of government, he left Canada infinitely in advance in every sense of the standing place in which he found it. His administration of their lustra, gave the country such a powerful forward impetus, that it will take several vacillitating, hesitaging years of compromise, with principle and promise to operate as a check upon advance.

PELLETIER POUNCES UPON SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Denounces Him as an Enemy of His Religion and a Betrayer of "the Catholic Minority."

Ottawa, March 5.—The fat is in the fire. At midnight Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General in the Nationalist convention government, is still on his feet in midst of a stormy speech on the Manitoba school question. The House is filled and the galleries are crowded, and the Postmaster-General is shouting across the floor accusations against Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He has charged the Liberal Chief with the betrayal of his co-religionists from 1896 down to the present day. Sir Wilfrid, he has declared, is responsible for the present Government's failure to include a separate school clause in the present legislation. "The Liberal party is responsible for this position to-day," he cried. "I am not going to say it is to last forever, but it is not now possible to run up stream against the torrent of public sentiment which Laurier and the Liberal party have released from the mountains all these years. For fifteen years," declared the Postmaster-General, "the Liberal ex-Prime Minister had been educating the people to his Toronto no-coercion programme."

SCHOOL QUESTION AGAIN

The school question broke upon the House to-night after Sir Wilfrid Laurier's motion criticising the terms of the territorial and financial portions of the bill had been voted down by the Government at the close of the afternoon debate. Five Nationalist members deserted the Government on the division, but Mr. Lamarche, speaking when the House resumed to-night, after dealing with the constitutional side of the question, cooed as softly as a suckling dove. He made it clear that they were not breaking with the Government, but merely protecting themselves on promises made to their constituents. In fact the Nationalists in the corridors are much elated over the entire situation, and are claiming a victory over Premier Borden all round. They have won the navy issue, they declare, frankly adding that the understanding is that the Government is to bring influence to bear upon Premier Roblin of Manitoba to grant the minority some school concessions. This claim was justified to some extent by the speeches of Hon. Messrs. Monk and Pelletier.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier, instead of offering any defence of his position, opened up a bitter personal attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He went back to 1896, and charged that the Liberal leader had betrayed his co-religionists. "Himself a Catholic, it was not good enough for him to submit to the judgment of those of the people most interested," shouted the Postmaster-General. "Instead of that he adopted the cry, 'Hands off Manitoba.'" (Liberal cheers.) Mr. Pelletier protested that it was all right for the Opposition to cheer, but Laurier had betrayed the Catholic minority. He had "torn the remedial bill to pieces with his cry, 'Hands off Manitoba.'" (Renewed cheers.) "It is all very well for hon. gentlemen opposite to cheer, but the minority for fifteen years had to pay double for school tax," retorted the Postmaster-General, "and the agreement signed with Manitoba, which was said to be a secret agreement, was signed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the Federal Government and Thomas Greenway for Manitoba."

The Strange Bed-Fellowship That Practical Politics Makes

What a spectacle the Government of Canada makes of itself! An alliance of contradictory ideas and mutually exclusive forces, it gives the impression of weakness and cowardice. Every time a real issue is raised there there comes a strain between the Tory Orangeism and the French Nationalist Ultramontism. It is the lodge against the hierarchy. When the clash of principles imperils the coherence of the Government the spoils and patronage of office constrain to harmony on the basis of a temporizing and non-committal policy. Quite plainly that is what happened in the matter of the Naval Service Act yesterday. The one thing the Prime Minister made clear was the determination of the Government to repeal the Navy Act of the Liberal Government, to which the British Admiralty gave heartiest approval. For the rest he promised the loyal Tories a new Navy Act, and to appease the French-Canadian Nationalists he promised that "before any permanent naval policy is put into force the people will be given an opportunity to pronounce upon it."

There you have the weakness of compromise, the result of confusion and cowardice. Of course it was inevitable. Any such alliance was doomed to just this fate. It served its purpose in the election campaign, but in the practical workings of government it has become troublesome. Indeed, already the ultra-Orange Tory journals supporting Mr. Borden are turning on Mr. Bourassa and are "chalking up 'No Popery' on the walls."

On his side the Nationalist leader is beginning to show his teeth. On Saturday the Mail and Empire had a paragraph under a Quebec date line headed "Bourassa is Angry," in which it was announced that "the Nationalist leader is said to be seriously contemplating the idea of severing his alliance with the Conservative party." That statement is of interest not only because of the light it throws on Mr. Bourassa's attitude, but also because of its admission, in the chief Ontario organ of the Borden Government, that there now exists a Bourassa-Borden alliance. The action of Laval University students in petitioning Hon. L. P. Pelletier to resign his portfolio as Postmaster-General over the Keewatin school question is also illuminating. And the fight in which Mr. Borden's Nationalist colleagues walk is revealed by "L'Evenement," Mr. Pelletier's official organ, which said yesterday: "If the French-Canadians do not resign they must have good reasons for not doing so. These men have already fought for the principle that is now involved, and they cannot possibly contradict themselves. If they remain in office it is because they hope, by dint of patience and perseverance, to obtain justice not only for the Catholic minority in Keewatin, but also for the Catholic minority of the whole of Manitoba."

Will the Nationalists succeed in dictating the policy of the Borden Government? So far they have not failed. They made it a condition of the Bourassa-Borden alliance that the Laurier navy legislation approved by the British Admiralty and once approved by Mr. Borden himself, would be repealed. Yesterday Mr. Borden announced the repeal of that legislation. They insisted that a plebiscite be taken on any navy proposal before its enactment. Yesterday Mr. Borden promised that before the Government's navy policy would be put into force the people would be given an opportunity to vote on it. They insisted on the restoration of the Separate School System in Manitoba and its continuance in the Keewatin district. And now Hon. Mr. Pelletier through his personal organ, declares that the Nationalists will not surrender and will not resign, but will fight till they win back what Sir Charles Tupper was unable to hold in 1896. Will they succeed? That is the question involved in the Bourassa-Borden alliance.

BURNHAM'S FOG HORN.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—When reading the "Morning Times" of yesterday, I was greatly surprised to once more hear Burnham's Fog Horn, Perceval G. S. Webb. I thought lately that something must have happened to the fog horn, as we have not heard from it for some time. Now, it is almost enough to make one turn against their morning meal to pick up the "Times" and find that it contains nearly a column of rot from Perceval G. S. Webb, instead of giving us as subscribers, a column of general news, which one would prefer to read.

I notice that these letters are signed "Perceval G. S. Webb." Now, Mr Editor, who is this individual? Where did he come from? Is he a living being or is he Perceval G. S. Webb? Did he come from any place or did some crow drop him when he was flying over the city? Or is Perceval G. S. Webb one of those who came to this city a short time ago, and who are now trying to run it? Should Mr. Burnham not give this Perceval G. S. Webb something to do? For Heaven's sake get him out of town—I am sick of seeing his name in print, and sicker of seeing what he signs. Could not Burnham get his tool a job on some timber slide, where he could slip into the river and get his mouth closed until he could scramble to shore?

Does he think we Canadians don't know how to vote? Those of us who have been supporting the Conservative party for forty or fifty years, being insulted by a "butter-in" who has about the same brains as a goat has persistency and impudence. Please, Perceval, go way back and sit down.

I have voted Conservative and my family have voted Conservative for fifty years, but I can say to you, Mr. Editor, and you know who I am, that I do not intend voting Conservative any longer, and I have no objections to saying that to you, Liberal as you are. I would no more think of voting with Perceval G. S. Webb, or what he represents, than I would think of cutting off my right hand. I decline to vote Conservative any longer—not that I have any great love for Grits, but the way my party has gone to pieces, has soured me to the bone. Newcomers are allowed to repeatedly speak for the good old Conservative Party, and newcomers are slipped into offices of responsibility that are the due of old-time Conservatives, who have borne the burden and fought the battles for half a century.

Perceval, it is such fellows as you that are going to destroy our city. The under current of dissatisfaction and unrest that permeates the city at the present time is not working to the good of the city, and if it is to continue, all the manufacturers' committees and commissioners and councils and boards of trade that could be appointed, will not be able to undo the harm that is being done and is affecting our fair city as she present, through such loud mouth-pieces as yourself. It is about time that any decent newspaper would sit on such fellows as you.

Yours truly,

Old Conservative Voter and an Organeman.

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade. I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured."

Eaton Team Are Sore Blame Victorias Because They Were Refused Rink

Special to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, MAN., MARCH 6.—The angriest bunch of hockey players between Halifax and the Mountains to-day is the Eaton crew. The soreness developed by the neglect of the Victoria players to show a welcome to the Ontario challengers, augmented to-day by the refusal of the Auditorium Ring Manager Anderson to carry out the practise schedule, arranged by the Eaton people, on the ground that it is not fair to allow Eatons the advantages of practice on the Auditorium Rink until Friday, and now the Ontario boys are hopping mad. They blame the Vics. for the rink situation, and it looks as if they will go on the ice against them as mad as hornets. The Eatons showed their soreness last night by wearing Calgary colours, and by cheering the broncbos whenever they had a chance, which was seldom.

PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH BALL CLUB PROPOSITION A SUCCESS

The success of the Peterborough Baseball Club is assured by the manner in which the stock has been subscribed since the lists were opened on Monday. Everyone seems to be enthusiastic over the prospects. The merchants are supporting the proposition because they realize that it will not only bring many visitors here but will keep townspeople at home and therefore cannot fail to benefit business conditions. Manufacturers have got in behind the movement because they know that such a team will solve the labour problem, as it will keep the employees satisfied to remain in Peterborough. Every manufacturer knows that his employees must have some amusement and they do not stay long in a town where there is nothing going on but the daily routine. A good ball team in a league such as the Canadian League, is just what is needed in Peterborough.

A glance over the following list of provisional directors and officers of the Peterborough Baseball Club Limited will show the interest representative citizens are taking in the project. Provisional directors, Messrs. W. H. Denham, E. G. Patterson, Mayor Bradburn, T. F. Matthews, W. McIlroy, E. Desantel, and Dr. Wightman. Treasurer, M. E. McLeod, Manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Secretary, Mr. W. S. Davidson.

The executive will meet to-night to select a manager and to settle the grounds question. An application for a charter is being made to-day to the Ontario Legislature.

CANOE CLUB TURN TABLES ON ALL STARS

TORONTO, NOV. 5.—The champion Canoe Club easily defeated the picked All-Star aggregation at Ravina Rink last night by the score of 9 to 3, although the score at half time was a tie, three all, thus winning the rounds by a score of 11 to 7.

There was a larger crowd present at this game than at Saturday night's game and they certainly witnessed one of the fastest and hardest-fought struggles that has been played in Toronto this winter.

Many of the wise ones predicted that the All-Stars would run away, with the champs on account of their getting accustomed to each other on Saturday night, but such was not the case. They started off, however, in a whirlwind fashion and for a few minutes kept the Paddlers continually on the defensive, and but for the great defence of Sidley and Gooch and the gilt-edged work of Laird in goal they would surely have got away with good lead.

After about eight minutes of play, Jupp, the speed merchant from Orillia, set sail for the opponents' citadel and never stopped until he had banged in No. 1 for his team. This lead was, however, shortened, as Dopp and Murray both scored for the Red Ring boys in quick succession. Armstrong, from Trenton, who is certainly one grand defence man, then started a lone journey down the ice and shot before attempting to go in on the defence, beating Laird. This goal tied the score and both teams were extending themselves to the limit, with the crowd going wild with excitement. McKenzie and Murray, the two Midgets on the Canoe Club forward line then uncorked one of the prettiest pieces of combination seen throughout the game, but Armstrong tied the game up a few minutes later by slamming in a rebound. This was all the scoring done in the first half, and the players of both teams were pretty well exhausted when the gong sounded.

On resuming play the All Star again forced matters very much, but Laird was stopping them from all sides and it was impossible to get one past him. The game was very fast at this period, the defence players of both teams making some sensational rushes, while the forwards were checking back like fiends. Murray went in unassisted and beat Hainsworth on a very pretty shot. McKenzie scored No. 5 for his team on a rebound and a moment later Murray, who has certainly jumped into the individual class, passed four men and scored. The All Stars displayed some fine combination work at this junction and got right in on Laird, but he was Johnny-on-the-spot on every occasion. Dopp scored on a lucky one for his team which glanced in off Hainsworth's skate and a few minutes later after Murray had again evaded the great All-Star defence, shot on Hainsworth, who stopped, but Romeril was there to bang in the rebound. Sidley came down the ice on one of his famous rushes but shot wide, but scored a second later on a pass from behind the goal.

The pick of the All-Star team was Armstrong at cover, his rushing and stick-handling being of the highest class. The other players all played a grand game but they were beaten by the better team and have no excuse to make.

Outside of Laird's great work in the nets, Sidley, Romeril and Murray were the shining stars of the champions, the latter in particular being second to none on the ice.

Some of the players were inclined to rough matters, but the referee, H. Burgoyne, handled the game well and inflicted twelve penalties, seven to the All-Stars and five to the Canoe Club.

PETERBORO' CURLERS WIN AT KEENE

Peterborough rinks figured in four games in Keene yesterday. The occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of the inauguration of the Keene Curling Club.

The Peterborough skips were Messrs. R. M. Waddell, R. G. Sturgeon, A. Moore and H. Foote. The completion of the round left Peterborough with seventeen shots to the good. Campbellford and Norwood were also represented at the event, which later in the day culminated in a banquet. Speeches were made by Mr. J. H. Connal, president of the Peterborough Club, and Mr. W. G. Ferguson, Dr. McWilliams of Keene and Mr. John McKelvie of Norwood replied. The gathering broke up with cheers for the clubs and the singing of the National Anthem.

Four rinks will go to Orillia to-morrow to compete for the Neil-Sheppard cup, one-half of which, as already been competed for. The following skips will probably represent Peterborough: Messrs. R. Neil, G. Morrow, T. Lang, T. F. Matthews.

The draw for to-night's games in connection with the local Bonspiel is as follows:

Yeats	W. G. Ferguson
Medd	Read
Wightman	Connal
Maitland	Sturgeon
Campbell	Waddell
J. N. Ferguson	Lang
Fitzgerald	Harstone

Substitutes—Morrow, Taylor, McIlroy, Foot.

There is more pathos than humour in the case of Charley Foust, the Kansas farmer who travelled with the New York Giants last year in the role of jester and who this season has been turned down cold by Manager McGraw.

Foust insists that he was instrumental in bringing the National League pennant to New York. He avers that the world's championship was lost because McGraw failed to provide him with a new uniform; and now he is down and out—McGraw has tired of him and his antics.

According to what can be learned, Foust is little better than a vagrant. It is said that he sleeps at nights in the doorway of McGraw's billiard room in New York. He eats wherever and whenever he can, according to reports, and has failed in his efforts to induce McGraw to help him out.

It is stated that the Giants' manager jumped out of New York a day in advance of his scheduled programme in order to escape the importunities of his former jester, who insisted that he be taken along to Marlin, Texas. Mugsy has been worried almost to distraction by Foust's entreaties, and what started out as a joke has become a serious matter.

Foust, it is stated, has a brother in Kansas, this brother being a well-to-do farmer. Charley came east to shine as a ball player. He doesn't know the first principles of the game but, being "kidded" by McGraw and his men into believing that he was the real thing, C. Victory severed all home ties, and is now possessed with the idea that he is the greatest that ever happened.

It is to be regretted that the matter has been allowed to go this far. It is up to the management of the New York club to induce Foust to return to his farm—or send him there if necessary.

TWO GAMES PLAYED IN MERCANTILE LEAGUE

The Mercantile League is fast completing its schedule and the championship will be decided within the next few days. Two games were pulled off last night, the Machine Shop defeating the Lock Works and the Bell Telephone Company taking a fall out of the Clerks.

The Lock Works-Machine Shop fixture was the first on the card and once more the luckless Lock Works went down to defeat, completing their second season in the Mercantile League without winning a game. They should have got away with a tie game last night, Joe Huard scoring one in his own goal by losing the puck as he tried to carry it across the mouth of the nets, the rubber slipping between the posts. The score was 2 to 1 in favour of the Machine Shop, the half time figure being the same.

The Bell Telephone team trimmed the Clerks in the second battle by 3 to 1. The Clerks were short-handed and used Burke of the Bell team while they were a man shy for the first five minutes until Campbell of the Machine Shop came to the rescue. The Bell scored two goals while their opponents played six men to seven, and added another before half time, when the teams were at full strength. The Clerks got the only goal in the second half, White banging in a rebound from Nicholls' shot.

Leo Derocher refereed both games satisfactorily.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

In an exciting and well-played game at Brock Street Rink yesterday afternoon, the Central School team defeated the South Central School septette by 6 goals to 4. At half-time the score was tied, each team having found the nets twice. The game was featured by the brilliant work of the two rovers, Cavanah for Centrals, and Richardson for South Central. The pair scored nearly all the goals on rink length rushes, showing speed and great stick-handling ability. M. Kennedy refereed the contest satisfactorily.

Goal-Keeper Joe Dwyer and Cover-Point Denison of the Bear Cats, left on the 8.20 train this morning for Orillia, where they will play for the Northern All-Star Juniors against the Younkers to-night. The other members of the team are selected from the Barrie, Midland and Collingwood clubs. Steve Vair of Barrie is managing the All Stars and Gren. Caldwell of the same town, will referee the bout.

A very interesting game of hockey was played last night at Brock Street Ring from 7 to 8 between the Dye Works and Adamson & Dobbin, resulting in a score of 5-0 in favour of The Dye Works. The game was rough on both sides at some times, although credit must be given Adamson & Dobbins for being a little the rougher. Chuckey Mein, cover-point for the Dye Works, was a little out of place with a hockey stick, for at times he had to be reminded that he was not playing lacrosse. Billy Knight, the Dye Works goal-tender, played a good game, as did also Cranfield on right wing and Turner on left wing. Both did good work and as for the reliable Edgar Lebar, he was good, his work being satisfactory to both teams.

BASEBALL

Ottawa, March 6.—Manager Frank Shaughnessy has practically secured a pitcher for the Ottawa Canadian League team after spending some time hunting for the right man to hold down that position with the locals. His name is McCormac, and he was formerly with Lynchburg, in the Virginia State League, a class B organization. Shaughnessy played in that league himself, and he knows McCormac's play down to the ground. "He's some catcher," says Frank, "and he'll make good hands down in this company. He was the best pinch hitter that Lynchburg had last year, and would have been with them yet but for some trouble with the owner of the club. Mac has a nasty temper, but he can play ball." The new player hit .246, which is mighty good for a catcher. He was formerly with the North Dakota University nine.

Now that Ottawa is on the ball map, letters are coming in like the answers to a patent medicine ad., and it keeps Frank busy sorting them out in the hopes of landing a good one in the bunch. Pitcher George Winter, of the Torontos, writes that he has a couple of good ones in hand down at Burlington, Vt., and wants to send them on for a trial. One rejoices in the name of Shortsleeves, while the other carries the name of Munson. They will likely be given a try-out.

The amateurs in the city league will be given a chance to make good with the pros. "I am prepared to take a chance on some of the players in the city league," said Manager Shaughnessy. "I won't pay transportation for players to come up if I can get them here."

The Canadian League meeting will be held within the next few days and the schedule drawn up. The other teams in the league will receive a good guarantee from the locals for their trips to Ottawa, probably $220, while Peterborough will come up with $120 for the pleasure of entertaining the teams from the vicinity of Berlin and Hamilton. This will ensure them against losing money on their heavy travelling expenses.

A Blacklister Comes To Grief On Water Street

The over-generous actions of a stranger proved disastrous to the welfare of James Wallace yesterday afternoon. Wallace, whose name occupies a place in the Indian list, met the stranger on Water street, and was invited by the latter to share in the contents of a twenty-five cent flask. Before parting, the stranger persuaded Wallace to accept a voluntary contribution of one fifty-cent flask, giving as his excuse for this outburst of generosity that he did not want to take it home with him. Wallace accepted the flask, which latter fell into the hands of the police, and incidentally its owner met a similar fate.

Before Magistrate Dumble this morning Wallace admitted having had liquor in his possession yesterday, and also related his unique experience with the stranger on Water street. The partly emptied flask was produced in court. His Worship imposed a fine of ten dollars with a time limit of ten days to pay it in attached.

WASTING THEIR TIME

Dear Sir,—A petition is in circulation in Otonabee, asking the Minister of Education to prevent the establishment of the new Separate School. The reason is that the erection of a separate school in the district would affect seriously three other sections. Those circulating the petition should have considered the effect of the erection of a Separate school, before taking the action that they did during the summer of last year. The ratepayers of the Section now see that the policy pursued was detrimental to the best interests of that portion of the township, and they also see that the minority that they have endeavoured to destroy have undertaken the erection of a school so as not to interfere with those who desire to go to school together. The trustee that was elected at the time was elected legally, and quite properly, as was shown by the Court.

The Minister of Education has no power in the matter, and those who are getting up their petition are only wasting their time. They had better not act on the advice of Mr. Burnham—they had better change their Solicitor.

Plans are ready for the erection of the new Separate School. Tenders will be invited as soon as the season will admit and it is expected that the school will be open for the Fall term.

Yours truly,
Ratepayer.

Judgment For $35

The case of Garrett vs. the Quaker Oats Co., has been settled in the Division Court. Judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs for $35. This case arose out of a case that was tried last summer, in which Jos. Shearer was found guilty of selling goods, the property of the Quaker Oats Company without reporting the sales and retaining the proceeds for himself. Mr. Sidney Garrett of Otonabee was one of the purchasers and the company demanded a settlement from those who had secured goods from the young man. The other claims were settled out of court. The demand against Mr. Garrett amounted to about $80 originally, but judgment was given for $35. Mr. F. D. Kerr represented the plaintiffs and Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for the defendant.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I DO really enjoy being confronted with the other person's point of view. The more logical and sensible it is, the better I like it.

A few weeks ago I wrote about the young couple who think they must have everything about the home better and more expensive than that which contented their parents, even though said parents have a much larger income than the young folks. For this tendency I rebuked the young people and advised them to be content with what was good enough for their fathers and mothers. One of my readers has a different point of view on this matter, and presents it in this interesting letter:

"Don't you think," he or she writes, "possibly the 'extravagance' of many young people in starting in a new home of their own is a revolt against the ugly cheap things which they have been all their lives obliged to live with, when in many cases a small expenditure catering to their growth in taste, and ideas of beauty could have been made by parents without any undue strain on the income, 'double what the young man' receives? Parents have become accustomed by the time their children are grown up, to a certain way of living—in many cases the standard is much lower than the income warrants — furniture collects, methods of serving meals are as 'we have always done it,' therefore, don't let us change. The young people grow tired of the sordid, unbeautiful way of doing things, and when they do have a chance to start out with fresh, new things, determine to have the best possible for themselves, and probably in many cases overdo it. Instead of wanting, as one would naturally suppose they would desire, to have their children lead a happier, easier life than theirs has been—in many cases 'it has always been good enough for me, why shouldn't it be for my children' seems to be the feeling of fathers and mothers.

"I realize perfectly that this is no reason for people living beyond their income and all young people ought to start with an education in which they are often deficient, but maybe it accounts for some of the extra expenditure.

ONE OF YOUR READERS."

When I wrote about the words that I liked, I concluded with the appeal: "What are your favourite words?" To publish all the lists that were sent in would take quite too much space, but I want to pass on the interesting fact that in practically every case, "home" led the list. They say that the Americans are coming to be a gad-about, undomestic people who chase the will-o'-the-wisp amusement everywhere, instead of staying at home and finding real happiness by the fireside. Surely this exaltation of the mere word "home" is a pointer in the opposite direction.

One woman, who also loves my favourite, "peace," gives such a beautiful and inspiring reason for her preferences that I want you to hear it.

"My two favourites," she writes, "are 'home' and 'peace.' I don't really know which comes first in my mind, as one seems earthly and the other not of this world. 'Happiness, children, joy, laughter,' etc., are all symbolized by the word 'home,' at least to me, and my chief aim in life is to have it mean the same to my husband and babies. 'Peace' to me means more the reward for human endeavour, and the greatest sermon to me is the look on the face of an earthly saint who is of those who 'having finished their course in peace do now rest from their labours.'"

WHAT TORONTO IS DOING TO PROTECT PUBLIC HEALTH

The Medical Health Officer Says Municipal Abattoir is Absolute Necessity—Yards Must be Cleaned Up

MILK SUPPLY IMPROVED

TORONTO, March 6th. — "If we are going to keep the city clean we must have an organized system of sanitary inspection," says Dr. Hastings in his summary of his first year's work in the Health Department.

"Every yard and lane in the congested districts must be inspected every week, and in the less congested districts, every two, three, or four weeks, as conditions may demand. This can be accomplished by the adoption of the following system: The dividing of the city into two districts—east and west—and placing a supervising inspector in charge of each, and having twelve sub-divisions, six in each district, with an inspector for each sub-division, who would be held responsible for the general sanitary condition and cleanliness of his district.

MODERN SANITARY APPLIANCES

All yard closets will have to be abolished by May 1st, 1912. Already 136 have been abolished.

The inspection of 46 lodging houses made a year ago showed only four to be satisfactory. Ten of these were closed; 30 were required to install sanitary appliances and renovate generally. A re-inspection in December of 1911, showed that 14 were again unsatisfactory. They were attended to.

From June 1st, 1911, to Jan. 1st, 1912, the number of tuberculosis patients under supervision increased from 125 to 691. In all 814 cases were attended to during the year, or 750 families. Of these 96 were discharged as cured.

The total number of cases recorded was 1,152 of which 336 were not visited. In all 4,002 individual visits were made by the nurses.

Physicians are rapidly realizing the fact that reporting of cases is compulsory.

INADEQUATE ACCOMMODATION

The report reads: "The inadequate accommodation for the advanced consumptive in Toronto is shown by the fact that of the 234 deaths recorded since June 1st, 130 died in the homes and 29 in institutions other than tuberculosis sanitaria. Fifteen of these cases are known to have applied for admission to a sanitarium. It would seem poor economy for a city to compel such patients to remain in the home during the most dangerous weeks of their illness."

Dr. Hastings concludes this portion of his report by stating the urgent need of a municipal sanitarium for advanced cases.

SLAUGHTER HOUSE PROBLEMS

"Even with these additional inspectors, although the number of animals killed under inspection has naturally increased since 1910, the number so killed is proportionately so small as to provide only a small measure of protection from diseased meat. This division is urgently in need of regulations governing the cattle markets, and the hours of killing in the private slaughter houses, and until these are authorized our inspectors cannot control the situation."

In all 9,323 animals have been slaughtered under inspection. The total number slaughtered was 132,649; so that only 7.6 per cent. was inspected. There were 23 diseased carcasses or 519 portions. The number of animals in the yards showing symptoms of disease was 1,002 and of these 454 were killed under government inspection, and 548 were held for slaughter under civic inspection.

A systematic examination of milk was also commenced last May.

"Our supply was found to be in a deplorable condition," say the report. "Watering and skimming seemed to be the rule, and the bacteriological examinations together with those for dirt, showed the supply in general to be absolutely unclean and dangerous from a health standpoint. Over 60 per cent. of the milk in May was adulterated, which with constant work on the part of the inspectors in making analyses, following up and locating the guilty parties, has resulted in the amount of adulteration being reduced by the end of the year to less than 15 per cent."

HAND BADLY LACERATED.

Yesterday afternoon, at about 4 o'clock, an accident occurred at the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co. plant, whereby Fred Green, a young married man, had his hand badly lacerated. It appears that Green was working at a planing machine, and in some way his hand was caught in the machinery. Dr. Morgan was summoned and had the young man sent home.

Last report gives Green's condition as favourable. He will, however, be incapacitated from work for some time.

ANTI-TIPPING BILL WAS INTRODUCED

ALBANY, MARCH 1.—Following the attempt which is being made by travelling salesmen to do away with tipping, a bill was introduced to-day by Assemblyman Heeley, making it a crime for proprietors of hotels, cafes, restaurants, sleeping or dining cars, to permit "tips" to be given and restricting employees of such places from receiving them.

A penalty of $100 a day is provided for in case proprietors shall not post in every room of a hotel and in the office a sign stating that "tips" are prohibited. Employees accepting "tips" are liable to a fine of $50. The bill is to take effect on September 1, 1912.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL

The new federal government isolation hospital which is situated on an unnamed island in one of the bays of Digby Island off Prince Rupert, is now practically complete with the exception of the interior furnishings.

The building is both large and handsome so that it should meet the requirements of this Pacific Port for many years to come. Not a glimpse of it can be seen from the harbour as it is screened by large spruce and other coniferous trees, some of which measure six feet in diameter.

FINE FOR THE FAMILY.

Kellog's Toasted Corn Flakes is economical as well as nutritious and zestful. A ten-cent package contains enough for twenty dishes.

OYSTER SUPPER

At the regular meeting of Court Little John No. 92, C.O.F., held last night, three new members were received, and two applications were also received. The usual business was transacted, after which an adjournment was made to Hooper's Palm Parlours, where an oyster supper had been prepared. In the short addresses that were subsequently made the annual excursion to Niagara was discussed as were also ways of booming the local Court.

THE CHOICEST STOCK OF WALL PAPERS IN THE CITY

See Us Before You Decorate

The Charm of Leather

COVERED walls has heretofore been had only in the homes of the very well-to-do.

Leather's expensive—in fact prohibitive to most of us.

Imitation leather has been altogether too much imitation and too little leather to appeal to people of discriminating tastes.

But recently one of our more progressive manufacturers engraved some wonderful rolls with which they print fine paper stock to so close a similitude that one instinctively runs his hand over it to "feel the grain."

There are sixteen shades, in seal grain, hide, etc.

We have these leathers in plain effects with decorative friezes and appliques (appliqué work will be the "rage" by Fall so get in ahead of the crowd)—and also used as grounds for some of the most stunning pattern papers ever shown in Canada—or anywhere else, for that matter.

Important Display of

New Spring Dress Fabrics

Entire Store Front Devoted To Their Display To-night and To-morrow

IF YOU WOULD KNOW what "Dame Fashion" has decreed for 1912 in the matter of Woollen Dress and Costume Fabrics, visit the "Cressman Store" and critically examine the new materials here exploited.

A truly comprehensive showing that includes all the important weaves in the newest and most exquisite shadings.

The makers of these handsome fabrics have surely done themselves credit—never have the weaves been so distinctly novel or the colourings so true to nature or so strikingly beautiful.

Prominently displayed you will find Serges, Whipcords, Tweeds, Worsteds, Voiles, etc., in an extensive collection of the newest Spring tones, including: leather, biscuit tans, yellow tans, champagnes, blues, greys, etc. We cannot too strongly advise early selection—choose now while you have the choicest variety—choose now that you may have your dresses ready to put on at the commencement of the season, thereby increasing their usefulness.

Among others you will find :

Travers Suiting

This ideal fabric is procurable in four different qualities. Only the best long, silky wool yarns are used in its production. A smooth, soft finished cloth that hangs beautifully. Obtainable in all the newest 1912 shadings, such as leather and Paris tan, golden and dark brown, navy, rose, green, grey, and black. 48 inches wide. Priced at, a yard .....50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25

Navy Blue Serge

Navy Blue is the leader for Spring, and Serge the newest material for Suits. Our new Serges surpass anything shown in previous seasons ; the quality is particularly good and the finish is beautiful. We guarantee every yard to give satisfactory service. Full 50 inches wide ; light and dark navy, also cornflower blue and black, at, a yard..... $1.25

Grey Shades

Have a most prominent position this Spring and our showing is worthy of more than passing attention. All qualities from 50c to $2 are included, in light, medium and dark shadings. Special attention is directed to the new Diagonal cloth which we are strongly featuring. 46 inches wide, at, a yard.... $1.00

New Dress Voiles

One of the most popular of all woollen lines for Spring and Summer wear. A beautifully fresh, crisp cloth that drapes beautifully, resists the dust, and wears splendidly. Procurable in all the newest 1912 shadings. 46 to 48 inches wide, at, a yard ..... 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25

AD. CLUB

the business man. He illustrated his point by referring to the methods of the medical profession. Whenever any brilliant idea has been originated by a doctor he did not merely keep it to himself, but passed it on to the members of the profession throughout the world.

Membership in the Ad. Club would lead the members to look upon each other not as competitors only, although they remained that, but as fellow men among whom petty jealousies and groundless imaginings had been entirely removed.

The merchant should connect up his selling force with his advertisements. His first duty should be to make sure that his clerks are fully acquainted with the goods advertised. They should not only know the prices but, as far as possible, they should know the qualities of the goods. Then when customers who have read the advertisements enquire about the goods advertised, the clerk should be in a position to talk intelligently about them to purchasers.

Mr. Ashley stated that in Toronto one of the difficulties had been to assure business men that there were no ulterior motives of gain on the part of those who projected the movement. This has been accomplished but it was not until recently. Members of the Clubs are receiving an education in advertising that they could not have purchased formerly. Advertising, he said, is a science of present-day business. The universities did not teach it. There are no professors of advertising in the colleges, and the Ad Club movement affords business men a great opportunity of studying this important feature of their business. From the addresses of prominent advertisers they get ideas that they can apply to their own selling methods. In other words the movement provides a liberal education in commerce to those who faithfully follow it.

Mr. Ashley said when the Clubs become sufficiently strong they will be able to eliminate fraudulent and illegitimate advertising.

He concluded a spirited address by criticising in a friendly manner local advertisements, and threw out a number of ideas that appealed to the members of the local Club.

Mr. C. C. Nixon presided over the meeting, at the conclusion of which a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Ashley, on motion of Mr. N. E. McWilliams, seconded by Mr. A. A. Fowler.

Mr. W. E. Conway expressed the hope that future speakers at the Club's meetings would be of equal ability with Mr. Ashley.

Business Meeting.

After the regular meeting the President, C. C. Nixon, called a meeting of the Executive, at which meeting it was decided to hold a semi-monthly meeting to alternate with the regular monthly meeting. Tuesday evening, two weeks from last night, was set as the date. It was left to the Programme Committee, namely, Mr. C. F. Hardy, Mr. Ross Cameron, Mr. W. Cochrane and Mr. J. MacNabb, along with the President, and the Secretary, Mr. J. McNichol, to arrange for the place of meeting and speakers.

Those Present.

Other than the speaker, those in attendance were: Messrs. Chas. C. Nixon, Robert H. Ross, Jas. Hamilton, J. McNichol, E. White, E. Manning, F. H. Dobbin, Russell Wotten, L. S. Etney, Louis Mendel, F. W. Trebilcock, R. A. McKee, A. A. Fowler, E. N. McWilliams, W. E. Conway, J. J. Thompson, L. J. Picard, Joseph Picard, W. S. Merrell, M. Hardill, C. F. Hardy ,F. E. Mills, W. George Henderson, J. M. Greene, J. John, Reg. H. Turner, George G. Chandler, Walter Stocker, G. A. Gillespie, H. B. Cowan and J. A. McNabb.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The telegraph operators on the Grand Trunk railway system have received notification from headquarters that their salaries have been increased, the increase to take effect at once.

In the absence of Conductor George Jobbitt, who is indisposed, Conductor Harry Perry is temporarily in attendance on the Lakefield train.

Colds

Don't trifle with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption invariably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with

as a quick cure for colds and grip, and by its use the more serious diseases may be avoided.

Eating Slowly

is good practice, if—you have plenty of time—and even if you haven't.

The busy man, who has only a half hour for lunch (but who requires unflagging energy) will "get up steam" quickly and pleasantly on a dish of and Cream.

Grape-Nuts

One can take time to eat slowly of this crisp, nutty brain-and-nerve nutriment, as it only requires a small bulk of this concentrated food to nourish an active man thoroughly during the day and keep brain clear for the calls upon it.

HER SKIN SEEMED ON FIRE

Every Other Treatment Failed But "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., Jan. 2nd, 1910.

"My wife was greatly distressed for three years with chronic Eczema on the hands, and the disease was so severe that it almost prevented her from using her hands. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, but none of them did any good. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves and she wore out three pairs without getting any benefit. As a last resort, I persuaded her to try "Fruit-a-tives", and the effect was marvellous. Not only did "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cure the Eczema, but the Asthma, which she suffered from, was also completely cured.

We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives". N. JOUBERT.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Eczema or Salt Rheum because "Fruit-a-tives" purifies the blood, corrects the Indigestion and Constipation, and tones up the Nervous System.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and valuable tonics, and is the greatest of all blood-purifying remedies.

50c. a box—6 for $2.50—or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SOMETHING NEW IN KISSES.

BOSTON, MASS., MARCH 6. — "Canned kisses" are now a feature of some Boston parties, and their popularity is said to be growing. At dinner parties the guests are seated at tables by place cards, that at first sight seem to be decorated with smears of red. Every man in the party receives a card. The hostess explains that the cards bear the impress of the lips of the young women guests, and each man must select his partner with only the impress of her lips to guide him. A little rouge is dabbed on the lips of the women, and then they kiss the white cards to make the impressions.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C. writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for suggested to send Agassiz Advertising by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

THE WEATHER

Although this is the 6th day of March, the temperature last night was down to 15 degrees below zero. At 7 o'clock this morning it was 5 below.

While Robin Redbreast is said to have already made his appearance, it does not necessarily follow that spring is here. Sometimes Robin is too optimistic, and frequently he must shiveringly regret his premature departure from the sunny south. Last year the date of his arrival (in number) was about March 17th. While the robin frequently makes a mistake, the blue bird never does. He timed his arrival for April 21st.

Sleighing became bad in town about the first of March last year, and was finished on the 10th, although it remained fair in the country for a week afterwards. There were reminders of winter's storms in the fence corners, etc., until April 11th.

The grass began to assume its shade of green about April 26th. The maples began to leaf May 5, were in half leaf by May 13, and full leaf on the 18th.

OBITUARY

ALLAN J. GRAHAM.

The many friends in town and district of Mr. A. J. Graham, a former local merchant, will regret to learn of his death at Iroquois, on Sunday, Feb. 25th.

The deceased carried on a clothing business in the stand now occupied by "The Fair," and left here five or six years ago.

GREAT McEWEN CO.

What the Manitoba Press Says About the Company That is to Play Our City Next Week

Not since the opening of our theatre has there been such a splendid entertainment as that given last night by the Great McEwen Co., which is to occupy the boards next week.

The entertainment opened with a few new experiments in sleight of hand and magic, which was simply immense, and it is not what he did, but how he did it, that made him spring into instant favour. McEwen is all right; he is clever, clean and novel in this line, and has something out to offer in a new and startling way, and many new things to offer in an original and striking manner. He hands out as lively and mystifying a programme in trickery as has ever been given in our city, and this part of the programme is alone worth the price of admission.

The last part of the entertainment opened with a brief lecture on hypnotism, which was practical and clearly showed to the audience that McEwen is a deep, practical psychologist; after which he called for subjects from the audience. Over 20 responded to the invitation. Then the fun of the evening started. It is safe to say that in the thirty-five minutes time this act was given, that McEwen had more fun in it than the great Flint, Pauline and others did when giving their entire show. A scream from start to finish hardly describes this act. One really must be present to appreciate it.

The entertainment as a whole is the best of its kind that the local management has ever given our people and no doubt the house will be packed the remaining nights of the week.

LOCAL MARKET WAS BRISK.

The local outside market presented a scene of bustle and activity this morning. At 11.40 a.m. there were ten loads of hay, one of straw, and several loads of wood stationed on the Market Square awaiting the arrival of the somewhat apathetic purchaser. The greater portion of the hay sold for sixteen dollars per ton, while the load of straw realized five dollars and a half. Wood sold all the way from $2 to $6 a load, with about as much difference in the quality as the price would indicate.

MANITOBA REFUSES

Premier Borden Explains Omission of School Clause

LEMIEUX ANSWERS CRITICS

Ottawa, March 7.—"It is not politically possible to put in force such provisions, because Manitoba will not accept the boundaries with any such provision. It is absolutely impossible to conceive of the province which is to be governed in one part by one constitutional provision and in another part by another provision. Whether I am right or wrong constitutionally, it is politically impossible."

The boundaries bill passed its second reading on a division of 114 to 76, giving the same Government majority as on Tuesday on the amendment, 38. The same five Nationalist members—Paquet, Lamarche, Sevigny, Bellemarc and Guilbault—voted with the Opposition.

The debate on the second reading was resumed on behalf of the Opposition by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux. He approved of the extension of the Ontario and Quebec boundaries to Hudson Bay. He noted that some stress had been laid on the announcement that Ungava is to be added to Quebec. The idea, no doubt, was to soothe the feelings of the Government's Quebec supporters. He would remind the House, however, that this territory had been offered to Quebec three or four years ago by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the offer had been accepted by Sir Lomer Gouin. Mr. Lemieux approved of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary as fixed by the late Government.

The proposal to give Ontario a thin red line up to Port Nelson, he regarded as unseemly and unordinary legislation. It would pave the way for future conflict between the two provinces.

Mr. Lemieux started on the school question phase of the debate. The bill, he said, was more important for what it does not contain than for what is in it. Nevertheless, this subject was not introduced by the Liberal party. The responsibility for its introduction must rest entirely with the "Nationalist wing of this coalition Government." It was a family quarrel.

Hon. L. P. Pelletier, in the course of his speech Tuesday night, had complained that he [illegible] called names. He had been called names by his Nationalist friends. Henri Bourassa had said that the conduct of the Minister made his British blood boil. Armand Lavergne, his own leader, had said, "I am ashamed of him."

Mr. Lemieux said Messrs. Monk, Pelletier and Nantel had been archtraitors to their own friends, and to their own promises. The Liberals were mere onlookers and they were enjoying the situation.

The Ministers were responsible for this agitation in Quebec, and they would reap their reward if they dared to open a constituency in that province. Mr. Lemieux then said that when he heard Mr. Monk declare that the school question was settled, he had found it necessary to pinch himself. What would his Nationalist friends had said had he made such a statement before Sept. 21 last? Apparently, however, this double game had been worth the playing, and in order to be a little more free, Mr. Monk had announced that he had severed his connection with Borden.

Turning to the history of the Manitoba school question, Mr. Lemieux said that the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been lofty. His watchword had been "No surrender." Provincial rights had always been the policy of Blake, Mowat and of Laurier. That had been Sir Wilfrid's policy when in 1905 Mr. Monk had endeavored to force the French language upon the Legislatures of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lemieux next dealt with Mr. Monk's statement that Catholics had no vested rights in the district of Keewatin, and Senator Landry, Speaker of the Senate, as declaring just the opposite. What had brought about such a remarkable change? Were the Nationalist members afraid of losing their portfolios, or were they not sincere in their denunciation of the Liberal policy last September?

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden said that his hon. friend entertained the House at considerable length with numbers of reminiscences very delightfully rendered and of amusing character. "He had the good grace to congratulate the Government for extending the boundaries of Ontario and Quebec, saying that it was only implementing their own resolutions.

"He might tell us," added Mr. Borden, "why these resolutions were only so much waste paper for thirteen years, and whether that delay had anything to do with the delay in extending the boundaries of Manitoba."

"If he is of the opinion," said Mr. Borden, "that Ontario is not getting fair play, what does he say about his own treatment of that province, which gave it no right to an outlet at the bay? We have secured to Ontario a port on the bay. I ask you to contrast the treatment."

In conclusion, Mr. Borden said they had submitted this bill along the lines of the B.N.A. act. The course the Government had taken was in the best interests of all concerned. [illegible] it would appeal to the majority of the House, as well as to the majority of the people of Canada.

Dr. Merchant Reports Bad State of Affairs in Schools

INEFFICIENCY IS FREQUENT

Toronto, March 7.—That the English-French schools of the province—the so-called "bilingual" schools—are lacking in efficiency is the conclusion at which Dr. Merchant, the special investigator whom the Government appointed to make a thorough inquiry into this whole question, has arrived.

Comprehensive and thorough, the long-looked-for report, which was handed out yesterday afternoon by the Minister of Education, deals with every phase of the intricate situation which has arisen in this province through the teaching of the English and French language in schools.

A remedy is proposed by Dr. Merchant. It is two or three fold in its bearings, but if worked out properly will no doubt effectively deal with the whole situation. In the first place, the report states definitely that the best results are obtained when the medium of instruction is in the beginning the mother-tongue.

The total number of schools visited by Dr. Merchant since his appointment on Nov. 2, 1910, was 200, with 198 teachers. The scope of the investigation included the conditions under which the schools are working, the efficiency of the schools, the causes of inefficiency in schools, and the conditions which promote efficiency.

An examination of all the tests applied makes it evident that the English-French schools on the whole are lacking in efficiency. The tests combine to show that a large proportion of the children in the communities concerned leave school to meet the demands of life with an inadequate equipment in education.

Data regarding individual schools was obtained from the school records and from statements of the teachers, checked and supplemented by Dr. Merchant's observations, and enquiries from other sources.

A comparatively large number of teachers without certificates was found in the inspectorate of Russell and the city of Ottawa. A number of teachers in the County of Essex were also without certificates.

Twenty teachers were found in the inspectorate of Russell and Ottawa with less than one year's experience in Ontario.

Two of these teachers receive only $150 per year as salary, the lowest amount recorded in any of the schools visited by Dr. Merchant.

One teacher in this inspectorate had 41 years' experience in Ontario, and in this inspectorate is a teacher receiving $1,300, the highest salary recorded in any of the schools visited.

Irregularities were discovered in the attendance of pupils in the English-French schools of Essex.

The number of French-speaking pupils enrolled in the schools visited was far in excess of the English-speaking pupils.

English is a subject of study in all the schools visited.

The language used in teaching English is English in practically all the schools.

In about 85 per cent. of the schools in which the language of instruction is specified as "English and French" in forms 3 and 4, French is most used.

English conversation as distinguished from English reading finds a place in most of the schools in Eastern Ontario and the districts, but is seldom regarded as a separate subject of study in the schools of Essex and Kent.

Teachers in these English-French schools show zeal in their work, but are handicapped by lack of academic and professional training.

The best results are obtained when the medium of instruction is in the beginning the mother tongue.

The education of the French-speaking child should commence, and be continued during the first four years, in the French language.

The transition from French to English is best made gradually through the method of double teaching.

The time when English should be used continuously as the language of instruction depends on the ability of the pupil to speak English, and the [illegible] conditions of the locality in which the school is situated.

Let the pupil remain three years in form 1 and two years in form 2, during which time English is made gradually to replace French as the medium of instruction.

Increase the efficiency of the teachers.

Teach English-speaking pupils apart from the French-speaking pupils in the first and second forms. In such schools the classes are combined with advantage in form 3.

Proper care and methods in training French-speaking pupils leads to rapid progress. Persistence in the maintenance of varied exercises and insistence on freedom of expression is essential.

There should be a new series of French readers showing teachers how to cover the whole field of teaching English to French-speaking pupils.

Early study of French gives French-speaking pupils a good knowledge of their language. Fluency can then be easily acquired later on.

Readjustment of the requirements of the entrance examination which would shorten the course for those who study French.

The difficulty of securing an adequate supply of competent teachers is commented upon.

There should be a closer connection of the English-French schools with the high school system of the province.

Offer For I. C. R.

Montreal, March 7.—At a meeting of the council of the Board of Trade yesterday, the railway committee reported with regard to the application of the Central Railway Co., that the council should approve of the granting of the usual subsidies for that line, which runs between a port in Georgian Bay and Montreal, as it affords another direct route for the export of western products, and because the company offers to give running rights to the Intercolonial Railway over its line from Montreal to Midland and also to Toronto and to Port Stanley via Stratford and London, extensions which the company is authorized to build, thus extending the Intercolonial into many sections of Ontario.

The council approved the committee's report and will address the Minister of Railways and Canals accordingly.

Aged Woman Injured.

Toronto, March 7.—Expecting that a Bloor car coming east at the corner of Bloor and Spadina avenue, would stop, Mrs. John Bertram, 4 Spadina road, 73 years of age, stepped in front of the car and was hurled towards the sidewalk, sustaining a fractured skull. Mrs. Bertram's condition is considered serious, owing to her advanced age. Dr. Milroy, the family physician, stated that Mrs. Bertram had remained unconscious for some hours, but that she is now very much better and able to speak.

The motorman in charge of the car claims that his brake failed to work. This is probably the case, as he turned the corner and travelled fully a hundred and fifty feet down Spadina avenue before bringing the car to a stop.

MAJORITY IS FIFTY

The Legislature Votes Down J. C. Elliott's Amendment

STUDHOLME IS OPPOSED

Toronto, March 7.—By a vote of 78 to 22, with Allan Studholme of Hamilton voting with the Opposition, the Legislature yesterday rejected an amendment put before the House by J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex, to an amendment introduced by R. R. Gamey, which was another amendment to the main motion, introduced by N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition.

The discussion which has gone on for some time now ended with a blaze of fireworks, chiefly emitted by the Premier, who at times grew heated in his denials and retorts.

Sir James Whitney brought the debate to a close. He did not hesitate to criticise Mr. Elliott for his action in connection with his amendment to Mr. Gamey's amendment. The amendment, which was moved by Mr. Elliot, said Sir James, was not the one which he originally intended to introduce. It was not the one of which a copy was sent to the Prime Minister, nor was it the one which Mr. Elliott said he would introduce. After sending the copy to the Government, Mr. Elliott went to Ottawa and received from Sir Wilfrid Laurier the amendment which he had introduced, but which Sir Wilfrid himself did not introduce in the Ottawa House on Tuesday.

While the vote was being taken the members sang patriotic songs, and when the majority was announced there was great Government applause.

Mr. Studholme (E. Hamilton) resuming the boundary debate, said he did not believe one business man in the House would accept for himself a settlement of the kind as that had been made on the proposition, as submitted to Ontario by the Federal Government. The five-mile strip was so small, that to Mr. Studholme's mind, if it had been offered under the former Dominion Government, the Prime Minister of Ontario would not have accepted it. "Why shouldn't Manitoba have given Ontario a 15-mile strip for all time to come?" he asked, "absolutely free and under Ontario's own jurisdiction, in order to avoid endless troubles?"

No information that he could honestly vote upon had been given to the House, he said. When some definite statement given as man to man, was presented to the House, he would be ready to vote on it.

Sir James Whitney said it had not been his intention to make any further comment in addition to what he had said before, but in the light of events of the past few days, he felt it incumbent on himself to say a few words more. The amendment which had been introduced was very near the border of irregularity, but it was not his wish to have it declared out of order, because it left open the way for further discussion. What was out of order, however, was the reference to the financial side of the question. If the amendment had been moved at the beginning of his speech it would have been a different amendment altogether. The one he (Mr. Elliot) intended to move, a copy of which was sent to the Premier, was a home-made amendment, but the one Mr. Elliott did move was one which was sent from Ottawa, which was carefully guarded and not at all like the one which Mr. Elliott intended to move.

Sir James referred to the conflicting arguments of the Opposition. He said the previous contention was that the Province of Ontario had not "pushed" its claim sufficiently. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had never said that Ontario's claims had not been sufficiently pushed, and Sir James doubted if he ever would.

"This province," continued Sir James," has been given the only valuable piece of property in the district. There is no use in further discussion. We have proved that no time was lost by this province in the deliberations, and there was even a supplementary claim presented."

In concluding, Sir James pointed out very forcibly that at the Port Nelson terminal Ontario would have the free and undisputed right of way for ten miles along the water's edge.

J. C. Elliott, West Middlesex, in referring to Sir James Whitney's remark that Mr. Elliott's amendment had been sent from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, declared that "the statement the hon. the Premier made is untrue."

Mr. Rowell concluded the debate.

"The reason—the sole and only reason—why we introduced the financial e[illegible] of the agreement," he began, "was that since Mr Elliott's amendment was drawn up we got a copy of the Ottawa bill with regard to the boundary settlement, and saw that the financial terms had been rearranged with Manitoba. I want to say that Sir Wilfrid Laurier never saw or heard of, either directly or indirectly, Mr. Elliott's amendment to the amendment."

Mr. Rowell concluded his remarks by asking where Hon. G. E. Foster, A. E. Kemp and other Conservative members of the Dominion Parliament were when the Laurier bill was passed in 1909, giving both ports to Manitoba.

"We ask you to vote for the amendment to the amendment," he pleaded, "because the Government has neglected its duty on this question, and on the taxation question it has been asleep."

Smash-Up Near Laurel.

Orangeville, March 7.—A rear-end collision took place at three o'clock yesterday morning near Laurel, a short distance from here, between a freight and a stock train. The engineer of the first freight left his train, which carried stock, and came on here for water, and in his absence another freight on the Owen Sound division crashed into it. Three cars were derailed, and a cattleman, whose name cannot be ascertained at present, was hurt. Dr. A. J. Hunter, of this town, was taken to the wreck on a special train. Traffic was delayed several hours.

Defenceless on Pacific.

Newcastle, March 7.—Earl Percy, speaking here on Japanese supremacy on the Pacific, said the position was delicate. Japanese immigration had been restricted by the U.S.A., and our Dominions, which she might resent, therefore, the defensive resources of the Empire should be co-ordinate. If we had not fleet units on the Canadian Pacific coasts, Canada, if attacked by the Japanese, could only be saved by the U.S.A. for the German menace made us unable to do anything in the Pacific.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. Oh. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glasses, or a few glasses, of the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an adjustment in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segment must be set low, so low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eyes. It certain that means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Famous Invisible Kryptok. Ask for booklet describing them.

INFLAMMATION AND PAIN

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Croxton, Iowa.—"I was troubled for a long time with inflammation, pains in my side, sick headaches and nervousness. I had taken so many medicines that I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. A friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to health. I have no more pain, my nerves are stronger and I can do my own work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after everything else had failed, and I recommend it to other suffering women."—Mrs. WM. SHALK, 625 W. Howard St., Croxton, Iowa.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"No; a very natural one, I should say. Cannot you tell me positively whether you did this or not?"

"Yes, I did. I had forgotten it, but I remember now." And the glance she cast him while not meeting his eye showed that she understood the importance of the admission. "I know," she said, "what you are going to ask me now. Did I feel anything there but the flowers and the tulle? No. Mr. Gryce, I did not. There was no poniard in the wound."

Mr. Gryce felt around, found a chair and sank into it.

"You are a truthful woman," said he. "And," he added more slowly, "composed enough in character I should judge not to have made any mistake on this very vital point."

"I think so, Mr. Gryce. I was in a state of excitement, of course; but the woman was a stranger to me, and my feelings were not unduly agitated."

"Sweetwater, we can let my suggestion go in regard to those ten minutes I spoke of. The time is narrowed down to one, and in that one, Miss Clarke was the only person to touch her."

"The only one," echoed the lady, catching perhaps the slight rising sound of query in his voice.

"I will trouble you no further," So said the old detective, thoughtfully. "Sweetwater, help me out of this." His eye was dull and his manner betrayed exhaustion. But vigour returned to him before he had well reached the door, and he showed some of his old spirit as he thanked Miss Clarke and turned to take the elevator.

"But one possibility remains," he confided to Sweetwater, as they stood waiting at the elevator door. "Miss Challoner died from a stab. The next minute she was in this lady's arms. No weapon protruded from the wound, nor was any found on or near her in the mezzanine. What follows? She struck the blow herself, and the strength of purpose which led her to do this, gave her the additional force to pull the weapon out and fling it from her. It did not fall upon the floor around her; therefore, it flew through one of those openings into the lobby, and there it either will be, or has been found."

It was this statement, otherwise worded, which gave me my triumph over George.

V.

THE RED CLOAK.

"What results? Speak up, Sweetwater."

"None. Every man, woman and boy connected with the hotel has been questioned; many of them routed out of their beds for the purpose, but not one of them picked up anything from the floor of the lobby, or knows of any one who did."

"There now remain the guests."

"And after them—(pardon me, Mr Gryce) the general public which ruaned in rather promiscuously last night."

"I know it; it s a task, but it must be carried through. Put up bulletins, publish your wants in the papers; — do anything, only gain your end."

A bulletin was put up.

"The bulletin is a great go. I think—of course I cannot be sure—that it's going to do the business. I've watched every one who stopped to read it. Many showed interest and many emotion; she seems to have had a troop of friends. But embarrassment! only one showed that. I thought you would like to know."

"Embarrassment? Humph! a man?"

"No, a woman; a lady, sir; one of the transients. I found out in a jiffy all they could tell me about her."

"A woman! We didn't expect that. Where is she? Still in the lobby?"

"No, sir. She took the elevator while I was talking with the clerk."

"I don't think so. I had noticed her when she first came into the lobby. She was talking to her daughter who was with her, and looked natural and happy. But no sooner had she seen and read that bulletin, than the blood shot up into her face and her manner became furtive and hasty. There was no mistaking the difference, sir. Almost before I could point her out, she had seized her daughter by the arm and hurried her towards the elevator. I wanted to follow her, but you may prefer to make your own inquiries. Her room is on the seventh floor, number 712, and her name is Watkins. Mrs. Horace Watkins of Nashville."

Mr. Gryce nodded thoughtfully, but made no immediate effort to rise:

"Is that all you know about her?" he asked.

"Yes; this is the first time she has stopped at this hotel. She came yesterday. Took a room indefinitely. Seems all right; but she did blush, sir. I never saw it beat in a young girl."

"Call the desk. Say that I'm to be told if Mrs. Watkins of Nashville rings up during the next ten minutes. We'll give her that long to take some action. If she fails to make any move, I'll make my own approaches."

Sweetwater did as he was bid, then went back to his place in the lobby.

But he returned almost instantly.

"Mrs. Watkins has just telephoned down that she is going to—to leave, sir."

"To leave?"

The old man struggled to his feet. "No. 712, do you say? Seven stories," he sighed. But as he turned with a hobble, he stopped. "There are difficulties in the way of this interview," he remarked. "A blush is not much to go upon. I'm afraid we shall have to resort to the shadow business and that is your work, not mine."

But here the door opened and a boy brought in a line which had been left at the desk. It related to the very matter then engaging them, and ran thus:

"I see that information is desired as to whether any person was seen to stoop to the lobby floor last night at or shortly after the critical moment of Miss Challoner's fall in the half story above. I can give such information. I was in the lobby at the time, and in the height of the confusion following this alarming incident, I remember seeing a lady,—one of the new arrivals (there were several coming in at the time)—stoop quickly down and pick up something from the floor. I thought nothing of it at the time, and so paid little attention to her appearance. I can only recall the suddenness with which she stooped and the colour of the cloak she wore. It was red, and the whole garment was voluminous. If you wish further particulars,—though, in truth, I have no more to give, you can find me in room 356.

"HENRY A. McELROY."

Humph! This should simplify our task," was Mr. Gryce's comment, as he handed the note over to Sweetwater. "You can easily find out if the lady, now on the point of departure, can be identified with the one described by Mr. McElroy. If she can, I am ready to meet her anywhere."

When he returned, it was not with his most hopeful air.

"The cloak doesn't help," he declared. "No one remembers the cloak. But the time of Mrs. Watkins' arrival was all right. She came in directly on the heels of this catastrophe."

"She did! Sweetwater, I will see her. Manage it for me at once."

"The clerk says that it had better be upstairs. She is a very sensitive woman. There might be a scene, if she were intercepted on her way out."

"Very well." But the look which the old detective threw at his bandaged legs was not without its pathos.

And so it happened that just as Mrs. Watkins was watching the wheeling out of her trunks, there appeared in the doorway before her, an elderly gentleman, whose expression, always benevolent, save at moments when benevolence would be quite out of keeping with the situation, had for some reason, so marked an effect upon her, that she coloured under his eye, and, indeed, showed such embarrassment, that all doubt of the propriety of his intrusion vanished from the old man's mind, and with the ease of one only too well accustomed to such scenes, he kindly remarked:

"Am I speaking to Mrs. Watkins of Nashville?"

"You are," she faltered, with another rapid change of colour. "I—I am just leaving. I hope you will excuse me. I—"

"I wish I could," he smiled, bobbling in and confronting her quietly in her own room. "But circumstances make it quite imperative that I should have a few words with you on a topic which need not be disagreeable to you, and probably will not be. My name is Gryce. This will probably convey nothing to you, but I am not unknown to the management below, and my years must certainly give you confidence in the propriety of my errand. A beautiful and charming young woman died here last night. May I ask if you knew her?"

"I?" She was trembling violently now, but whether with indignation or some other more subtle emotion, it would be difficult to say. "No, I'm from the South. I never saw the young lady. Why do you ask? I do not recognize your right. I— I—"

Certainly her emotion must be that of simple indignation. Mr. Gryce made one of his low bows, and propping himself against the table he stood before, remarked civilly:

"I had rather not force my rights. The matter is so very ordinary. I did not suppose you knew Miss Challoner, but one must begin somehow, and as you came in at the very moment when the alarm was raised in the lobby, I thought perhaps you could tell me something which would aid me in my effort to elicit the real facts of the case. You were crossing the lobby at the time—"

"Yes." She raised her head. "So were a dozen others—"

"Madam,"—the interruption was made in his kindliest tones, but in a way which nevertheless suggested authority. "Something was picked up from the floor at that moment. If the dozen you mention were witnesses to this act we do not know it. But we do know that it did not pass unobserved by you. Am I not correct? Didn't you see a certain person—I will mention no names—stoop and pick up something from the lobby floor?"

"No." The word came out with startling violence. "I was conscious of nothing but the confusion." She was facing him with determination and her eyes were fixed boldly on his face. But her lips quivered, and her cheeks were white, too white now for simple indignation.

"Then I have made a big mistake," apologised the ever-courteous detective. "Will you pardon me? It would have settled a very serious question if it could be found that the object thus picked up was the weapon which killed Miss Challoner. That is my excuse for the trouble I have given you."

He was not looking at her; he was looking at her hand which rested on the table before which he himself stood. Did the fingers tighten a little and dig into the palm they concealed? He thought so, and was very slow in turning limpingly about towards the door. Meanwhile, would she speak? No. The silence was so marked, he felt it an excuse for stealing another glance in her direction. She was not looking his way but at a door in the partition wall on her right; and the look was one very akin to anxious fear. The next moment he understood it. The door burst open, and a young girl bounded into the room, with the merry cry:

"All ready, mother. I'm glad we are going to the Clarendon. I hate hotels where people die almost before your eyes."

What the mother said at this outburst is immaterial. What the detective did is not. Keeping on his way, he reached the door, but not to open it wider; rather to close it softly but with unmistakable decision. The cloak which enveloped the girl was red, and full enough to be called voluminous.

"I don't know," faltered the mother in very evident distress. "He says he has a right to ask us questions and he has been asking questions about—about—"

"Not about me," laughed the girl, with a toss of her head Mr. Gryce would have corrected in one of his grandchildren. "He can have nothing to say about me." And she began to move about the room in an aimless, half-insolent way.

Mr. Gryce stared hard at the few remaining belongings of the two women, lying in a heap on the table, and half musingly, half deprecatingly, remarked:

The lady thus brought to the point made a quick gesture towards the girl who suddenly stood still, and, with a rising colour in her cheeks, answered, with some show of resolution on her own part:

"You say your name is Gryce and that you have a right to address me thus pointedly on a subject which you evidently regard as serious. That is not exact enough for me. Who are you, sir? What is your business?"

"I think you have guessed it. I am a detective from Headquarters. What I want of you I have already stated. Perhaps this young lady can tell me what you cannot. I shall be pleased if this is so."

"Caroline"—Then the mother broke down. "Show the gentleman what you picked up from the lobby floor last night."

The girl laughed again, loudly and with evident bravado, before she threw the cloak back and showed what she had evidently been holding in her hand from the first, a sharp-pointed, gold-handled paper-cutter.

"It was lying there and I picked it up. I don't see any harm in that."

"You probably meant none. You couldn't have known the part it had just played in this tragic drama," said the old detective looking carefully at the cutter which he had taken in his hand, but not so carefully that he failed to note that the look of distress was not lifted from the mother's face either by her daughter's words or manner.

"You have washed this?" he asked.

"No. Why should I wash it? It was clean enough. I was just going down to give it in at the desk. I wasn't going to carry it away." And she turned aside to the window and began to hum, as though done with the whole matter.

The old detective rubbed his chin, glanced again at the paper-cutter, then at the girl in the window, and lastly at the mother, who had lifted her head again and was facing him bravely.

"It is very important," he observed to the latter, "that your daughter should be correct in her statement as to the condition of this article when she picked it up. Are you sure she did not wash it?"

"I don't think she did. But I'm sure she will tell you the truth about that. Caroline, this is a police matter. Any mistake about it may involve us in a world of trouble and keep you from getting back home in time for your coming-out party. Did you—did you wash this cutter when you got upstairs, or—or—" she added, with a propitiatory glance at Mr. Gryce—"wipe it off at any time between then and now?" Don't answer hastily. Be sure. No one can blame you for that act. Any girl, as thoughtless as you, might do that."

"Mother, how can I tell what I did?" flashed out the girl, wheeling on her heel till she faced them both. "I don't remember doing a thing to it. I just brought it up. A thing found like that belongs to the finder. You needn't hold it out towards me like that. I don't want it now: I'm sick of it. Such a lot of talk about a paltry thing which couldn't have cost ten dollars." And she wheeled back.

"It isn't the value." Mr. Gryce could be very patient. "It's the fact that we believe it to have been answerable for Miss Challoner's death—that is, if there was any blood on it when you picked it up."

"Blood!" The girl was facing them again, astonishment struggling with disgust on her plain but mobile features. "Blood! is that what you mean? No wonder I hate it. Take it away," she cried. "Oh, mother, I'll never pick up anything again which doesn't belong to me! Blood!" she repeated in horror, flinging herself into her mother's arms.

Mr. Gryce thought he understood the situation. Here was a little kleptomaniac whose weakness the mother was struggling to hide. Light was pouring in. He felt his body's weight less on that miserable foot of his.

"Does that frighten you? Are you so affected by the thought of blood?"

"Don't ask me. And I put the thing under my pillow! I thought it was so—so pretty."

Salt Rheum of Ten Year's Standing Healed as if by Magic Hands Cracked so Could Not Work —Cures Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

It does not take long for Dr. Chase's Ointment to prove its magic healing power. A single night is often sufficient to produce the most startling results.

Internal treatment for skin diseases is nearly always disappointing. By applying Dr. Chase's Ointment to the diseased parts relief is obtained almost immediately, and gradually the sores heal up and disappear. Here are two letters which will interest you:—

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes:—"I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years, and had about despaired of ever being cured, so many treatments had failed. Reading of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment, I commenced using it, and was entirely cured by eight boxes. I want to express my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Ointment, and to recommend it to all sufferers."

Mr. Stanley Merrill, Delaware, Ont., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my hands cracking, often becoming so sore that I could hardly do any work. I got some of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and happily find that one or two applications of same to the affected parts make them well. I have had no trouble since using the ointment for sore hands."

Less Than Half a Cent a Plate

There is almost enough nourishment in half a cent's worth of Tillson's to do half a day's work on.

Tillson's will reduce the cost of living and increase the pleasures of eating.

Rolled Oats with Dates

Cook one cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats in one and two-thirds cupfuls of boiling salted water for 15 minutes. Add one cupful of dates stoned and cut in pieces stirring in carefully. Cook 10 minutes and serve with cream and sugar.

This may be served hot as porridge for breakfast, or, after cooking as directed, pour out into small molds, and stand to cool and harden. Turn out and serve with cream.

UNHAPPY END OF VILLAGE BELLE'S GIRLHOOD ROMANCE

A sordid story, revolting in its details, was unearthed a few days ago in Marchand Township, when Mrs. Gossette related a harrowing story of the inhuman conduct of her husband—who is charged with the murder of his seven-year-old daughter—to Magistrate Goyette in the Hull Police Court.

Although the crime with which Gossett is charged took place in April, 1909, his wife, held tongue-tied by his threats, was unable to disclose the alleged facts of the slaying of her little daughter until a few days ago when in Montreal, she related the revolting story. This was after her husband had been imprisoned in the Hull jail on the charge of wife-beating three weeks ago.

Got Details Here.

Sheriff Wright visited the wife of the accused in Montreal and obtained the facts from her. These he laid before Crown Attorney C. J. Brooke, K.C., and as a result a charge of murder was laid against Gossette.

According to the story of the woman the scene of the crime is laid in the little log shack in Marchland Township, where she had lived for twelve years with her husband.

Threw Child Across Room.

One evening in April, 1909, she was sitting with her husband and one other daughter in the bedroom of the house, and little Madeleine, a cheerful, happy child, was playing around the room. By mistake the child happened to tread on her father's foot, and in a paroxysm of rage he ran at her, picked her up by her heels, and threw her ten feet across the room, striking her head against the bedpost.

With such violence did the child land that she was unconscious for three hours afterwards.

After this the child was never the same, and complained continually of headaches. A month afterwards an abscess formed over the spot. Dr. J. Cartier from the neighbouring town of L'Annunciation was called in, and attended the girl with the result that she lived until the spring of 1910 when she died. The doctor was never informed how the little girl came by her injuries, and Mrs. Gossett was always prevented from seeing him by her husband.

Tortured His Wife.

Gosset's alleged cruelties to his wife amounted to torture. At one time in November he made her go outside in her bare feet, cut wood, and feed the cattle.

The only persons who knew of the crime were herself and her little daughter, Albertine, twelve years of age, who was in the room at the time of the assault. She was never allowed to attend church, and when the priest, Father Victor, came on his call her husband stood on guard to see that she did not speak out.

On 1st January, her husband gave her a terrible beating, and though she was still suffering he repeated the performance with the heavy poker towards the end of the month. Goaded to desperation the woman told some of her neighbours, who in turn told the priest, who communicated with the authorities and had Gossett brought to Hull.

Daughter Corroborates.

Albertine, the twelve-year-old daughter of the accused, corroborated her mother, stating she had been present when the incident occurred. Asked as to whether her father had cautioned her against telling anyone about the affair, she stated that he had threatened to hit her mother if she ever opened her mouth.

The Rev. Father Victor, parish priest of Marchland, produced certificates of the death of the child, showing that it had taken place on May 18th, 1910. He stated that the child had been buried in a field in the rear of the accused's house, and afterwards reinterred in the Marchland Cemetery on June 18th. Magistrate Goyette then stated that, although the evidence was not strong enough to support the charge of murder, he felt justified in committing the accused to stand his trial at the Assizes on a charge of manslaughter.

To a Canadian Press representative Mrs. Gossett related a harrowing story of her husband's cruelty to her and her children during their thirteen years of married life. The unfortunate woman stated that since the family moved from Montreal to Marchland in 1901, her husband had developed a furious temper, and that he would quarrel and beat her as he would a man, over the most trivial affairs.

He once used a poker with such effect that she was unable to move for days afterwards.

Stanislaus Degenais, of Montreal, a brother of Mrs. Gossett, stated that he had visited his sister at their home at Marchland, while Gossett was in jail, following the first charges of wife-beating laid against the man, and was horrified at the surroundings he found.

The home consisted of a log shack, with practically no furniture. The bed was simply a rough wooden bunk with some straw thrown upon it.

Belle of Village.

Gossett is from France originally, and is Parisian born. About fourteen years ago he came to Canada and married Ida Degenais, the belle at that time of the village of Sault au Recollect. He returned to France with his bride, but failed to make good there, returned to Canada two years later, and settled in his present home.

He is a short man, little over five feet in height and stooped by his labour. He is about fifty years of age and has grey hair and a grey beard and moustache.

SWANS AND THEIR YOUNG

That swans possess some power of reasoning seems to be proved by the following story, which is told by H. G. Hutchinson:

He says: "On a certain pond a pair of these birds had for two successive years hatched out a pair of cygnets, only to find the young fluffy things devoured long before they came to the properly feathered stage, by one or other the large pike which lived in the pond. This last spring the swans made their nest in the usual place, hatched out their cygnets as before, but as soon as the cygnets were hatched disappeared from the pond altogether, parents, babies and all.

"There is another pond or lake, at a distance of a mile and a half or so from the first, and on this lake the swans were found to be with their young ones. The puzzle was to know how they had got there. Their wings were so pinioned that they could not fly, and there were some very stiff and close fences between the one pond and the other.

"Subsequently a countryman said that he had seen one of them walking ove rthe fields that lie between the ponds. He had noticed nothing more than the old swan walking, but there is little doubt that had he been nearer or looked closer he would have seen that it was carrying a cygnet, or the pair of them on its back. Almost certainly the birds had walked and carried their young with them from the one pond to te other.

"How they got through the fences is still unexplained, nor is it understood how they knew the second pond to be there since it does not seem that they had ever visited it before. But the wisdom and enterprise which were so highly commendable, were justified by the results.

"They reared their cygnets successfully in this other pond wherein there were no pike, a fact which we might almost fancy the swans with their supernatural cleverness, had ascertained before they had made their difficult travels."—Country Life.

LABORS OF THE KING ❁ AMERICANS IN LONDON ❁ HOME RULE

KING TOO BUSY FOR OUTDOOR GAMES

NOW TRYING RACQUETS

Queen Is Often Interested Spectator, Though Her Royal Spouse Is Not an Expert.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

SINCE his return home, the King has been kept extremely busy, as there were vast arrears of work to be made up, and audiences have been granted from day to day in a steady stream. He has, consequently, had little leisure for the out-of-door life and exercise to which he is so partial, and his recreation has been taking the form of tennis in the court laid out at the palace in the course of his absence in India. The King is a player of skill. He has also been trying his hand at racquets with Lord Willington and Colonel Sir Frederick Ponsonby, his lord and equerry in waiting. The King is not a strong racquets player yet, but is full of enthusiasm and can keep his opponents busy in repelling his attacks. The Queen is usually an interested spectator of the games. The royal children are also becoming expert tennis players, Princess Mary especially.

The King hopes to visit Liverpool next month to witness the race for the Grand National as the guest of Lord and Lady Derby, but it is not considered likely that the Queen will accompany him. She has little liking for the turf, and the only occasion on which she is likely to be present at a race course this year will be at the Epsom summer meeting and Ascot. At the former she will once more see the races for the Derby and the Oaks.

King George will also be present at Newmarket at one of the spring meetings, though it does not seem likely that anything carrying the royal colors will call for any particular attention on the part of the judge. There is, however, no truth in the rumor that the King proposes to disband the royal stud of race horses.

Will there be any state concerts at Buckingham Palace this year? is a question that society is asking itself. Queen Mary is enthusiastic in the cause of good music, though not such a great opera-goer as Queen Alexandra, and would like to see these functions—so prominent a court feature prior to the reign of King George—revived.

King George, on the other hand, holds that the court season is sufficiently crowded as it is, and he is more firm in this view by reason of the fact that the Queen is peculiarly liable to fatigue, and a late night has a marked effect upon her.

At the opening of the last reign King Edward reduced the number of musicians in his private orchestra considerably, and a revival of these concerts would of necessity mean the restoration of the band to its former strength. The music room at Buckingham Palace is now more or less of a "howling wilderness," being neither one thing or another, and suggestions have recently been made for its utilization in other directions. No definite move has, however, yet been made, and the King's final decision as to what shall be done is awaited.

HE MET THE DEVIL IN A VIVID DREAM

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MR. ALBERT GROVER, the well known London financier, is a man who says he has met His Ancient Highness the Devil—in dreamland—but so often that he invited "all interested" to meet him in the Whitehall Rooms of the Hotel Metropole "to hear narrated a full account of the most astounding sacred discoveries the world has ever known."

When he came to London, he said, he discovered that he had what is called a "microscopic mind," which enabled him to analyze the most complicated figures without effort. But, not finding sufficient occupation for his microscopic mind in figures, he took to the study of spiritualism and psychic force. One of his experiences was a dream, in which the devil appeared to him in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. He got a terrible fright. A second night the dream was repeated, and again on a third night, when the devil came close to him. "His fearful face came and glared right into my own. My head was wet with the sweat of fear."

Pursuing his experiments, he said he had come face to face with an extraordinary Being, and he had no possible doubt that the great Creator, the Master of Life, passed over London every night. He was the Great Inspector of all His works.

"When the phenomena at first approached," he said, "I was cold to go to bed, and fell into a kind of trance. As I moved about I found my feet were not touching the floor, although they seemed to be fearfully heavy. I forced my way along until I seemed to overcome the attraction of the gravity of the earth. I was moving at railway speed when I saw before me a big bank of cloud. As it is written 'Clouds and darkness are around about Him,' I dashed into it with all my might. There appeared before me a pink cloud, perfectly luminous, and there floated before me a representation of the figures we see on the old cameos. I looked at it, and it looked at me and smiled. Then I realised that I had seen what the old Egyptians called 'The Mystery of the Double.' It is the exact presence that made Confucius teach his disciples to put food upon the bodies of the dead."

Society of American Women in London Has Accomplished Much in Its Short Existence

Possibilities of the Organization Are Now Seen To Be Many and Varied.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE hallmark of progress has been set upon the operations of the society of American women in London by the newly born spirit of enthusiasm which has become manifest. Since the day, fifteen years ago, when a few American women banded themselves together and for months merely met informally at the homes of the members, the society has grown steadily but surely in power and importance.

And yet the possibilities of such an organisation never have been fully exploited until comparatively recently. But now the society has been galvanized into new life. Its membership has increased two-fold in less than a year, and there are pleasing indications that the new series of salon lectures begun by the society will further vitalize and expand its influence and its sphere of usefulness.

The first of these lectures was a few days ago at the residence of Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Secretary to the American Embassy in London, and the demand for the limited number of admission cards was so great that all were disposed of within two days of the announcement of the lecture.

Mr. J. O. P. Bland was the speaker at this gathering and his lucid and educational discourse on "China: Its Present and Future," was so strikingly successful that the innovation was an instantaneous triumph. The second of this series of lectures was delivered on February 22, when the Duchess of Marlborough opened Sunderland House to the society and its friends, and Mr. Edmund Gosse spoke on "Swinburne." The third lecture, by Mr. Hilaire BeNoc, on "The Causes of the French Revolution," will take place at the residence of Mrs. Stephen L. H. Slocum, wife of the American Military Attaché, No. 41 Belgrave Square, S. W.

WORK OF THE LEADERS.

And here a word about the committee responsible for these lectures and to whom the society's recent rapid growth is largely due. This body comprises the wives of the American Ambassador, the First Secretary, the Naval and Military Attachés and the Consul General, and, be it said to their credit, they have undertaken the work in no half-hearted way. They have realised to the fullest possible extent the value of the social side of the society's operations, and the lectures have accomplished their object in a highly gratifying degree.

Mrs. John L. Griffiths, wife of the American Consul General, is chairman of the committee, and the patronesses include Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Edward Simpson, Mrs. Stephen L. H. Slocum, Mrs. Ernest Cunard, Mrs. Arthur Lee, Miss Mary Hoadley Dodge, Mrs. William R. Comings, Mrs. Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Webster Glynes.

The subscribers to the course of lectures include all those named and, in addition, Lady Ostor, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Mrs. Harcourt, Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Kendal, Mrs. John Lane, Mrs. Mildmay, Mrs. Eustace Burrows, Mrs. Selfridge, Mrs. Mackay, Lady Evans, Mrs. Dillwyn Farrish, Mrs. J. White Todd, Mrs. MacMillan and others representative of the literary, artistic, political and social side of Anglo-American London.

The lecture series will be continued as occasion permits and it is the hope of the committee that men and women of light and learning on both sides of the Atlantic will be induced to give their services in the future. The lectures are to be made the medium of social intercourse and the hostesses are giving the fullest attention to this phase of the gatherings.

HISTORY IS TOLD.

In view of the widespread interest which this new feature of the society's activities has aroused a brief sketch of the history of the society is interesting. A short time after the first meeting, "The International Council of Women" assembled in London and a luncheon followed by a reception was given by the young society to four hundred delegates. Soon the Spanish-American War called for the help of American women to aid in the care of disabled soldiers and sailors. The President of the American Society, Mrs. H. Griffin, became a member of the committee to fit out the hospital ship Maine, and the society began its philanthropic work in helping to raise money for that object. Since then the society, working quietly and effectively, has stood as an organisation representative among women in London of American patriotism, philanthropy and hospitality. Among the many distinguished guests who have been entertained by the society from time to time are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond.

In July, 1905, the president, Miss Glynes, announced that the society had resolved to further a plan for founding scholarships for American women somewhat on the lines of the Rhodes Scholarships for men and that it was hoped the co-operation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in America might be obtained to promote this undertaking. In 1908 the society had raised a fund for the first scholar, and Miss Claire Howard, from Columbia University, came to England for two years' research work at Oxford and Cambridge. In September, 1910, Miss Points, also of Columbia University, came as the protégée of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in America in response to the London Society's appeal.

The philanthropic work of the society has been so conducted under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Fox that it has won the confidence of many Americans not connected with the society. While many cases calling for immediate relief are cared for, the real purpose of this work is to give assistance to those who are trying to help themselves.

THE WORK DONE.

Last year a young American authoress who had signed a contract for a certain piece of literary work fell ill and the society and its friends are caring for her until her health may be restored. With these varied interests—patriotic, philanthropic, educational and social—the real need of a permanent home became evident. Last year Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the honorary president of the society, who always has taken a great interest in its welfare, and a few other women offered a guarantee fund to the society for two years if a suitable home could be procured. Mrs. Robert Fairbanks, the president, worked with untiring energy to get a location, which was finally found at No. 31 South Audley street. Unhappily, Mrs. Fairbanks died very suddenly in November, 1910, before the club home was in readiness, and Mrs. William R. Comings, the vice president, became the head of the society.

The club house was formally opened in the spring of last year. Since then the membership of the club has doubled. The rooms are too small for present needs and the members are already looking forward to the time when they will have a larger club house, with an assembly room where the growing membership and the many friends of the society may be frequently entertained by distinguished leaders of thought, both English and American, and where American women, temporarily resident in London, can find a congenial atmosphere for social intercourse with their fellow countrymen.

Mrs. Griffiths, who has entered into the society's work with the greatest enthusiasm, told your correspondent that the committee attached as much importance to the social as to the educational side of the lectures.

"The success of the first venture," she remarked, "was greater than we had dared hope, but it was only characteristic of the progressive spirit which now abounds in our ranks. We have established an esprit de corps which augurs well. The interest of the best coteries in London has been aroused, and as chairman of the committee I have been not only delighted but amazed by the many charming letters of commendation which have reached me. Our premises at No. 31 South Audley street have ceased to provide sufficient accommodation for our members, and we are now contemplating removal to a more commodious and suitable home."

LONDON NOW HAS 'SOCIETY CABARET'

Miss Floyd Ariston, an American, Opens Clavier Hall, on Continental Model.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

OWING to the enterprise of an American woman, Miss Floyd Ariston, London now has its cabaret, Clavier Hall, Princes street, Hanover square, which was opened on Thursday last, as a genuine Continental cabaret, run on the same lines as those in Munich, Berlin and Vienna.

There is one uniform charge for admission, namely, half a guinea, which is to cover the cost of cigarettes, coffee and liquors—within reason. With so high a price put on the privilege of admission Miss Ariston's cabaret differs, at all events in personal atmosphere, from those Continental haunts where one meets all sorts and conditions of men and women—night-birds of every variety of plumage.

It is her idea to attract "society" to her cabaret; it will exclude the "cheap dandy" and other undesirables, and give to the cabaret something of the atmosphere of the tone of the Palace Theatre stalls in the height of the London season.

"It is my idea," said Miss Ariston, "to reproduce as far as possible the Continental cabaret as you find it in Vienna and Munich. I want to get completely away from the theatre atmosphere—from the torture of sitting solemnly in silent rows, with the whole set of one's senses focussed in one direction; from the aspect of a typical theatrical orchestra.

"My customers sit at little tables, dotted irregularly about the floor. No one stares you out of countenance if it pleases you to have a chat with a friend while a dancer is giving her performance on the little white and gold framed stage."

Miss Ariston would like her cabaret to grow into a sort of club, where she could entertain her patrons until two o'clock in the morning.

TICKET HABIT HAS UPSET LONDON NOW

Too Much Punching Has Roused the Patience at Last of the Usually Stolid Briton.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

WHY not devise some such system as obtains in the United States of paying your fare under due supervision into a receptacle on board the street cars and Underground tubes?

That is a question which is beginning to agitate the London public, with the result that one of the tubes is to make a tentative trial of the system. One often hears it remarked in cars that as the problems of locomotion seem to be at the moment in the melting pot, it should be too sanguine to hope that some device of the sort may be adopted to mitigate the archaic nuisance of the ticket habit.

As a fertile source of waste of time, energy and temper the old ticket habit is to be commended in these days of "speeding up." Once you commit yourself to the Underground, however fraudulent and dishonest your natural inclinations may be, you are caught as securely as a rat in a trap.

You cannot enter the system without producing evidence that you have paid your fare; you cannot leave it without satisfying an inquisitor. Yet on a short twopenny journey the ticket has to be shown—to how many cognoscenti it is difficult to count—at least ten or a dozen times, all of whom clip a souvenir out of it, which amounts to an enormous waste of time in the course of a day.

Every expert examines the emblem with the deliberation of a connoisseur who has not given up hope of finding an Elzevir amid the rubbish of a wheelbarrow bookstall.

Some may like to give the man pleasure, but when one is in a hurry the delay is a nuisance. Therefore every busy man hopes that another useful time saving system may be copied from America.

MACFARLANE CLAN'S CHIEF IS SOUGHT

Great Sum of Money as Well as an Identity Involved in Quest of the Scots.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

"WILL ye no' come back again?" is the new lament of the great Macfarlane clan. They are searching for the lineal descendant of their chief, who emigrated to America after fighting in vain for the cause of Bonnie Prince Charlie in 1745. All these years the Macfarlanes had not bothered about their lost chief.

Like the Highlanders on that fateful occasion at Derby, 167 years ago, which resulted in his disappearance, they, too, have been divided among themselves over a mythical fortune of some $5,000,000, which it was understood had been left to the chief whenever he could prove his identity.

Naturally the claimants were many, but only lately was it discovered that the fortune did not exist—not for a Macfarlane at any rate—and now they are turning their attention to the discovery of their long miss'ng chief. A Macfarlane Society has been formed in London for the purpose of furthering the search And they do not despair of finding him somewhere in America. A Macfarlane, they maintain, is always a Macfarlane, and they doubt not but that their chieftain has preserved his Macfarlane characteristics throughout the generations, despite the dominating environment of America, accent an' a' that.

A temporary chieftain has been elected by the society, chiefly because he is a "plus five man at golf," but he is as uneasy in his chair as if he were sitting on a clump of thistles, because, as he says, the chair is heritable by blood alone.

They held their inaugural banquet in a vegetarian restaurant in London, and the piper piped the Clan's march, "Thogail nam bo heidsin," which, being interpreted, means, "Lifting cattle we will go," among the cabbages, curly greens and "neeps and tattles" in the vestibule.

But, heoh mon! though they chose a vegetarian restaurant for their feast, no doubt on account of its cheapness and the reputation of the place for its porridge and haggis, they did not bar the Mountain Dew. They saw to it that it was the real barley water, brought straight, without adulteration, from the hameland ayont the Tweed. Of course that was cheaper, too, for dining in a temperance restaurant forby they did not require to pay any "corkage."

But it was a pathetic scene when the white haired chieftain pro tem. arose and proposed the toast of their absent chief, and the pipes wailed out the old lay, "Will ye no' come back again?"

Kind American friends are entreated to help find the heir to the chieftainship of the Macfarlanes. They think he should easily be found. As a rule a Macfarlane is well up toward six feet in height. His body is long in proportion to his legs, which are slightly bowed, and he should be able to tie his garters without stooping. He has dark sandy hair, and the more freckles he has on his face the purer blooded Macfarlane he is.

Of course, as the Macfarlanes in London say, "some o' these native characteristics may be watered doon a bit wi' the American breeding; but he'll be nane the less welcome for a' that. Just ye find us our chief, and mak' us a united clan again. His forebears must have fought for the independence o' America. Gie us him back, and it'll be a grand event for the celebration of the centenary o' peace."

MEN AND WOMEN IN GUISE OF ANIMALS

The Latter, Including Dogs, Reverse Affairs and Wear Garb of the Human Kind.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THAT poets and artists can "rag it" with as much zest as medical students is shown by the exploits of the forty members of the new Studio Club. They are to hold every month a "freak" dinner. At their first all the guests, including several women, came as animals, and dogs were brought dressed as humans. The waiters represented animal trainers.

A well known woman novelist came as an ichthyosaurus. Mr. E. Storer, secretary of the club, made up as an elephant. Miss M. Chepstow came as a leopard, and another poet disguised herself as a Chinese pig.

Others represented lions, dogs, monkeys, cats and other four-footed creatures. The menu, which was otherwise normal, included "rabbits' food" and other provender. Dessert had to be "begged for" by the animals. To maintain the realism the elephant had to keep on trumpeting, the lions roaring, the donkeys braying, the dogs barking, the cats mewing—all had to act their parts.

Following the dinner came a dance. The ichthyosaurus, emitting reptilian cries, waltzed with the lion; the pianist, dressed as a clockwork toy, banged the piano.

"Stop!" cried the master of ceremonies. "Make room for the caterpillar race!" And, panting with their exertions, the poets watched a race between a clockwork caterpillar and a jumping frog with wrapt faces.

Some musicians, going home from a theatre, heard the riot, and Bohemians all—went in, took their fiddles from their cases and joined in the merriment.

At the next club dinner, it is said, gnomes and brownies from the Land of Mountains will dine in a big mushroom as it travels through the streets.

WATERCRESS MADE $480,000 FOR HER

Mrs. James, of Covent Garden, Has Practical Monopoly of London Trade in That Product.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THERE is a woman in London who has amassed a fortune of $480,000 by selling watercress. She is Mrs. James, of Covent Garden, who started her business career with only two baskets of watercress and now has practically a monopoly of the trade.

One of the few women merchants in London, she has a fine house in Kennington, owns a watercress farm and a country house, keeps a motor launch on the river, and last summer she went for a trip to America and returned on board the Lusitania.

Those who believe that man monopolizes all the commercial prizes of life and shuts the door against woman will get no support from Mrs. James, who by hard fighting and stern struggling, year in and year out, gradually built up her big business. She now supplies nearly every large hotel and restaurant.

At first it was very slow and uphill work, and even now she has to spend laborious days in maintaining her success. Her business day commences when most folks are asleep, and by ten o'clock in the morning she has finished with the market and attends to her office work at home.

"Hard work," she said, "is the secret of success in business, at least I've always found it so, and I have been out in all weathers selling watercress for seventeen or eighteen hours a day since I was five years old. Study your customers, never disappoint them, give them the best and you must get on.

"Vacations don't appeal to me. My greatest happiness is in my work, and I enjoy myself most of an looking after my customers in the market. I stand out in the open every morning from three o'clock till ten, and after that I have to look after the fresh cut watercress which arrives from the farm by every passenger train.

"Work suits me best of all. Last August I went to America for a trip with my daughters, but I was hungry to get back to the market and tired of leaning at the sea and listening to people's silly talk. Women have got just as good a chance as men in the market if they will put the necessary work into business."

$5,000 TEAPOT ON VIEW IN LONDON

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

CUPS and saucers worth nearly $1,000 and a teapot which at auction would probably fetch at least $4,500 or $5,000 are now on view in London.

They form part of the celebrated tea service presented to Mrs. Burke to commemorate the election of her husband, Edmund Burke, as M. P. for Bristol in 1774, and are included in the famous Trapnell collection of Bristol porcelain and glass which Mr. Albert Amor purchased a few weeks ago and is now being exhibited in his rooms, in St. James' street.

For forty years Mr. Trapnell had been collecting Bristol china. He did not mind travelling hundreds of miles in pursuit of a genuine piece and seldom returned without it. He formed, indeed, a "corner" in Bristol china, and so rare now are specimens that his collection is valued at nearly $150,000.

The Burke tea service is, of course, the most highly prized part of the collection. As long ago as 1871 the teapot sold for $960; in 1876 it brought $1,075; at Christie's in 1905 it realised $2,300; Mr. Trapnell bought it for $2,500, and now it would probably fetch twice that sum, for a single cup and saucer of the service sold at Christie's last December for $987.

Other notable specimens—perhaps rarest of all—are about two dozen specimens of Bristol glass, the art of which has long been lost. So wonderful is this glass and so perfect the decoration that even an expert might at two feet distance be deceived into believing he was looking at porcelain. Since Mr. Amor bought the collection and reports appeared respecting the Bristol glass between two hundred and three hundred pieces have been sent to him—and not a single piece proved to be genuine. It was all cheap German imitation.

One woman, fearing her treasure might be damaged in the post, actually made a special journey from Bristol to London with a vase, taking the precaution to find a suitable box and wrap the vase in cotton wool. The vase, like the others, was simply a cheap imitation, not worth half a dollar, whereas had it been the real thing it might have sold for hundreds. The imitations have a milky appearance; the genuine article is white or cream color.

BRITISH PEER FLIES STARS AND STRIPES

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

Passing through Wolverhampton in the train, if you look away to the East you may see a picturesque old mansion from the tower of which, when the family is at home, waves the Stars and Stripes, just as the Royal Standard now does at Buckingham Palace. It is not that this house, Patshull as it is known, is either owned or leased by an American. It belongs to Lord Dartmouth. Nor is it because he has an American wife, for she is a daughter of the second Earl of Leicester. But Lord Dartmouth is very proud of his American flag. In fact he is the only Englishman who has a right to fly the Stars and Stripes, a right which comes to the Dartmouths because of their kinship with George Washington.

BELFAST FIGHT ON HOME RULE HAS BUSINESS MOTIVE

Merchants Believe Irish Self Government Would Bring Financial Ruin.

RELIGIOUS QUESTION SIDE ISSUE ONLY

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

In olden times when one sought trouble one went to the wars. Nowadays all that is necessary is to go to Belfast. Both sides are full of fight up there and every one, from the big business man to the apprentice boy or mill girl, enjoys a shindy. All that is necessary to insure a delightful mixup is the utterance of some reflexion upon the Pope or King William "of glorious memory."

The old fighting spirit lives and thrives, and this despite the fact that Belfast is a type of the hustling Western American city, and the chase of pounds, shillings and pence there is as keen as the hunt for the mighty dollar in the United States.

Of course, you recall the recent unpleasant experience of the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Winston Churchill, when he visited Belfast and was hissed, "booed" and bombarded with bags of pepper, oranges and bananas, because he came to preach home rule in the citadel of unionist loyalty.

Belfast is really bitterly opposed to home rule, but don't jump to the conclusion that Belfast business men are fighting it because they fear that the Catholics will impose upon Ulster's Protestants. That may be the animating motive of the working classes—the fighting brethren of Derry Walls Orange Lodge, and the like—but if you cross-examine the men who are making Belfast great as a business centre you will find that these Orange brethren with pockets filled with iron "confetti" taken from the shipyards of Lord Pirrie, liberal home ruler, are used simply as a means toward an end—the defeat of home rule, which nearly every business man of Belfast believes spells utter ruin. The business interests feel that the Redmonds, Devlins, Healys and O'Briens have no business capacity—that their genius lies in poetry and politics, and they are in deadly earnest when they prophesy that the triumph of the nationalist party will sound the death knell of Belfast as an industrial centre.

Purely a Business City.

There is no aristocracy in Belfast. Those up have been knighted have received the accolade because of triumphs in business. Therefore it is not at all strange that the merchants of a city like this, where they use the very latest inventions and mechanical devices of America, France and Germany before they are even heard of in England, should enlist every power that can be brought into play to prevent the passage of a measure, which they believe means retrogression and ruin.

Mr. Robert Baird, editor of the Belfast Telegraph, was not very far wrong when he told your correspondent at the time of the "Churchill invasion" that everyone in the community who has a stake in it is opposed to Home Rule.

"Of course," said Mr. Baird, "there have been outbreaks now and then between Protestants and Catholics—and there may be again—but oftener than not the cause of the disturbance has nothing to do with religion. When things are running smoothly in Belfast you never hear of religious differences. It is only when the great majority—Protestants—are roused by fear that they may become victims of injustice that religious difference becomes acute.

Would Fight to the End.

"The Protestants here are descendants of men who were willing to sacrifice their lives for their beliefs, and though there may not be as much iron in the blood of Ulster men today, and they may not adhere to their faiths as rigidly as did their forebears, you can rest assured that, as the Hibernian put it, while they may not live for religion they are always ready to die for it—and that applies to both sides.

"On every issue but home rule," continued Mr. Baird, "you will find Belfast reasonable, but when you look at the great industries here, and realize that they are nearly as dear to the men who built and developed them as their own flesh and blood you will begin to understand the grim, unending hostility to a change in government which would destroy these establishments. Belfast is prosperous and that's why it doesn't want a change.

Fear Ruin of Business.

To sum it all up, therefore, the opposition of Belfast to home rule is not from religious intolerance but because of a belief that business will be destroyed by it, and you will waste time if you try to argue with unionists on the subject. They are willing to let a nationalist believe in home rule, but if a liberal dares to talk for it in Belfast they pelt him, whether he be the First Lord of the Admiralty, with all Great Britain's dreadnoughts behind him, or Lord Pirrie, the head of the greatest shipbuilding plant in the world. If they are accompanied by women so much the worse; Belfast missiles know no sex.

"Don't forget, however, that the army of nationalists in Belfast—they are as one in five of the population—are just as strongly in favor of home rule as the unionists are against it, and are ready to fight for it with or without provocation, for they feel that home rule will bring peace (they are, however, not so pessimistic about this) and plenty.

BITS OF NEWS OVER THE SEAS

Death of Man Over 100 years of Age. Remarkable Shoal of Whales. Boom on the Clyde.

The death has occurred of Mr. John Kelly, Lough, Portarlington, who had reached the remarkable age of 107 years. He could talk with facility of the miseries which characterized the famine year of "Black '47."

Woman Weighed 320 lbs.

At an inquest in the Cork Workhouse on Kate O'Carthy, spinster, aged fifty-eight, it was stated that she weighed 320 pounds. She was about to be treated in the Protestant Workhouse and Children's Hospital for her last condition, and was placed in a mechanically moved chair in the operating room, when the seat of the chair gave way, throwing the deceased violently to the floor, cutting her head.

New Kind of Outrage.

The residents of Dundalk were surprised by finding themselves practically deprived of water supply. During the night some person had gained access to the reservoir enclosure, and opened the scour valves in the bottom of the reservoir, draining away not only all the water stored there, but all that came in subsequently from the mountain storages.

Clyde Shipping Boom.

Clyde shipbuilders launched twenty-four vessels of 60,000 tons gross during October, bringing the output for the year so far to almost half a million tons, a total that has only been exceeded by the full year's output of 1907—620,000 tons.

Whales on Tour.

An extraordinary sight was witnessed in the Kyle, Loch Alsh. From daybreak until after nine o'clock an unending stream of whales, large and small, passed northward, and at times the sea, which was calm, was for a great distance a mass of foam. Many of them passed within a few feet of the railway pier.

Strangled in Toy Cart.

An extraordinary fatality was investigated at Hartlepool. The two-year-old son of a laborer named Gallagher was being wheeled by another child in a mailcart improvised from a box and a couple of old perambulator wheels, the axle passing through the sides of the box. The child's pinafore became wound round the axle, and before assistance could be rendered he was strangled.

"Wake" Results in Fire.

While the remains of an old woman named Jane Houghton were being "waked" at her residence, Rheban, Co. Kildare, a fire broke out, and the house which was a thatched one, was gutted. The neighbors made heroic efforts to rescue the corpse, but the flames spread with such rapidity that they were unsuccessful. At the time the relatives were in Athy making the funeral arrangements. It is thought that the fire was caused by the candles burning some drapery in the room.

Burglar's Warning.

A burglar who entered the Mint public house, Kingswood, left pinned to the wall a piece of paper on which was written a warning to the publican for not keeping his windows fastened. Upon Joseph Walker, who was remanded at Reigate, was found a portion of the stolen property, and a revolver.

The Tramp's Revenge

George Clark, a wheelwright, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude at the Essex Assizes for setting fire to a stack at Thaxted and causing damage amounting to $4,000 because he was not allowed to sleep at a farm. All the farm buildings, two horses, and nineteen pigs were burned.

Municipal Training College.

Lord Sheffield opened the Brighton Municipal Day Training College, towards the equipment of which the Board of Education has contributed $30,000. The college is undenominational, and already has forty male and forty-four female students representative of all parts of the country.

To Push Home-Made Steel.

A plan for granting a rebate of 4s. a ton to consumers who purchase only from the signatories is outlined in a circular issued on Wednesday by twenty-three of the principal British steel-making firms. The arrangement does not apply to material sold for export. The object is ostensibly to shut out foreign steel which is being sold here on very cheap terms.

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD

Was In Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not treated in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or some other serious throat or lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, which, combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines, makes it without a doubt the best remedy for all coughs and colds.

Miss N. McCumber, St. Martin's N.B., writes:—"In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines, but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken three bottles I was completely cured, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

BEST TOWN CRIER IN THE KINGDOM

William Law, town crier of the ancient town of Horsham, England, is prepared to engage in contest with any town crier in England, Scotland, Ireland, or Wales to prove that he is the champion crier of the United Kingdom, such contest to be held before properly appointed judges. The man who issues this sweeping challenge, does not do so in any vain spirit of boastfulness. He does it to prove his mettle and convince the Horsham Urban Council that they were in the wrong in grudging him the paltry cost of a uniform which would have brightened the life of the town and saved the wear and tear of his Sunday suit. William has no arbitrary ideas on the proper uniform for a town crier, but he says that he had thought of something such as the men wear outside the cinematograph theatres. "It would look more official like," he says.

As for his challenge, he suggests that the competitors should "cry" a test piece, such as the notice of a sale, and a semi-extempore piece—say the notice of a suffrage meeting, which a good crier could embellish with a few well-chosen witticisms. He suggests that points should be given for carrying power, articulation and vocal tone.

"Town crying," said William, "is not simply shouting at street corners. You need training. It is just the same with singers. They have to get into it, just as I had to do. I have been town crier for ten years, but there is not much money in it now. There is too much printing. I get on an average of half a crown for a night's job and I am ready to go at any time and cry anything."

TO REGLUATE MARRIAGE

A famous English Physician believes in Eugenic principles.

Dr. A. F. Tredgold, at a meeting of the Eugenics Education Society at the Theatre, Burlington Gardens, London, advocated the keeping of family records with a view to preventing marriages between the unfit. Dr. Tredgold, who is consulting physician to the National Association for the Feeble-Minded, and was a medical expert to the Royal Commission on the Feeble-Minded, said that all past evolution, whether of man or of the lower animals, had been the result of variation and selection, and it could not be doubted that any further racial advance of man would be due to the same causes.

If national degeneracy was to be averted, eugenic principles must be applied to the nation. Regardless of their social status, the marriage and propagation of the fit must be encouraged, and that of the unfit prevented. This could only be brought about by the regulating of marriage.

Moreover, the effect which the regulation of marriage would have upon individual happiness would be great. He was convinced that a very large amount of wretchedness of home life resulted from hasty, ill-considered marriages, regardless of the character and mental and physical health of the contracting parties. If greater attention were paid to these and to the general responsibility attaching to marriage, they would hear very much less about the need of divorce.

TIMELY SAYINGS

Most of us know just what we should have done yesterday to-morrow—George Bush.

FOXES BOOK OF MARTYRS

It was Sold by Auction at Sotheby's for $3,000

Bunyan's copy of Foxe's "Book of Martyrs" was offered at auction at Messrs. Sotheby's rooms in London. There was only two bids, and the book was finally bought in at $3,000. The vendors were the trustees of the Bedford Literary Institute. The book was to have been sold in London last May, the institute being in financial difficulties. It was expected to realize from $40,000 to $50,000. At the last moment, however, the Attorney-General intervened in order to ascertain whether the trustees were empowered with the right to sell the book, and it was withdrawn from the sale. After investigation the Attorney-General came to the conclusion that the sale could not be withheld, and consequently the book came under the hammer. A first edition of Walton's "Compleat Angler," published in 1661 at 5s., brought £2,750.

ENGLISH PHEASANTS

Not Many Killed During the Last Open Season.

St. Catharines hunters who had been keeping tab reported that during the last open season for English pheasants even fewer birds than in previous years were killed. The birds themselves appeared more able to take care of themselves—to keep out of the way of the hunter's shotgun—and many a hunter failed to get so much as a pot shot at a bird. One man reports that he killed twenty-five, but this was on his own farm and nobody else was allowed to shoot there. The previous year he got only about half that number. One was allowed to shoot the male birds only, the killing of a hen pheasant making one liable to a heavy fine. It was feared that when the Government last year declared an open season there would be such a slaughter that all the birds would be killed off, but they have multiplied it is said and are so hard to shoot that it looks as though the species would be preserved. Unfortunately too many of the pheasants die of cold in the winter and many a lone bird shut off from its mates is killed by famished crows who chase it till it drops and then make short work of it. The English pheasants around St. Catharines were "planted" in 1892 by some local sport lovers who have done much to preserve the birds. The season of 1910 was the first open season.—Rod and Gun.

AMBER AND AMBERGRIS

A Writer Points Out the Difference Between the Substances

Amber, which is used in making pipe mouth-pieces, is a very different sort of thing from ambergris, and while valuable, of nothing like the almost fabulous value of the much rarer substance. It is from the Greek name of amber, elektron, that we derive the name of our greatest modern force, electricity, because amber, on being rubbed, exhibited the energy now known as electric.

Ambergris is the product of the spermaceti whale, and is therefore organic, while amber is a mineral produced is not distinctly known. Some consider it a biliary product, others a secretion of the whale's brain. Frank T. Bullen has a good deal to say about it in his writings. It is sometimes found floating on the ocean, and sometimes, as in the recent case at Nantucket, cast up on shore.

Its value depends upon its use as the basis for the most delicate and expensive perfumes, and it is worth of course, very much more than its weight in gold. Twenty thousand dollars is a heavy burden in gold, while the lump of ambergris could not have weighed more than a few pounds.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SONS

Mr. Asquith's Boys Are Building up Distinguished Careers

The Ireland and Craven scholarships were awarded to Mr. Cyril Asquith, scholar of Balliol College. This is the third success the Prime Minister's son has gained at the University during 1911. In April he stood at the head of the Classical Moderations honors list, and in June won the Hertford scholarship. The Ireland and Craven scholarships now awarded form the blue ribbon of Oxford. As is well known, the Prime Minister had a distinguished career at the University, and his son, Mr. Raymond Asquith (called to the bar in 1904), followed in his father's footsteps, winning, like him, first in "mods.," the Craven Craven scholarship, first in "Greats," the fellowship of his college, and becoming president of the Oxford Union. Mr. Cyril Asquith, who went to Balliol from Winchester, with the Goddard scholarship in 1909, has emulated their example by securing a first in "Mods.," and the Ireland and Craven scholarships.

EXCEEDED THE SPEED LIMIT

The Princes' Car Was Going at 25 Miles an Hour.

The chauffeur of Prince August Wilhelm, the Kaiser's fourth son, was fined for exceeding the speed limit, on the evidence of a policeman that the Prince's car was going at twenty-five miles an hour. The Prince appealed and the case was decided at Potsdam in his favor. The Prince on oath gave a direct contradiction to the policeman and said that the car was making only 24½ miles an hour. The court decreed that the policeman confused his data or that his stop-watch was not doing its duty on the occasion in question.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED

The Experience of a Parisian Lady of Great Wealth

A society lady of great wealth in Paris who was kidnapped on leaving the theatre, dragged in an automobile, and driven to the Bois de Boulogne, where she was robbed and left in the middle of the woods, to walk on foot in her evening dress in the wet and rain, to the nearest point in the city, has just told of her terrible experience. The lady had been to the theatre and wore a magnificent evening dress, with some of her finest jewels and a sealskin cloak. As she left the theatre, she hailed a taxi, and gave her address to the chauffeur. After he had driven some distance he stopped to inquire, as if he had not remembered the address. He opened the door to ask, and twice repeated his question, putting his head in farther each time. When he shut the door and drove away again the lady thought that she noticed a strange odor in the taxi. The idea suddenly came to her mind that he had left some drug or powder which was intended to set her asleep; but before she was able to make a move she was overcome, and succumbed to the drug. The chauffeur drove away into a secluded part of the Bois de Boulogne.

When the lady awoke, she found herself in the Bois, surrounded by well-dressed men, who held lanterns and were divesting her of her jewels, and all her valuables. They also took all the money she possessed, and her gold purse. She begged them in vain to leave her at least two francs to drive home in a cab. They told her that she ought to be glad to get away alive and that if she gave in the slightest information to the police she would be a dead woman. She was left in the middle of the Bois and walked to the nearest gate, drenched and cold. She finally reached her home in the morning, more dead than alive.

Cement at the Coast.

Near Shames, B. C., a large deposit of limestone that is considered perfect for the manufacture of cement.

Novel Ploughing.

The latest thing in ploughing is a scheme whereby the work can be done without any plough at all. The discovery, or rather the idea, comes from North Carolina, one of the United States, where a farmer observed that grain grew far better on spots where tree stumps had been uprooted and the earth disturbed to a depth of several feet. Then he had a notion. None of your surface ploughing for him! He was going to do the thing properly. Carrying out his idea, he had small quantities of dynamite placed in various portions of his land, and fired so as to "plough" whole fields to a considerable depth. The experiment was successful in producing excellent crops, but it is rather too dangerous to be universally recommended.

Advertising Frauds.

At Glasgow Criminal Court, Thomas Moore Small, a young man of respectable appearance, pleaded guilty to the charge of defrauding four persons. It was stated that the accused devised a scheme for obtaining the money by pretending that he carried on a bona fide business under the name of the Northern Advertising Company, and that he wanted young men for permanent outside positions. He advertised to that effect, stipulating that moderate security was required. He was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment.

FORTUNE IN A HEDGE

Misers have great resourcefulness in selecting hiding places for their treasures, but they rarely adopt the methods employed by a traveller on the railway line between Lescar and Pau. This individual, who owned an estate worth about $50,000, sold all his property and insisted on being paid the full purchase price in negotiable bearers shares and in coupons payable to the Bank of France.

He disposed of some of his money and then during a brief halt of the train approaching Pau threw his pocket-book containing the remainder approximately $40,000 in a hedge bordering the line. There it was found by a hedge-clipper, who deposited it find at the nearest police station. By the laws of France it will become his property at the end of 12 months unless the original owner claims it and proves his right.

ASTHMA

Mrs. Farndel of Clementsport, N. S., Suffered All Her Life From Asthma, But Was Permanently Cured by Catarrhozone After All Other Means Failed.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma, and hopes that many will follow her example and use Catarrhozone:—

"I am now in my eightieth year, and cannot recall the time when I was free from asthma. I had always choking cough, feverishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, headache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave relief in five minutes, and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used I was completely cured. I am as free now from asthma as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone inhaler next to life itself."

HAIR WHITE AS SNOW
Restored to Natural Color with WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

ALMOST A MIRACLE

My hair was as white as snow when I commenced using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. One bottle restored my hair to its natural dark brown color. As I am now 70 years old, I consider the result most remarkable. It is an agreeable and refreshing hair dressing, keeping the hair soft and glossy, without being in the least greasy or sticky.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES.

Frequent Conferences Held In Connection With Coal Strike.

London, March 7.—Official statements issued last evening concerning the numerous conferences held yesterday in connection with the coal strike were devoid of information as to the results, if any, achieved. The negotiations were renewed yesterday morning with hopes that speedy settlement would be reached, but nothing has been disclosed indicating progress in that direction. As a result, rumors are abundant, but all apparently, are founded on surmise.

The miners' representatives conferred with the Premier and his colleagues for nearly three hours and the official report says that at Mr. Asquith's request they promised to attend further conferences "if desired." From this it is deduced that the Premier has not yet abandoned hope of finding a basis of agreement between the disputants. It is said that the miners adhered steadfastly to their declarations that they would not consent to any settlement which did not assure the adoption of their own schedule of minimum rates.

In the House of Commons the Prime Minister characterized as purely imaginary the newspaper reports that he would introduce a minimum wage bill to-day.

The Archbishop of Canterbury appealed in special prayers for a termination of the strike. Meanwhile the miners continue to be masters of the situation. Industrial paralysis is fast spreading over the country.

A high official of the miners' federation said last night that a settlement this week was impossible, but he was hopeful that it might be effected next week.

Some four hundred Oxford undergraduates have organized themselves into a volunteer body to work in the mines or to assist by any available means in the crisis.

Steamers Suspend Service.

Christiania, March 7.—Owing to the British coal strike the steamship services from Christiania, Bergen and Tromso have been partially suspended. Freight rates have been increased Cutting Down Speed.

Marseilles, March 7.—The French line announces that their steamships will be placed under reduced speed until further notice. The British coal strike obliges the company to economize in coal.

HAS HE FOUND IT?

Amundsen Is Returning From His Race For South Pole.

Capt. Amundsen's expedition is the first to be heard from of four that have set out to reach the south pole over the same general route from the Australian side by way of Ross Sea, McMurdo Strait and along the edge of Victoria Land, traveling almost due south. While an Australian and a Japanese expedition are attacking the pole, the really serious competitor of Capt. Amundsen, the distinguished Norwegian, who discovered the Northwest Passage, is Capt. Robert Scott. It is a peculiar fact that, concerning the last named, a report was current in London Tuesday that he had reached the south pole, but no confirmation has been received.

Thus far the despatches do not indicate how far he has been successful in the race for the south pole. Had he reached his objective it is most likely that the news of his achievement would have been made known several days ago.

Hicks' Case Re-Opened.

Cobourg, March 7.—The grand jury has not yet reported on the charge of perjury brought against aged Henry Hicks, of Colborne, resulting from evidence given at the trial of "Son" Matthews for the alleged murder of a woman at Colborne. Last October Hicks was before a grand jury, the foreman of which was C. A. Munson, M.P., who declined the services of the crown prosecutor, N. F. Davidson, K.C. of Toronto, in interrogating witnesses, and who later had a spirited discussion with Justice Latchford, who dismissed the jury. Justice Kelly is presiding at the present court, and Mr. Davidson is again the prosecutor. The case has been re-opened on instructions from the Attorney-General's Department.

Sneed, Senior, Murdered.

Georgetown, Texas, March 7.—J. T. Sneed was killed here yesterday by one of his tenants, R. O. Hilliard, who killed himself, after saying he shot for revenge.

Sneed was the father of John Ben Sneed, recently on trial for the killing of Capt. A. G. Boyce, a sequel to the elopement to Winnipeg of Boyce's son with Sneed's wife.

It is presumed yesterday's killing was a direct result of the Boyce-Sneed feud.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Wheat ruled sharply to-day as a result of a generous export of flour sales, and owing to a revival of cash demand. There was a strong finish at virtually the top prices of the day, ½c to ⅞c higher than last night. The end of the session left corn ½c to ⅝c up, oats varying from a shade to ⅝c up, and hog products exhibiting a decline of 7½c to 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat, unchanged to ¼d lower than yesterday, and corn, ¼d lower. Argentine wheat was ⅝c higher. Paris ¼c higher to ⅛c lower. Antwerp unchanged, Berlin ⅛c higher, and Buda Pest ⅛c higher

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Mch. 6.—There was some demand from the continent for Manitoba spring wheat, but at the close of the market bids were 1c per bushel out of line. A fairly good trade continues to be done in oats for local consumption, but other lines of coarse grains are quiet. A fair volume of business continues to be done in spring wheat flour for export and the local trade is active. The demand for millfeed is good and prices rule strong at the recent advance. Butter is firm under a fair demand and cheese is quiet. Supplies of eggs are increasing, for which the demand is good. Potatoes are easier.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 77½c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 6.—At the Canadian Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 2 were 600 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 720 hogs and 750 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 700 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 1500 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady, but as there were no choice stock offered, top prices were not realized, the highest being obtained for good steers being $6.50, and for choice cows $5.50, while the best bulls sold at $5 per cwt. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and as they all wanted some stock, a fair trade was done, but the demand for the common and inferior was very limited and some of such were left over.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for hogs and prices were unchanged from Monday's close. The supply was fair, for which the demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $7.75, but light stock only brought $7.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars. The trade in calves was active, but as the supply was somewhat larger, an easier feeling developed in the market and prices ruled lower. The market for sheep and lambs was quiet and prices were unchanged.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; medium, $6.50 to $6.60; common, $4.90 to $5.25; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $3.75 to $4.75; bulls, $4.75 to $5.25; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $90; common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $50 to $65.

Sheep—Ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.25; lambs, $5.75 to $7.

Hogs—F.O.B., $7.50 to $7.75.

Calves—$1.50 to $6.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, March 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 375; market, quiet, steady; prime steers, $7.50 to $8; butcher grades, $6.50 to $7.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 1000; market, active, lambs, 10c higher; choice lambs, $7 to $7.25; cull to fair, $5.50 to $6.60; yearlings, $5.75 to $6.25; sheep, $2 to $5.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 2500; market, slow and easy; yorkers, $8.75 to $8.90; pigs, $8.25; mixed, $8.80 to $8.90; heavy, $8.75 to $8.85; roughs, $6.50 to $6; stags, $5 to $6.50.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 11,000; market steady; beeves, $5 to $8.85; Texas steers, $4.70 to $6; western steers, $5.30 to $7.70; stockers and feeders, $4.60 to $6.20; cows and heifers, $2.25 to $6.70; calves, $6 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 41,000; market strong; light, $8.30 to $8.57½; mixed, $8.30 to $8.60; heavy, $8.30 to $8.60; rough, $8.30 to $8.45; pigs, $6.10 to $8.25; bulk of sales, $8.50 to $8.55.

RULE OF THE PEOPLE.

It May Be Roosevelt's Slogan in the Coming Campaign.

New York, March 7.—The Outlook to-day publishes a signed article by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, entitled, "Do You Believe in the Rule of the People?" The article restates Col. Roosevelt's platform as announced at the Ohio Constitutional Convention. It takes an aggressive attitude toward all who do not accept that platform, and brands them as unbelievers in popular government. That President Taft and his followers are classed with these unbelievers is evident.

"There has been much effort made," says Col. Roosevelt, "to fog the issue raised in my Columbus speech. In reality, the issue is perfectly simple. Do you believe in the rule of the people? If you do, you are with us. If you do not, you are against us.

"Many good and honorable persons do not believe in the rule of the people and openly say so. We disagree with these persons, but we can respect them. There are other persons, however, who do not believe in the rule of the people but who dare not say so, and who endeavor by trickery, by chicanery, by fraud, to seem to give the people the right to rule and at the same time to deprive them of that right. These persons we do not respect."

The article deals mainly with the "Recall of Decisions," as advocated in the Columbus platform, and a less advanced position seems to be taken. The appeal from the supreme court to a plebiscite is limited to constitutional questions, and is not to be invoked for at least two years. There is also an intimation that the so-called appeal from the court to the people will be in the nature of a constitutional amendment. Much stress is laid on the proposition that, if the people are intelligent enough to make a constitution, they must be intelligent enough to interpret it. Abraham Lincoln is quoted over and over again to prove that the progressives are following in his footsteps and carrying on his work.

The Word Anecdote.

Anecdote, a word of Greek origin, means strictly "that which is not given out." In this sense it has been used to denote secret histories or portions of ancient writings which have long remained in manuscript and are edited for the first time. Of such anecdota there are many collections. The earliest was probably Muratori's, in 1709, followed by Thesaurus Novus Anecdotorum, 1717, and Thesaurus Anecdotorum Novissimus, 1721. In its popular modern acceptation the word is used of the relation of some single amusing or interesting and authentic incident in private life.—London Saturday Review.

PERFECT STEEL BALLS.

They Have Never Yet Been Made, Even in the Laboratory.

One of the marvels of the day is a perfectly spherical steel ball, and yet it has never been made even in the laboratory, much less in the shop for commercial uses. When we consider the importance of ball bearings for automobiles, motorcycles and other machinery the imperfections in steel balls must appeal to all as of the greatest moment. Of course we make pretty good steel balls, which could not have been manufactured a few years ago. So far as the eye can discern, they are perfectly spherical, too, and ordinary measuring instruments will not be able to detect any difference in them, but nevertheless they are not perfectly spherical.

A steel ball for automobile bearings must be perfect within .0001 inch, and they are made even more perfect than this, but mathematical perfection in this respect seems to be almost as elusive as squaring the circle or discovering the perpetual motion machine.

When the steel ball was first used in the bearings of bicycles it was a very imperfect sphere. It was not called upon to bear any great load, and the velocity was not great. At the best the load on it was not more than 200 pounds, and at the rate of sixty miles an hour the revolutions were not more than 720 per minute. Compare that with the load and velocity of the modern ball bearings of automobiles. Frequently the load approximates a thousand pounds and the velocity is anywhere from 800 to 1,200 revolutions. The small steel balls must take the maximum load of the car and pass it on to others without binding or catching. A slight imperfection in any one ball would cause trouble. In fact, it is impossible to use balls with any appreciable variation in size from one another, and the more nearly round they are the better the results.

Steel balls are not only made more perfect in shape than ever before, but they are harder and tougher. As there is a tendency to take, only special steels can be used in their manufacture, and these tough, hard steels are all the more difficult to work with to secure perfect roundness. The chrome steel, of which most balls for bearings are made, is one of the most difficult of steels to cut or shape, and the work of handling it has developed special tools and machines made of even harder material.

While we have not yet made the perfectly spherical steel ball and perhaps may never succeed, the point of perfection reached is little short of wonderful. The approximately perfect steel ball is a matter of vital importance wherever machines and machinery are made and used. The application of the ball bearing system is extended to new lines of industrial use each year, and builders of all kinds of apparatus are taking advantage of the perfection reached by the manufacturers of these little spheres of tough steel.—Harper's Weekly.

Roman Island.

On the island Itoman, south of Japan, there is a colony of several hundred people who are said to be descendants of some Portuguese sailors who were wrecked there over 400 years ago. They are larger than the native Loochooans and show their foreign blood in their features.

THE "NINE DAYS' WONDER."

It was a certain William Kemp, the most original famous dancer of Queen Elizabeth's day and the creator of low comedy roles in Shakespearean plays, who was the original "nine days' wonder," for Kemp, with ribbons on his jerkin and bells around his legs, jigged and capered all the way from London to Norwich, a distance of some 126 miles. He danced along for nine days and thus made his name and the expression part of household conversation in every hamlet in England and on the continent as well.

Accounts of Will Kemp occupy many pages in the books on Elizabethan drama and those on the manners and customs of the time. It is universally conceded that Kemp created the character of Dogberry in "Much Ado About Nothing" and that of Peter in "Romeo and Juliet."

As for the "nine days' wonder," Elizabethan writers, Ben Johnson among others, often refer to him. He was the subject of many pamphlets, and Kemp himself wrote an autobiography.

Only one copy of Kemp's "Nine Days' Wonder, Performed In a Dance From London to Norwich," is extant, in the Bodleian library at Oxford. But there have been several reprints. Kemp, who describes himself as a man who spent his life "in mad jigges and merry lestes," recounts blithely and wittily how he and his laborer made their way through Romford, Chelmsford, Sudbury, Rockland and Barford Bridge to Norwich.

They were entertained royally along the route and despite the bad weather, which delayed them, would doubtless have arrived at Norwich long before the twenty-three days were up had not the good folk along the road been so hospitable.

Kemp started from the house of the Lord Mayor of London, and at Norwich he was received by the mayor of that flourishing town, who presented him with a sum of money and pensioned him for life.

When he again reached London, where he had "put out" a sum of money against accident along the road, Kemp was repaid fourfold. It was in 1599 that Kemp performed his "nine days' wonder." It is written, but with doubtful authority, that the idol of the Elizabethan populace afterward capped this feat by jigging over the Alps.

In the old woodcut in the account of Kemp's "daunce" "that most comical and conceited Cavallier Monsieur du Kemp" is seen in Elizabethan morris dance costume jigging away to the music of pipe and drum at his tabourg.

Danderine
Grows hair and we can prove it
Hair Becomes Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous and Beautiful Immediately After a Danderine Hair Cleanse
Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair—No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; its incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.
Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.
Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.
Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine. Real surprise awaits you.

WANT KING TO TRY TO END STRIKE

London Express is Out With an Appeal to His Majesty to Take Hand in Negotiations

MILLIONS ARE LOST

Examiner Special.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 7.—The London Express, an influential morning paper, is out with an appeal to King George to personally take a hand in the negotiations of the settlement of the coal strike, and save the nation from impending disaster. The Express says that while it may be asserted that under British Constitution, the King governs only through his elected advisors, the fact remains that the King is the father of his people and in a national crisis should have a great influence between the contending parties. The Express calls upon Asquith and his Cabinet to stand aside and permit his Majesty to use his best endeavours. Millions upon millions of dollars are being lost daily and every day brings more railways and factories tied up. There was another futile conference of the Cabinet this morning. It freely predicted that the strike will last a fortight yet, and this would mean terrible consequences.

HOME RULE BILL NOT BEFORE EASTER

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 7.—In the Commons to-day Premier Asquith said that the exigencies of public business did not allow for the home rule bill to be introduced before Easter. Sir J. Lonsdale asked, amid loud cheers, whether the Premier had arrived at that opinion after the South Manchester election. No answer was given.

A GRAND CONCERT

Under Auspices of Springville Presbyterian Choir

It is said by those who have heard Miss Barbara Foster, the famous Scotch singer, that she is perhaps one of the best artists that has toured Canada in many years. She will appear in the Conservatory of Music Peterborough, on the evening of March 13, with Miss Mae Teskey, one of Owen Smiley's star pupils under the auspices of the Springville Presbyterian church choir. The many expressions of appreciation by those who have had the pleasure of hearing her in Scottish ballads, and the fact that she has had the honour of being called for the second time by the Caledonian Society of Montreal, are ample evidences of her ability. She will appear in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

GROCER WAS DUPED

Stranger Got Away With Sixty Cents in an Easy Manner

Shortly after a George street grocer had opened his store this morning a stranger entered and got away with sixty cents without the least difficulty. He said that the wife of a prominent citizen, who died a short time ago had fallen down stairs and broken her back. The stranger wanted sixty cents with which to send a telegram to relatives in Alberta. The grocer opened his till and passed the money over the counter, as the stranger stated that he was a neighbour, and happened to be short of change at the time. The grocer thought no more of the matter until later in the day when it suddenly dawned upon him that the strange individual had duped him, in other words, "had slipped one over on him." He has seen nothing more of the sixty cents and upon enquiry found that the statement of the accident was untrue. The grocer is wondering whether any other telegrams were paid for by sympathetic merchants.

JUMPED TO DEATH, THOUGHT COLLISION IMMINENT.

SHERBROOKE, MARCH 6.—Under the impression that the engine which was side-tracked to allow his train to pass was moving towards him, Engineer Seymour sprang to death on the Grand Trunk line near here this morning.

Running east and west through a thick mist, Seymour saw a headlight in front of him and, cheated into the belief that a head-on collision was imminent, reversed the engine and leaped, falling under the wheels and dying almost instantly.

Has Captain Scott Reached The South Pole?

NEW ZEALAND DESPATCH SAYS SCOTT SUCCEEDED

Wife of the Explorer Has However Heard Nothing From Her Husband—One Cablegram Says That the Norwegian Explorer Amundson Admits Scott Has Found the Pole

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 7.— If the despatch from Wellington to the Express is correct, the following are the estimated dates of Scott's expedition:

June 1, 1910, time noon, sets sail.

February 4, 1911, reaches ice barrier and meets Admundsen.

November 5, 1911, dashes for the south pole.

December 22 "or thereabouts" reaches the pole.

March 7, news of success.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 7.—A despatch from New Zealand to the Express to-night, says that Captain Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, who was racing with Captain Scott, for the South Pole, admits that Scott has reached and discovered the Pole and that Amundson, himself, failed to make it. Nothing has been heard directly from Scott.

LONDON, MARCH 7.—The keenest interest has been excited by the strivings of the explorers of five different nationalities to attain the South Pole. Capt. Amundsen and Capt. Scott are close personal friends.

They met just before they started the race for the South Pole and when they parted, each to pursue his own plans, they wished each other success.

Excitement regarding the discovery of the South Pole has even overshadowed the terrors of the coal strike here. There is still no further news except despatches of confirmation from the Express correspondent in Wellington, New Zealand. The editor of the Express places absolute reliance on the despatch.

Mrs. Scott has heard nothing from her husband. This is regarded here as significant. King Haakon of Norway has heard nothing from Amundson regarding his trip.

BUGLE BAND MINSTREL SHOW FRIDAY NIGHT

Under the direction of Mr. R. Beach of the Opera House orchestra, the members of the Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment, will present an evening of minstrelsy in the recreation room at the armouries. The programme has been carefully prepared and should run without a hitch. Among those who will contribute to the entertainment in the first part and olio are Mr. Asa Huycke and the Art Quartette, Mr. Al Spencely, Mr. Walter Fitzgerald, May Drysdale, Grant Rightmeyer, Mr. Wes Edwards, Mr. Ed. Lebar, Mr. P. Stock, Sergt. Sharpe and others. Mr. Frank Clark will be heard in his specialty, a banjo solo, and Master Torrance in a drum number. No admission will be charged but those who wish to contribute to a silver collection may do so. An evening's enjoyment is promised and a large attendance is expected.

TORONTO REJECTS 11,000 SMALL MILK BOTTLES

TORONTO, March 6.—Another rejection of undersized milk bottles has been made by the Inspector of Weights and Measures, Mr. J. J. McConvey. This time it is a shipment of 11,000 bottles, sent to firms dealing in milk in Toronto.

The manufacturers are a United States firm and they agreed to take them back. Wine measure bottles are the standard in the States, Imperial measure is the standard here. Imperial is one-fifth more than wine measure, but these rejected bottles measured half-way between.

Mr. McConvey rejected over 18,000 of this same firm's bottles last week, being a carload consigned to Toronto. This last lot contains up to over 20,000 undersized milk bottles kept out of circulation in Toronto by the Department of Weights and Measures within the period of one week.

DECAPITATION A HORRIBLE SPECTACLE

BERLIN, March 5.—Sixty persons who had been privileged to attend the decapitation of a condemned murderer at Dresden the other day, witnessed a scene of horror that made their blood run cold. The culprit was a casual labourer, named Goehlert, who, for the sake of some paltry savings, in a ruthless and barbarous manner killed the old man with whom he had been on terms of intimacy, and buried the body of the victim in his own garden.

During the last few days, he had given trouble to his gaolers by attacks of frenzy, real or simulated, and he had to be dragged out into the snow-covered courtyard where the guillotine stood up spectrally in the illumination of electric light.

An official of the Public Prosecutor's Department read out the death sentence, to which the doomed man replied with a vehement and incoherent outburst, in which protests of innocence were mingled with torrents of foul abuse. This was cut short by the executioner's assistants hauling him away to the scaffold. He was, however, a powerful man, and, in spite of the heavy fetters on his limbs, threatened to be more than a match for those who were holding him. Three warders hastened to their aid, and, uttering appalling yells, Goehlert was, after a terrible struggle, strapped on to the bascule, and his screams were silenced by the fall of the knife.

DISCRIMINATING AGAINST TRAMPS

LONDON, March 5.—Remarkably successful results have followed the carrying out of the scheme in Berkshire and adjacent unions in the counties of Oxford and Buckingham, of way-tickets and bread stations for dealing with the vagrancy problem. The idea is thus to discriminate between the professional tramp and the wayfarer honestly in search of work. The system was put into operation in this area a year ago, the result being that, as compared with 1910, the number of vagrants admitted to the casual wards has decreased from 116,522 to 94,929—a decrease of 21,603.

Men and women who show that they are really in search of work are provided with "way-tickets," and for these a mid-day meal is provided at stations not more than six miles from each other, or from the casual ward of a workhouse. They are also given differential treatment in the casual wards. The scheme is worked by a joint vagrancy committee, and the expenditure is equal to one-fifth of a penny on the rateable value of the affiliated unions. The chief constable of Berkshire, Major Poulton, reports that the decrease of tramps has been followed by a decrease of offences against the law among them, amounting to about 20 per cent.

INTERESTED IN A HOTEL

Temperance Workers Visited Local Hotel for Appraisal Purposes —Lease Expires Soon

TENTATIVE PLAN RUMOURED

Following the decision of a public gathering of those interested in the temperance movement to inaugurate a local option campaign in Peterborough this year, it is interesting and somewhat significant that a number of temperance workers recently visited and inspected a local hotel, which it is understood, will be vacated about the first of May.

Nothing definite has been decided upon yet, and this was but a preliminary step in a tentative plan that may be put into effect. It might be termed an introductory move to be prepared to ensure the provision of accommodation for travellers should local option carry when the next ballot is taken here.

One of those who was with the deputation for examining the premises, stated to the Examiner that the intension was merely "to secure information as to the furnishings, rooms, and general equipment and its condition.

"As far as the proposal has gone," according to another authority, "the whole plan, if carried out, will be to make this hotel a temperance house, with the bar to be transformed into a lunch room, with counter, and the usual fittings."

Whether it is the intention of those who are contemplating the scheme to try to secure the premises at the expiration of the present lease, or to wait until the local option question is settled, is unknown. But the fact remains that some of the principals in the temperance movement have shwn this aggressiveness, a step that suggests to a certain extent a belief that their efforts will be more successful than on the occasion of the last balloting for local option.

CITY'S WATER IS PURE.

Dr. McPherson's report to the Board of Water Commissioners on the condition of the city's water supply during February shows that there have been no signs of infection. Tests taken at various intervals give a uniform percentage of chlorine, the figure being 3 per cent. This is regarded as a very satisfactory showing and should be gratifying to the consumers of city water.

ADVERTISE RELIGION WITH ELECTRIC SIGNS

NEW YORK, MARCH 6.—Broadway has seen almost everything from corset strings to grand pianos, advertised in electric signs, but people gasped yesterday as they passed near the Metropolitan tower and saw an entirely new sign, advertising religion. Last night the fiery message read:

At one end was a large cross and the words, "Religion for men"; at the other end another large cross and the words, "Men for religion." Along the bottom ran the flaming line, "Men and Religion Forward Movement."

The sign is on the roof of a building in 23rd street, just east of Broadway. It is the beginning of a great advertising campaign for religion.

Two more signs will be placed on Broadway, and large and small posters will be placed on billboards in every part of Manhattan, all advertising the "Man and Religion Forward Movement," which has swept the country with wonderful strides, and which will close with a great series of meetings in this city.

WEDDING BELLS

REVOY—ARSCOTT.

A quiet wedding was celebrated in Douro on the evening of March 6th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Arscott, when their adopted daughter, Myrtle Rose, was united in marriage to Mr. Sidney Revoy of Peterborough, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends, Rev. J. E. Fee officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ethel May Nurse of Emily, while the groom was supported by Mr. Howard Arscott of Fenelon Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Revoy will reside in East City.

DR. MERCHANT'S REPORT SHOWS MANY BILINGUAL SCHOOLS EXIST

Belated Announcement Vindicates the Liberal Policy —Twenty-two Teachers Unable to Speak English Language Freely—Schools Lack Efficiency.

During the recent provincial elections, one of the lives issues was Bilingual Schools. Premier Whitney made the extraordinary statement that "there was no such thing as bilingual schools," though he had appointed Dr. Merchant to make a report upon schools that did not exist. Now, three months after the elections, when the report would not influence votes, it is presented to the Legislature—yesterday. The following is a summary of the main findings of Dr. Merchant:

In 80 per cent. of the separate schools of Eastern Ontario and 90 per cent. of the public schools and rural separate schools of the districts the French language is used in teaching all subjects except English, which is regarded simply as one subject among others in the course of study.

"It is evident from an examination of the results of all tests applied that the English-French schools are, on the whole, lacking in efficiency. The tests combine to show that a large proportion of the children in the communities concerned leave the school to meet the demands of life with an inadequate equipment of education."

"The bilingual situation presents a problem of special difficulty. Children have learned to understand and to speak one language, and they are required, in addition, to master the ordinary subjects of the public school course of study, to learn another language, and to become so proficient in it that, in a reasonable time, it may be the means of communication and the medium of instruction. It is evident that these demands add materially to the work of the schools. Results, therefore, equal to those attained in the ordinary English schools cannot be expected in the same period of time."

"Of the teachers in English-French schools visited, twenty-two have not sufficient command of English to speak the language with any degree of freedom. These teachers are practically not English-speaking."

"Many teachers make a good beginning in teaching English, but through lack of knowledge and materials are unable to continue beyond a few simple lessons. A manual of method for teachers covering the whole field of the teaching of English to French-speaking pupils would assist them materially."

"The key to the permanent solution of the problem of securing a sufficient number of trained teachers for these schools can be found only in the closer connection of the English-French schools with the high school system of the Province. In the meantime teachers with temporary certificates must be engaged to make up deficiencies in the supply."

"It is conceded that the English-French Readers do not meet the requirements as to either English or French Readers. The system of teaching which they are intended to serve has been discontinued in all the best schools."

"The number of inspectors of separate schools in Eastern Ontario is inadequate to give these schools proper inspection."

Dr. Merchant visited 269 schools in which both the English and French languages are used, and in which there were 538 teachers. In these schools there were 18,838 pupils whose mother tongue was French, and 2,812 whose mother tongue was English.

The report classifies the schools as being in Essex and Kent counties, Eastern Ontario (including Russell and Prescott counties and Ottawa city), and the districts, which, while not named, are: Muskoka, Parry Sound, Haliburton, Nipissing, Sudbury, Algoma, Tecalsaming, Thunder Bay and Rainy River.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS AT RED MILL

THEATRE WEDNESDAY

$15,000,000 New York fire picture proves a big feature. The many thousands that visited the Red Mill on Wednesday were more than pleased with their high-class programme. From 1 p.m. till 11 p.m. this pretty little Theatre was crowded to capacity each and every performance. The management wishes to inform the many hundreds of people who could not gain admission last night to come to-day, as this is the last day for this feature bill. Owing to the large crowds visiting this popular theatre at night, the managements would ask as many ladies and children, as possible to attend the matinee performance.

PAVING MAY BE BEGUN WITHOUT WATER SERVICES BEING LAID

Engineer Hay has notified the Water Commissioners of the Council's intention to pave George street from the C.P.R. to McDonnel street, and Charlotte street from George street to Bethune. The purpose was to give the Commissioners time to lay services on these streets before the paving is begun, to avoid the tearing up of the pavement in future when such services may be asked for. Mr. W. H. Moore unofficially stated yesterday that in the section referred to perhaps fifty per cent of the water and sewer services into the lots fronting the streets had not been paid and in some places there was no occasion for them. The cost of laying these services in the spring, Mr. Moore said, would be too much to be done this year.

From statements made in the Council it is felt that if there must be a delay until all the sewers and water services are in, the pavement would never be laid and the members have expressed a determination to go ahead with the work.

When he made the remark, Mr. Moore was speaking in conversation with several other civic officials and was asked his opinion on the matter.

HAILEYBURY PLEASED WITH INCINERATOR

It Cost the Town $4,000 and Combines Most Features of Many Incinerators in Eastern Canada

GIVES SATISFACTION

The town of Haileybury took up the question of garbage disposal and after fully considering it, finally erected an incinerator. Mr. E. C. Kingswell, President of the Haileybury Board of Trade, writes the Examiner as follows:

"As chairman of the Board of Health here, I was appointed to visit all incinerators in Ontario and Quebec and did so. I had the good points of all I visited put into shape, and I am glad to be able to say that our incinerator here is more than a success. I have no hesitation in saying that our incinerator cannot be beaten. I saw the Westmount (Montreal) incinerator that cost over one hundred thousand and it is not in it with our six thousand odd plant. I enclose a clipping to show you what our garbage man thinks of it. I am,

Yours truly,

E. C. KINGSWELL,

President B. of T.

The town scavenger wrote the following of this incinerator, which has been in use now for some time:

"Allow me to state that the incinerator was fired on Tuesday last for the first time since the test and was well filled with rubbish and not a little snow and a dead horse. The incinerator was fired with the idea of keeping it in by slow burning, but, although there was much snow amongst the rubbish, it burnt so quickly that there was nothing left but a small portion of the horse and the grates were covered over with frozen ashes which were left in when it was tested, and could not be removed till fired."

AFTER IMPRISONMENT OF 46 YEARS

MILAN, March 5.—The notorious Abruzzi brigand chief D'Angelo has just received the Royal pardon after undergoing 46 years' imprisonment, in the course of which he never asked a favour from anybody nor broke the prison rules. He was very loth to quit his convict home. He has no relatives left, and with $20 in his pocket, the fruit of his long term of toil, was carried to the railway station on a litter, because he has become utterly paralyzed in his lower limbs.

He was terrified on seeing a passing automobile, and when for the first time he saw a man riding a bicycle he cried out, fearing that the cyclist would fall.

The officials supplied him with a railway ticket for his native mountain town of Palombaro, where over half a century ago D'Angelo killed his first victim for besmirching the character of his sweetheart.

Up to the time of his arrest, he murdered a dozen wayfarers. His favourite procedure was to lead them to the edge of a yawning precipice, and there put to them the fatal alternative, "Leap down, or I put a ball through your brains."

A. O. F. MEET FOR A SOCIAL EVENING

The Queen Alexandra Circle, No. 126, A. O. F., met together last evening in the Sons of England hall, the occasion being a concert, given under the auspices of the Society to the members and their friends. There was a large number present, and with Mayor Bradburn presiding, a very pleasant evening was spent.

A very enjoyable programme was preceded by an address by the chairman, who spoke in felicitous terms of the good work done by the Society, and congratulated the members upon the success which had rewarded their efforts to advance the Society's interests.

Following is the programme:

Pianoforte solo—Mrs. Laslett.

Solo—Miss R. Moss.

Recitation—Miss Palmer.

Solo—Miss Pumpleow.

"THE SCOUT."

"The Scout" is the title of a new journal published in the interests of the Boy Scout movement. It is issued monthly by "de la Ronde Limited," Ottawa, and is a very creditable production. It should stimulate a movement, which is worthy of encouragement, if it is kept to the spirit of its foundation—"to be loyal to God and the King ;to help others at all times, to obey the scout law." Loyalty and obedience to law are worthy ideals to inculcate to the rising generation. What the present generation needs above all is discipline, in thought and action, and the reverence that leads to veneration of constituted authority and merit. "The Scout" should be welcomed and read by every boy scout in the country. Its price is ten cents per copy or one dollar a year.

TIME FOR A CHANGE.

Th revelations brought out in the investigation into the management of the Victoria Industrial School at Mimico, indicate that there is need of reform in the methods of discipline, that will eliminate cruelty or punishment such as was a disgrace to civilization a century ago. The days of the pillory branding iron, and excessive flogging (except for certain offences) is past, or should be past. The modern tendency is towards regarding imprisonment as including the idea of reform, and not punishment or vengeance. It seems that this idea has been ignored in the infliction of punishment for the maintenance of discipline at the school mentioned; but public opinion will not approve a continuance of many of the punishment methods adopted. It is certainly time for a change, if we are to remain classified as civilized.

BI- LINGUAL SCHOOLS.

Dr. Merchant has made his long-expected report on Bilingual Schools. The report reveals nothing that was not known, unofficially and popularly, during the recent elections. Premier Whitney was wise in delaying the report, for if it had been presented befort the elections, it would no doubt, have modified the attitude and influenced the vote of many voters. Dr. Merchant's report amply and officially verifies the contentions of the Liberal leader, Mr. Rowell and the Liberal press and some of the Conservative press, in regard to the neglect and inefficiency of Bilingual schools under the educational mismanagement of the Whitney Government. Sir James Whitney may claim that an "overwhelming endorsation" by the people may wipe out all sins of omission and commission; but surgit amari aliquid — post mortem condemnation so to speak, of the Government—in the report of its own commissioner, which justifies not only the attitude of Bishop Fallon towards the inefficiency of bi-lingual schools, but that of all true friends of education, who hold that opportunity to secure an effective English education is the birthright of every child of Ontario, especially in its own interests.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There is no doubt as to how Mr. Bourassa regards Mr. Borden's surrender in the matter of the Canadian navy. His journal, "Le Devoir," says that "Mr. Borden's response to the repeated demands" of the Nationalists to repeal the Canadian Navy Act, "has been somewhat tardy in coming, but he was finally obliged to yield." Nice state of things in a British Dominion.

Laurier's Impregnable Speech On Manitoba Boundary Bill

Government Hotly Scored on Head of Shattered Election Pledges

The following is a more extended report of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech upon the Manitoba Boundary question in Parliament. Sir Wilfrid spoke to his amendment to the boundary bill to the effect that the terms of the bill are unjust, both to Manitoba and the other provinces.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his cogent and logical hour's address, confined himself almost exclusively to the subject of his amendment. His only reference to the school question was a pertinent query for information from the Quebec Ministerialists as to the meaning of the statement in the Postmaster-General's official organ that if the Nationalists submitted to the present bill it was only on the understanding that the Catholic minority, not only in Keewatin, but in Manitoba also, would get their rights. He pointed out that while the Government wanted him to first state his position, the Ministers, at the same time, dare not explain their policy to the House. In the meantime he stood within the lines of Torres Vedras. Finally, he counselled the Premier to meet all the issues raised by the bill honestly and manfully. Promises and compromises would only result in further embarrassments on the morrow.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was greeted with prolonged Liberal cheering, recalled that during the election campaign which ended on September 21, there were loud and many assertions that if the Conservative party were returned to power the long controversy over the Manitoba boundary and all it entailed would be satisfactorily settled. It would be a surprise to those who had accepted these pre-election assurances at their face value to see the sample of promise-keeping now submitted by the victorious Administration. The Liberal leader reviewed the history of the negotiations in considerable detail, from their inception to the final offer of the late Administration on terms which were deemed fair and reasonable. Finally, in 1911, the Manitoba Government had accepted the boundary offer, and the only cleavage which remained was the question of compensation for lands. The then Federal Government thought compensation should be given for the lands in the added territory, while Manitoba claimed compensation for all the lands in the Province.

Premier Roblin's Jubilation.

When the present Administration took office Premier Roblin and Attorney-General Campbell had conferred with them, and, after the conference Mr. Roblin had declared that Manitoba had won every point. "He left exultant and jubilant," continued Sir Wilfrid, "so jubilant that his joy bubbled over. He buttonholed every newspaperman he could get hold of, and the Conservative press of Ottawa, Toronto and Winnipeg paraded his statements of jubilation. But unfortunately Mr. Roblin crowed too soon. The noise he made was his undoing. He aroused Sir James Whitney from his slumbers in Queen's Park, and when Sir James Whitney finally awoke he began to thunder for an Ontario port. Then everything was upset again. The Ministerial papers were told to sing another tune and began to assure the public that the settlement they had proclaimed a few days before was no settlement, and the thing had not been settled at all. Then followed the dug of war between the doughty champions. There were marches and counter-marches, manoeuvres and counter-manoeuvres, secret expeditions from Winnipeg to Ottawa and from Ottawa to Winnipeg, secret expeditions from Toronto to Ottawa and from Ottawa to Toronto, and so on and so on for nearly three months, negotiations and quarrels, and then this hybrid conception: Manitoba, the sovereignty without the lands; Ontario, the lands without the sovereignty. It was," commented Sir Wilfrid, amid laughter and applause, "a settlement which took from Manitoba a portion of her lands, and would force Ontario to forfeit her present Provincial railway charter. It gives a black eye to Manitoba and a gold brick to Ontario," was Sir Wilfrid's summing of the situation.

Pre-election Promises.

Continuing, the Liberal Chief confronted Premier Borden with his pre-election promises to restore to Manitoba and the sister prairie Provinces their lands "at the first opportunity. This promise, like the Halifax platform, had been buried beneath the dust of a merciful oblivion. This was "the first opportunity" that Mr. Borden had talked about in his pre-election promises. What was to prevent him carrying out his promises now? Sir Wilfrid understood Mr. Borden's position. He himself had experienced some of the difficulties with which the present Premier was confronted. Mr. Borden was learning the responsibility of his position, and recognizing the irresponsibility of his pre-election pledges. He counselled the present Premier to meet the issues honestly and manfully. "If he puts them off and compromises he will only meet to-morrow the same lions which he finds in his path to-day," declared the Liberal leader. The Premier's present course, he warned him, was "poor business, poor politics and poor statesmanship."

Not Hostile to Manitoba.

An effort had been made to represent him as hostile to Manitoba, continued Sir Wilfrid. He begrudged nothing to Manitoba. "Why should I be the enemy of Manitoba?" he proceeded. "Far from it. I am a Canadian, looking at the question as a Canadian, and seeking to remember my Canadian stewardship." Manitoba was welcome to every advantage which she could rightfully secure. His objection was not so the money to be granted nor to the amount of it." It was the principle which had been adopted. He recognized it was an ungrateful and ungracious task to fight against concessions, but the question was higher than a mere question of money. The financial terms were not a corollary of the boundary question. Manitoba could always come at any time for a readjustment or reconsideration of terms but if these matters were determined by interprovincial conference and mutual agreement the basis of Confederation would be more secure.

Opening Door to Other Claims.

"You are opening a door to other claims, which you will be unable to resist when you are confronted with them," Sir Wilfrid told the Government. British Columbia had claims and other Provinces had claims. It should be the aim of the Federal power to keep the basis of Confederation secure, and the sister Provinces should be treated with strict fairness and impartiality. In the Province from which he came the supporters of the Government, the members of the Government, had adopted another line of pre-election pledges on this question, and had sought to stir up quite an agitation.

Not Ready to Speak.

He saw by l'Evenement, the Ministers' official organ, and the Quebec Ministerial press within the past few days that there should be no agitation, that matters were satisfactory and that the Ministers would speak and give the explanation. What was the significance of that? "They do not seem in a hurry to speak," added Sir Wilfrid, leaning over his desk to Hon. Messrs. Pelletier and Monk while the Liberals roared with laughter. But the two ministers sat silent. "Then, as they have nothing to say I will say nothing further on the matter," he added. At this the Government benches broke into ironical applause.

Quebec Told to Wait.

"I quite understand the spirit of these cheers," continued Sir Wilfrid when silence had finally been restored. "The Ministers claim to have a policy for their Province. The people of Quebec are told to wait and the Ministers will speak. The Ministers dare not explain their policy to this House. They want me to discuss it before they present it. Why not speak if they want a reply? (Liberal cheers). Let them speak now. I shall be happy to hear their views. (Renewed laughter and cheers, during which the Ministers continued to sit silent.)

"My hon. friend the Minister, I understand," continued Sir Wilfrid addressing himself to Mr. Pelletier, "has a speech of a ream of paper prepared upon the matter."

"But that was in Quebec," volunteered Hon. Mr. Lemieux, amid more laughter.

"If he has anything to say now I shall stand on the line of Torres Sir Wilfrid, pausing in vain for a response. "Then, in the meantime I shall stad on the line of Torres Vedras," he concluded, amid further laughter.

Mr. Pelletier Stirred.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Conservative-Nationalist Postmaster General, could stand it no longer. "You have said nothing," he exclaimed angrily.

"You have given me nothing to speak to," replied Sir Wilfrid, "but when the time comes to speak let me tell my hon. friend I shall speak and I shall not be backward about it, either." (Prolonged Liberal applause.)

Sir Wilfrid's Amendment.

Sir Wilfrid concluded by moving the following amendment: "That this bill be not now read a second time, but that it be resolved that while this House is favourable to the extension of the boundaries of the Province of Manitoba, it is of opinion that the terms under which it is proposed to make the said extensions, as set forth in this bill and in the order in Council of February 20th, 1912, are unfair and unjust both to the people of Manitoba and to the people of the other Provinces of the Dominion."

The vote took place at 6 o'clock and resulted in the defeat of the amendment by a vote of 166 to 65, a Government majority of 38. Messrs. Paquet, Lamarche, Sevigny, Bellemare and Guilbault, Conservatives, voted with the Opposition, while Mr. Mondou refrained from voting.

"The Drunkard"

What the Book is, and Why Everyone is Discussing It—Deals With the Psychology of Drunkenness.

Guy Thorne's recently published novel, "The Drunkard," is certainly a much-discussed book, and a startling and impressive one into the bargain. The explanation of its appeal is not far to seek, and the following brief account of it may be welcome.

A word first as to the author. Any book by Guy Thorne is sure of wide attention, for his "When It Was Dark," published some years since, held an immense audience, and some 100,000 copies of it were sold in Great Britain and abroad. Without rashness a prophet might foretell great good fortune for its successor, "The Drunkard."

Now for a sketch of the story itself. With the opening of the novel proper, we are introduced to Lothian, the "hero," a brilliant and successful man who, as a youth, with money to spend and many friends, gave himself too much to the gaieties of the town. With his marriage to a lovely and devoted woman, he at first puts the brakes on his inclinations, but the love of alcohol sticks by him and he passes into the settled habits of a heavy drinker. His wife vainly seeks to change him, but the unfortunate Lothian goes swiftly down doomed and disastrous steps. His love for his wife gives place to an entanglement with a strange woman. Black thoughts and criminal plans spring from the poisoned and perverted brain, and involve others as well as himself in tragedy. But we must not betray the plot; the reader may discover it for himself.

As to why this novel arrests attention, in the first place, because it presents, alone in English fiction, so far as we know, the real psychology of the inebriate—not the fantastic notions held by abstemious old women of both sexes as to his physical and mental state. Imaginative writings dealing with intemperance abound, but these have treated the subject either feebly or in a purely external fashion. Walter Besant's "Demoniac," for example, is a puerile, preposterous, and fantastic tale over which the scientist and the drunkard alike will laugh. Mrs. Henry Wood's 'Danesbury House" is for us of today, weak and ineffective. And the concern of Zola's powerful novel 'L'Assomoir" (entitled in English 'The Dram Shop") is with the obvious results of intemperance rather than with the shattered mind, tortured nerves, and perverted feelings that are the hidden horrors of the victim of alcohol.

Again, to women, for whom the intemperance of sons or husbands is a bitter personal problem, this novel makes a very special appeal, for they turn to it for help and information.

The book will be hailed, too, by temperance reformers as a strongly, for they shrewdly recognise that a vivid story, leaving its readers with a lively sense of intemperance as a menace to the happiness and well-being of the race, is more potent for warning and reform than the most eloquent exhortation.

But it is the intrinsic merits of a novel as a novel that make real success, and may we not thus sum up these merits in the present case: It is an engrossing story, varied in scenes and characters, deeply moving in sentiment, dramatic in incident, graphic in characterization, and indelibly impressive in its great moments. If the appeal of the novel is so varied, and if its artistic merits are such as its admirers claim, what more natural for "The Drunkard" than a great and widespread success? —New York: The Sturgis & Walton Company.

TRIO OF MEN IN THE TOILS.

Were Charged With Being Drunk and Disorderly.

Three local men were fined each $5 and costs, amounting collectively to $26.25, in the police court this morning. The charge against them was one of disorderly conduct, while apparently under the influence of liquor. About two o'clock this morning they attempted to gain admittance to the rooms above McDermid and Jury's drug store, thereby putting the occupants to considerable annoyance. The trio pleaded guilty and paid their fines forthwith.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

LAKEFIELD CAME FROM BEHIND AND WON ROUND FROM T.A.S. BY 10 TO 8

Injury to Lancefield and Bunched Penalties Cost Abstainers Game After They Led at Half Time by 3 to 0.

AN EXCITING FINISH

Three goals ahead on the round with fifteen minutes to play, the T. A. S. crumpled up in the last quarter of last night's return game at Lakefield and the Cementville aggregation aided by T.A.S. penalties and an injury which necessitated the retirement of Cover-point Tom Lancefield, ran in enough goals in the dying stages to win the game by 7 goals to 3 and the round by 10 to 8. Until Lancefield was hurt it looked like T.A.S. all over. They were in front 3 to 0 at half time and although Lakefield scored two goals during the first fifteen minutes of play in the second half, the Abstainers had had quite as much of the play as had the homesters and looked certain to land the round. Lancefield was put out of the game as a result of a particularly dirty piece of work, for which there could be no justification found, Rowe, the point player of the Lakefield team, deliberately and viciously cutting him across the back of the leg, just above the ankle. Lancefield went down in a heap as if he had been lassooed and was carried off the ice, unable to finish the battle.

This was the turning point in the game. As soon as play was resumed Halpin and Callaghan were benched almost together for slashing and Lakefield took advantage of their numerical superiority to tie up the game. Then as Callaghan came back to the ice, E. Lancefield was chased for tripping and with only O'Dette, Callaghan, Coughlin and McFadden left to try to hold the Cementville gang, the Abstainers' changes for the championship went aglimmering, Lakefield banging in three goals. They added another before time was called, thus winning the round by two goals.

The Abstainers are to be congratulated upon their showing under the conditions. In the first place they were shy the services of McPhee who has been one of their stars all season. They had only six men in uniform when the time to start the game came and "Chuck" Callaghan had to be pressed into service, going into the battle with borrowed skates and outfit. Then the little rink, with no boards on one side and the spectators grouped where the boarding should have been, was a decided handicap. Every time a goal was scored the enthusiastic Lakefield supporters sallied out on the ice and had a war dance and sometimes they were inclined to be rather in the way.

At half time the most enthusiastic of the Lakefield supporters were inclined to be glum. The Abstainers outplayed the homesters during the first half at their own game and looked to have the game safely packed away. McFadden's great goal keeping and the sterling defence work of the two Lancefields, coupled with the close and aggressive checking of the forward line had the Simpson bunch anchored. The Abstainers kept shooting the rubber down the ice at every opportunity and scored three goals before the breathing spell, while Lakefield failed to find the nets at all. The same tactics were kept up in the second half until Lancefield was hurt and the penalties cleared up the ice for the Lakefield bunch, who took full advantage of the golden opportunity to bag enough goals to annex the game and the round. It was sure a hard-luck game to lose.

Under the conditions combination was a difficult matter and neither team showed much team work, although Lakefield worked some nice passing when they had two men to the good.

It was necessarily a close, hard-checking affair, with a constant series of scrimmages and a difficult game for a referee to handle. W. McClavey of Peterborough, was the bell swinger and although some of the Abstainers were inclined to be peeved with his rulings, from the side lines it did not look as if there was much cause for complaint. Perhaps the four minute penalty to Halpin for slashing an opponent's stick was more severe than the offence justified, but on the whole, from an impartial standpoint, the official handled the game satisfactorily. It is hard luck to lose a game on penalties, but it is only more illustration of the fact that a man on the ice is worth two on the fence.

It was a battle royal from the drop of the hat, with the Abstainers outplaying the Simpson team right off the reel. The two Lancefields were shooting every time they got the rubber, and with the T. A. S. forwards following down, the homesters only rarely broke away. After 10 minutes hard playing Callaghan scored on a nice shot from the side and the Abstainers were in front 1 to 0. For fifteen minutes more the teams battled vigorously. Lakefield had a number of good openings but McFadden stopped and cleared in phenomenal fashion. Then Halpin scored again for T.A.S. from a shot from a scrimmage and shortly before half time Coughlin added another, leaving the score at half time 3 to 0.

The second half started out in much the same fashion, the Abstainers holding the Lakefield bunch in grand style. Finally Rowe lifted a long one from centre which McFadden lost among the rafters and which landed in the nets. Shortly after Simpson made it 3 to 2 on a shot from the side. Then Rowe chopped Lancefield down and the fat was on the fire. McClavey gave Rowe four minutes for the offence. Lancefield was carried off and it was up to Lakefield to drop a man to even up. To the surprise of the T. A.S. team the Lakefield bunch calmly proposed to drop Rowe, overlooking the fact that there was a four minute penalty to be served. One man was enough to go off, they said, and for fifteen minutes there was an argument in which both teams, their supporters and the referee took part. McClavey properly ruled that the homesters would have to drop another man in addition to Rowe for four minutes and finally Hill was sent to the sidelines for four minutes and the game went on. Then came the penalties to Halpin, Callaghan and Lancefield, and Lakefield came from behind and won out, Hill getting the majority of the goals.

McFadden played a fine game in the nets for the Abstainers and the Lakefield boys made a splendid defence. All the forwards worked hard and did remarkable work under the circumstances. Blewitt and Simpson were the best of the Lakefield team, with Crawford doing some nice work on the defence. The summary:

1 T.A.S., Callaghan 10 mins.
2 T.A.S., Halpin 15 mins.
3 T.A.S., Coughlin 4 mins.
Half Time—
4 Lakefield, Rowe 4 mins.
5 Lakefield, Simpson 7 mins.
6 Lakefield, Simpson, 4.30 mins.
7 Lakefield, Hill, 30 secs.
8 Lakefield, Simpson 1 min.
9 Lakefield, Hill 2 mins.
10 Lakefield, Hill 4 mins.

FINAL GAME IN THE TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE

Lakefield and Marmora Will Come Together at Brock Street Rink To-morrow Night in a Sudden Death Game for the Silverware.

The final game for the championship of the Trent Valley Hockey League will be played at Brock street rink to-morrow night, when Marmora the champions of District No. 1 and Lakefield, winners of the other two districts will meet in a sudden death battle. The game should be by far the most interesting seen in the Trent Valley League this season. Marmora has declared a half holiday and will send up a big bunch of fans on a special train, while Lakefield will not lack supporters and Peterborough fans will turn out enmasse. The Marmora team is said by those who have seen them work, to be plenty fast enough for the intermediate O.H.A. Certainly if they have many more players the equal of Bloomfield, they will have to be considered all the way. They are the logical favourites in to-morrow night's battle, but the Lakefield bunch has a bad habit of spilling the beans and may give Marmora a battle royal, Harvey Sproule of Toronto, will handle the game. The teams will line-up as follows:

Lakefield		Marmora
	Goal
Hill		Crosby
	Point
Rowe		Gladney
	Cover-Point
Crawford		Deforge
	Rover
Blewitt		McWilliams
	Centre
Simpson		Jones
	Right Wing
Morin		Bloomfield
	Left Wing
Hill		Naylor

"OLD FOLKS" TEMPLIN IS LIKELY SELECTION AS PETERBOROUGH MANAGER

Everything looks rosy for the Peterborough Baseball Club Limited. The stock has sold more rapidly than the most enthusiastic supporter of the proposition dared to hope for and now the actual work of gathering the team together and arranging for the opening of the season will be proceeded with.

An enthusiastic meeting of the executive was held last night at which satisfactory arrangements were made with the owners of Riverside Park for the use of the cross-the-river ball grounds for the season. Baseball men from other cities who have looked over the grounds say they should prove ideal, and there will, therefore, be no difficulty on that score.

The managership question was also taken up last night. Of the five applications for managership, the one most favourably considered was that of Old Folks Templin, of last year's champion Berlin team. There is a little matter of terms in which the local management do not see eye to eye with Templin, but it is thought there will be no difficulty in making satisfactory arrangements. A telegram has been sent to Templin at his home in Reading, Pa., asking him to come to Peterborough at once, to meet the local promoters, and he will likely be here to-morrow to talk over the situation.

An application is being made to the Legislature for a charter for the company.

THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE SETTLED

The big game of the season in the Mercantile League will be played on Saturday night at Brock street rink, when the Bell Telephone team, undefeated leaders so far this season will meet the C.G.E. Tool Room, last year's champions. The championship of the League depends upon the result of this battle. When the two teams met earlier this season, the Bell won by a small margin and if they pack another victory under their belts on Saturday night, they will have the League title stored away. On the other hand, a win for the C.G.E. bunch will tie the two teams for the championship. So far the teams have been unable to agree upon a referee and the League will likely appoint an official. The game will be played between 7 and 8 o'clock.

Match Between Mixed Rinks

A three-game exhibition match between mixed rinks, composed of members of the Ladies' and Gentlemen's Curling Clubs of Peterborough was the feature of the Curling programme at the Charlotte Street rink yesterday afternoon. This event is probably one of the first of its kind that has ever been pulled off in the city, and it is safe to say that both parties are satisfied at the outcome. They have seen their opponents in action and they are no longer asked to face an unknown quantity.

Since the inception of the Ladies' Curling Club, the members have pursued the task of acquiring the fine points of the roaring game with avidity, until they have reached the stage, where they can well be considered as worthy opponents, in any event in which they might have occasion to figure. To the casual spectator, who watched the games yesterday, cannot be denied the liberty of forming his own opinion as to the brand of curling put up by the rinks but it is safe to assume that no disparagement could be pointed out in favour of either side as regards the roster.

The rinks skipped by Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Coulthard furnished probably the best exhibition game on the card. It was a 19-end fixture, and was productive of many brilliant plays. Mrs. Matthews led in the first two ends by two shots, while in the next end, Mrs. Coulthard secured three of a tally. The score at the finish was 11-9 in favour of Mrs. Matthews' rink. The latter scored the last shot.

As the score will indicate, the game in which Mrs. Goodwill and Mrs. Stanton figured as skips, was not quite so evenly balanced. Although some excellent curling was shown to advantage in this contest, luck favoured Mrs. Goodwill's rink throughout the game. She received stronger support from her rink, in the critical stages of the game, than did Mrs. Stratton. The score at the finish stood 15-5 in favour of Mrs. Goodwill's rink.

Mrs. Hazen Ritchie and Mrs. Hill skipped the last two rinks, the latter being the only lady curler attached to her rink. It was a good game, with odds in favour of Mrs. Hill's quartette, although, at times, Mrs. Ritchie's rink proved to be dangerous quarry to deal with, and it was only by several well and judiciously placed shots, by the former, that enabled them to pull out with a lead of eight shots, the score being 17-9 in favour of Mrs. Hill's rink, at the finish.

Following is the summary for the three games:

Mr. E. C. McLeod	Mr. Adam Hall
Mrs. Adam Hall	Mrs. Grant
Mr. W. Ferguson	Mr. W. Morrow
Mrs. F. Matthews	Mrs. Coulthard

YANKING IT UP AGAIN.

By Grantland Rice.

How dear to each bug is the onrushing springtime,
When fond recollection rehearses the dope;
The Wagner and Larry, the Cobb and the Kling-time,
Involved in the epoch of lighting the rope;
The wide-spreading shortstop, the batting lamp glowing,
The tall rangy person who stands on the hill—
But dearer than all in the reaping and sowing,
The old oaken* bludgeon that hammers the pill.

* Poetic license for "ash."

BASEBALL

Mobile, Ala., March 6.—Joe Jackson's ambition is to beat out Ty Cobb. Jackson will train here to contest Cobb's laurels as a base runner, as well as a batter. "I am going to get my legs and arms in shape before I touch a bat," said the Nap slugger. "I will need batting practice, too, but I am a better batter than a runner or thrower. I will work to bring up my all-round playing. Then I will notify Ty Cobb. If he slows up a bit they'll be talking of Joe Jackson."

CINCINNATI TEAM COMPLETE.

Columbus, Ga., March 6.—With the arrival of Pitchers Harry Gaspar and George Suggs, the Cincinnati team is practically complete to-day. Dahlgren, a recruit, is the only hold-out, and he is expected soon to come in. Because of rain the Reds were forced to work indoors.

MORIARITY WITH TIGERS.

Monroe, La., March 6.—Since Manager Hugh Jennings' arrival bad weather has interfered with his "getting a line" on the Tigers. Word was received here to-day that Third Baseman Moriarity, of the hold-out brigade, has sent in his signed contract. To-day Jennings had his recruit brigade on exhibition.

Word has reached the Tiger camp of the death in Philadelphia of Mrs. Joseph Sugden, wife of Joe Sugden, coach and scout for the Tigers. Joe left yesterday, but will not reach Philadelphia until late to-day.

PIRATES CLIMB HILLS.

West Baden, Ind., March 6.—Copious draughts of mineral water and stiff exercising climbing hills near here and running in the covered track fell to the lot of the Pirates to-day. Pitcher Camnitz and Catcher Simon are new additions to the party to-day.

STOVALL WITH THE BROWNS.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 6.—George Stovall, leading first baseman last season, and ex-manager of the Cleveland Naps, will play with the St. Louis Browns. He came here yesterday, closed up his affairs and left. Stovall, traded for Lefty George, denied he has any grievance.

GETTING SORE ON CHARLOTTESVILLE

Charlottesville, Va., March 6.—Another mixed downpour of snow and rain to-day kept the Washington Nationals in the gymnasium. Manager Griffith fears that the diamond cannot be used before Monday and is planning to have a spring training ground hereafter at Raleigh, N.C. Walter Johnson is expected Thursday.

Waco, Texas, March 6.—Billy Sullivan, the conservative veteran backstop of the Chicago White Sox aggregation, to-day predicted that "Flame" Delhi, the twirler recruit from the Pacific coast, will become another Ed. Walsh. Sullivan has taken personal charge of the youngster's training and declares he "has got anything anybody else has, and something others have not."

A THRILLING RUNAWAY.

A horse belonging to a local livery stable disposed of its driver in some unaccountable manner last evening, and utilizing George street for a temporary speedway, furnished a few hundred citizens with an hair-raising exhibition of law-breaking. Tied to a fancy red cutter, it ran from Smith street, down Peterborough's main thoroughfare, and not until Charlotte street was reached, did it encounter any opposition to its heretofore untrammelled career. Here it sighted two blue-coated minions of the law, stationed on opposite corners of the street, and was smitten with such a strong sense of fear as to cause its heart to suspend business for a few moments. This proved disastrous for which were responsible for the cutter, for, with a telephone pole as an intercepting medium, they both parted company. With nothing but the shafts attached, the horse sped southward, and was finally captured in the vicinity of Lake street. It's legs were badly cut as a result of the shafts striking them.

The cutter was badly wrecked, and for some time was the cynosure of a couple of hundred people, bent upon figuring out the circumstances, which was responsible for the cutter's dilapidated appearance. A little blood spattered over the wreck would have heightened the scope of imagination to an appreciable degree for the crowd.

Big Factory Run Entirely By Women

Over 1000 Are Employed and There Are Only 50 Men

PARIS, March 6.—A silk spinning factory near Marseilles, founded and managed by a woman and run on model lines almost exclusively by women, has, within nine years, risen to be one of the most important industrial concerns in the neighbourhood.

Mme. Garnier, the owner, employs 1,000 women. There are only 50 men in the factory, and they are stokers or responsible for other work not suitable for women. The factory was constructed according to Mme. Garnier's own plan. The machinery for silk spinning, which is her own invention, is so perfect that the economy in production enables her to pay her hands more than the average wages and at the same time to compete successfully with her rivals.

So highly is the product of her factory esteemed that two great silk weaving concerns have monoolized for a number of years the entire output. For the benefit of her workpeople she has established an infirmary and a creche, the whole of this work being carried out with female assistance only. Her bookkeepers, inspectors ,directors, and controllers are all women, and there has never been a strike.

WHY HESITATE?

An Offer That Involves no Money Risk If You Accept It.

We are so positive our remedy will completely relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish it free of all cost if it fails.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

INTO the lives of all of us there seem to come certain days when everything, "from morn till noon, from noon till dewy eve" in more prosaic words, all day long, seems to happen exactly wrong. We go from one mistake, and mishap and frustration to another and evening finds us at the last, cross and weary and disappointed with our day.

We have an old saying to account for such days. It is, "I must have gotten out of the wrong side of the bed." I wonder if there isn't more truth than we realise in that homely expression. I wonder if the whole trouble is not that we somehow start wrong, and the only cure is to stop right still and start all over again—right.

Surely you have noticed that when you try to walk across a dark room, if you don't start just right and collide with some object, you are sure to lose your sense of direction and collide with a dozen before you reach your goal. The only thing to do is to stop, get your bearings and your temper, wait a minute, and then start again—right.

If I am wrong on the typewriter and make one mistake, I am sure to follow it up with half a dozen if I go on at the same pace. I have found, and I fancy other typists must have also discovered, that the only way to get going right is to stop a minute, calm down and start again—right.

If a singer finds herself very much off the key, it is pretty hard to drop or rise to the right key. The safer, surer way is to stop, go back to the beginning and start again—right

Now it seems to me that these days when everything goes dead wrong are simply times when somehow or other we have gotten off the key of right living, out of tune with the universe,, and that it is useless to try to jump back to the right key. The only sure way to get in tune again is to stop short, go back to the beginning and begin again,—right.

You remind me that, owing to the fact that time has a disagreeable prejudice to turning backwards in its flight for anyone, whomsoever, this would be a rather difficult process? Well, I didn't mean it quite so literally. I just meant to drop out of the busy hum of life for a few moments, be by yourself and relax. If your time is your own, read some peaceful book for a little while, or go for a solitary walk. At any rate sit still for a few minutes and just try to get hold of yourself, if you know what that means, and then start out afresh—right, on the right key in tune with the universe.

If you can learn to do this I promise you that many times when you have "gotten out of bed on quite the wrong side" you shall still overcome that mistake, and evening shall not and you cross and weary and disappointed, but at peace with yourself and even very happy at having conquered failure and snatched victory from the jaws of defeat.

OPTION OF FLOWERS FOR MEMBERS OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

TO BEAUTIFY THE CITY

It is the usual custom of the Horticultural Society to give a premium of flower bulbs to members every year. For 1912, several options of flowers will be offered and members can make a selection according to their preference. The following report from the secretary gives the details of the arrangement:

At the meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society executive a few nights ago, the following letter was read from the secretary showing the option of flowers that members may receive this year:

Peterborough, Mar. 4, 1912.

In the past it has been the rule for your directors to meet and decide upon a premium for distribution among the members, a task which has generally proved satisfactory to all. However, your directors this year thought that it would be well to give you a choice of four options as listed herewith:

OPTION ONE

1. One Paeony, Festiva Maxima, a grand white.
2. One Ampelopsis Veitchii or Boston Ivy.
3. One Rosa Rugosa, Rubra deep rose.

OPTION TWO

1. Three Begonias.
2. Three Fuchsias.
3. Three Geraniums.

OPTION THREE

1. One Bush or Tree Honeysuckle, pink.
2. One Hydrangea Aboroscens, a grand climbing variety.
3. One Crimson Rambler, climbing rose.

OPTION FOUR

1. One Dorothy Perkins, pink climbing rose.
2. One Wigelie Rosea, pink flowering shrub.
3. One Lilium Auratum, the King Liy of Japan.

To receive either of these options you will mark your choice on the accompanying slip and with the necessary annual fee of $1.00 forwarded to the secretary-treasurer by April 1st, when you will receive a membership ticket entitling you to the option marked, the Fall Distribution of bulbs and the publication, The Canadian Horticulturist.

We would also ask you to assist in adding to our membership one or more members for which service you will be entitled to receive a choice of one of the following works:

1. Hints on Growing Flowers.
2. Flower Bulbs and their Culture.
3. The Vegetable Garden.

THIS IS INDEED A SEVERE TEST

C. MATTESEN HAS HAD RHEUMATISM ALL HIS LIFE.

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Have Benefited Him so Much he Recommends Them to Others—Why They Always Cure Rheumatism.

HOLBERG, B.C., MARCH 6.—(Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Rheumatism has been proved again and again. Where the dread disease is making its first inroads into the system the cure is quick and complete. Where the rheumatism is of longer standing it takes longer treatment, but the result is always the same. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure. Probably the hardest test Dodd's Kidney Pills have ever been given is in the case of Mr. C. Matteson of this place. It is best stated in his own words:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism all my life," Mr. Matteson states, "but I am happy to tell you that I have received so much benefit from Dodd's Kidney Pills that I can recommend them to others."

Here is a case of the longest possible standing. But Dodd's Kidney Pills will surely cure it. Why? Because uric acid in the blood is the cause of rheumatism, and Dodd's Kidney Pills take the uric acid out of the blood by making the kidneys do their proper work.

PRESENT RETURNS OF VOTING FOR CHURCH UNION

Some of the Figures That Have Been Compiled Show Large Number in Favour of Amalgamation

MAJORITY FOR MUST BE BIG

Presbyterian Vote.

Presbyterian congregations through out Canada that have voted on the union of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches, 172.

Number of Presbyterians who have voted on the question, 10,469.

Number of ballots cast in favour of union, 8,308.

Number of ballots cast against union, 6,129.

Proportion is 3.80 members to 1.

Methodist Vote.

Number of quarterly official boards of Methodist churches throughout Canada that have voted on the proposed union, 103.

Number of ministers and officials who have cast their ballots on the present proposed basis, 2,057.

Number of ballots cast against union, 239.

Majority for church union, 2,209.

Proportion is 10.24 officials to 1.

Union Not Certain.

That union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches of the Dominion will not be brought about by the present campaign and voting is almost evident by the figures shown above, which have just been compiled on the vote as polled to date.

From present indications Ontario Presbyterians will about split even on the proposal, but the West will pile up a large majority for the amalgamation.

It is remarkable to note that out of 13,169 votes cast on both sides 10,750 were marked with a cross beside "for."

Must be Big Majority.

Before the Presbyterian General Assembly will give the matter serious consideration for definite action the majority must be so great that there will be no doubt as to the feeling. Probably ten members to one will be the basis upon which the feeling will be calculated.

"It must not be less than five to one anyway," states Rev. Dr. R. P. MacKay, moderator of the general assembly. "The vote must show a very strong majority to justify the Presbyterian church proceeding with the union."

Rev. Dr. Carman, superintendent of the Canadian Methodist church, has also stated that the vote on the part of the Methodists must be large and more than five to one in favour before it can be considered seriously.

30,000,000 EGGS FROM U.S. TO CANADA

Were Imported Last Year by Canadians—Eggs Dear the World Over

Canada imported 2,500,000 dozen cases eggs from the United States during the year 1911, when the exportation of eggs from the nation to the south of us, notwithstanding high prices, was the largest ever recorded. Despite the fact that current market reports and current discussions of the cost of living indicate unusually high prices in the United States, for this article of consumption and commerce, the Bureau of Statistics is reporting a larger exportation in this line than ever before. The number of eggs sent to foreign countries in the year ending with December, 1911, was 13?250,000 dozen valued at $2,175,000, while the highest record of any previous calendar year was 8,500,000 dozen, valued at $1,750,000, in 1907.

Cuba, Canada and Panama and Mexico are the chief countries to which eggs are exported from the United States. Of the 1,500,000 dozen eggs imported into the United States during the fiscal year of 1911, 1,350,000 dozen were from England and about a quarter of a million from China and Hong Kong. This item of eggs imported does not include the yolks brought from other countries, of which the quantity imported from Canada amounted to 350,000 pounds, and from Germany 75,000 pounds in the year ending June 30, 1911.

This large exportation of eggs in the face of the extremely high prices existing in the United States suggest, to Canadians, that the prices of this class of merchandise must be also high in other parts of the world, and this is confirmed by consular reports reaching the Department of Commerce and Labour, Washington, which indicate that the prices of eggs and other provisions are unusually high in England, France, Austria, Germany, Spain, Japan and many other countries.

To Freshen Apples.

Oftentimes apples that have been in a dry cellar or pit all winter are so dry and withered that you can hardly cook them. The best way to renew them is to soak them in water for 48 hours.

Wash the apples clean and put them in a wooden tub or stone crock. Never put them in copper. Pour clear cold water on them and change the water every six hours. Add a handful of salt to every three gallons of water and the apples will be fresh.

FRANCE ATTRIBUTES RACE SUICIDE TO ALCOHOLISM

PARIS, March 6.—Once again the bill designed to limit saloons in France has been tabled, and its defeat seems a foregone conclusion, the liquor interests controlling about three-fourths of the chamber. There are 480,000 saloons in France or one for each 80 inhabitants. It is proposed to limit saloons to one for every 200. Paris has 30,000 saloons. In 1830 the average amount of intoxicants consumed annually per person was about one quart; it is more than three quarts each at present. Alcoholism is said to be largely responsible for race suicide in France.

MEETING OF WATER COMMISSIONERS

Manner of Reporting Inspections Discussed

A meeting of the Water Commissioners was held yesterday afternoon with Mr. T. F. Matthews presiding and Messrs. W. H. Moore and W. H. Hill present.

A request from Mr. Jos. Crowe, Cross street, for a water service, was referred to the Superintendent.

A petition from Mr. G. Walter Green for a service to the company's machine shop on the north side of McDonnel street. It was decided that he pay $6 a year for this service and that the total charge for machine shop and stable be $10.

Mr. T. B. McGrath, one of the recently appointed inspectors of the water services throughout the city, appeared before the Commissioners in regard to the manner of tabulating his reports. An arrangement was effected whereby the tabulation, in future, shall coincide with the requirements of the Acting Superintendent.

THE SEAT SALE OPENED TO-DAY

Seats For "The Stampede" Are Very Much in Demand

A strong play of the west; an atmosphere of the great Arizona desert; the Witch Creek Indians fighting to retain their lands against unscrupulous land grabbers; beautiful scenery; wonderful mechanical and electrical effects are parts of "The Stampede" which will be at the Grand Opera House on Saturday next, March 9th, with a Saturday matinee. It comes to Peterborough with the indorsement of theatre-goers in all the large cities of the United States. It is a strong beautiful play by Cecil de Mille, and is rightfully called a companion play to "Strongheart" or "The Squawman." The seat sale opened this morning.

Shows Up A Combine

Mr. B. E. Canniff Making a Name for Himself in Calgary

Mr. B. E. Canniff, formerly of this city and son of Mr. Jas. Canniff, of Peterborough, has been strongly in the limelight, in Calgary, recently, by reason of an able and exhaustive exposee of an alleged combine among the fruit firms of Alberta City. Mr. Canniff went to Calgary five months ago, to take a position as editor of the Western Canada Trade Gazette, and an article by him, in that paper, has caused somewhat of a sensation. The News-Telegram publishes a photograph of the Peterborough boy with a lengthy reference to his activity in this respect.

A FIREMAN'S PERIL

How Zam-Buk Delivered Him

At 215 Fraser Ave., Edmonton, Alta., lives W. P. Mahy, a former member of the local fire brigade, who has wonderful cause to be thankful for the curative powers of Zam-Buk. He says: "A serious skin disease broke out on my face, and spread until I was in a terrible state. The spots and little ulcers were frightfully irritating, and yet when scratched or rubbed they bled and smarted. Shaving caused me agony, and sometimes I would have to go two weeks without a shave. I tried home-made remedies, herb salves, and various other preparations, but the sores got no better. When Zam-Buk was mentioned I had little faith that it would be able to do me any good. My case seemed such an obstinate one. I gave it a fair trial, however, and the first box made such a wonderful change for the better that it gave me encouragement to continue. I did so, and to cut a long story short, Zam-Buk, in the end, quite cured me. My face is now clear of all traces of the terrible disease, which troubled me for so long."

Thousands of sufferers from eczema blood poison, ulcers, chronic sores, piles, ringworm, cold sores, cuts burns and skin injuries, have been relieved and cured, as was Mr. Mahy by Zam-Buk. As a balm for all skin injuries and diseases it is without equal. All druggists and stores at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

"NEW-COMER" AS A "KNOCKER"

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice in your issue of last night a letter from some one who signs himself "Old Conservative and Orangeman." He may be a Conservative, but I doubt whether they have his name on their roll. Now, as regards Mr. Webb, I can say he is a hard-working man, and has some common sense. It seems to me, sir, our friends seems a little jealous, not of Mr. Webb, but of the butter-in, or new-comers as he calls them, because they come here and get all the good jobs. Well, I feel sorry for our friend and others who have had, perhaps, to take a back seat because some sleepy Britisher, who has got more brains than they, has struck the fair city of telephone poles and waste paper, with small rocks sticking up in the roads and duck ponds where you can see the small boy, in the spring, sailing his small boat. This is what our friend calls a fair city. I would advise our friend to move to Lindsay; it may be better for his nerves. Besides, he would not find so many new comers there, and Mr. Webb would not affect his conscience. I hope our friend did not lose a job over the election. It's to bad if he did for it is enough to make any man sore to see a new comer get in ahead of him. But, remember, dear friend, this is the age when knowledge is power, so you must be content to work hard if you lack brains, and try not to be jealous, for it is the new comers that have and are building this "Fair City!" How is you old residents turn away every industry that applies at Peterborough's door? Because you are scared of the expense. I doubt whether our friends is a subscriber to the Morning Times. He might pick one up from some doorstep, or perhaps journey up to the free library and have a look at the Times there, and I shouldn't wonder but what he might jump on some sleigh so as to save a nickel car fare.

NEW COMER.

Note.—The above letter is printed not for its literary or argumentative value, but to illustrate to what sort of defenders the "New" Conservatism has descended. It seems to not be enough that new comers, party parvenus, should assume to speak in the name of decent, self-respecting Conservatives, but they must also have the impudence to jeer at and slander the conditions of a city that has given them a home and a living—dirty birds that foul the nest that shelters them. As a matter of fact, the writer of the letter criticised by "New Comer" was a Conservative, and a respected, helpful, public-spirited citizen, for years before Canada and Peterborough were anything but geographical terms to "New Comer" and similar writers, exponents and defenders of the "New" Conservatism, which is a mere political wart upon the body of the grand old party that has for the moment, especially in Peterborough, fallen under the dominance of sinister influences.

OBJECT TO TOOTING

South End Residents to Petition Re Engines Whistling

More work for the Council! A petition is being circulated among residents of the south end of the city to ask the Council to endeavour to put a stop to the whistling of locomotives. It is understood that most of the complaints are from residents along Bethune street. It is also stated that the petition will ask to prevent both C. P. R. and G. T. R. trains from whistling within the city limits. If the petition is sufficiently signed it will be presented to the City Fathers in the hope that something will be done to put a stop to what not a few residents consider an unnecessary nuisance.

CHIMNEY FIRE

The Fire Department received a call at noon to-day to a house belonging to Judge Huycke on McGill street, the chimney of which had caught fire and threatened to develop into a conflagration. There was no damage.

HISTORIC APRON

Was Used in Instituting I.O.O.F. Lodge Here

KINGSTON, MARCH 6.—The family of the late Charles T. Dickson have presented to Cataraqui Lodge, No. 10, I.O.O.F., the baldric and apron worn by the late G. P. Dickson in 1846, in Grand Lodge and during the time he made a missionary trip with others from Montreal to Cornwall, Brockville, Kingston, Picton, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton and St. Catharines, and at eleven places instituted lodges. The late Mr. Dickson became a member of the first lodge in Canada, which was instituted in Montreal in 1843. He was honoured by the order for many years and died in Toronto on May 13, 1893, at the age of 82.

Famous "Pint of Cough Syrup" Recipe

No Better Remedy at Any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Make a plain syrup by mixing two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a family supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2. It never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold instantly, and will usually stop the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. It tones up the jaded appetite and is just laxative enough to be helpful in a cough, and has a pleasing taste. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, throat tickle, sore lungs and asthma, and an unequaled remedy for whooping cough and croup.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is a prime favorite in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this recipe.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CHOIR PRACTICE TO-NIGHT.

MAPLE SYRUP MAY BE CHEAP THIS YEAR

Farmers Are Looking Forward to Heavy Flow of Sap.

With so many articles of food "up in the sky," it is some comfort to know that there is a prospect of one thing being cheap and plentiful this year. Farmers who have sugar bushes state that they are looking for the biggest yield of maple syrup that they have had in years.

"Invariably," said one man to The Examiner to-day, "when we have a long, cold winter, there is a big yield of sap, and it is always of the very finest quality. This winter is about as severe a one as we have ever had, and we should have a record-breaking year for syrup. Sap will soon be starting to run now, and we are busy getting things ready. There is a tremendous quantity of snow in the woods, and it is feared that this may interfere with operations. Unless it goes away with a big rush, however, we hope to get through, all right."

This car will arrive in Peterborough a 8.10 a.m., March 13th, and will remain on the Station siding at the Grand Trunk depot until 5.30 p.m., the same day. Everybody interested in that great country are cordially invited to pay this car a visit.

WILL BRAVERY BE RECOGNIZED?

Two Lindsay Men Will Probably Receive Recognition From Carnegie Hero Fund

It begins to look as if the heroic action of Messrs. J. L. Primeau and Fred Oliver in saving the two Ware children from a watery grave last Christmas Day will be recognized by the Carnegie Hero Commission.

Principal Rogers, of the Separate school, appeared before the Town Council last night in reference to the matter and explained the facts in connection with the heroic act.

Mr. Rogers said that citizens had nothing but words of praise for the heroic action of the two gentlemen, and he had written the secretary of the Carnegie Hero Fund in Pittsburg concerning the matter. The official had forwarded a form which he wished to be filled in. Mr. Rogers had complied with the request and asked the Council to pass a resolution endorsing his action. He felt that the bravery of the two men should be recognized.

Mayor Wood assured Mr. Rogers that the matter would receive due attention. It was a worthy object and he was pleased to see Mr. Rogers as a citizen taking such an active interest in the matter, and the Council would do its best to see that the act received proper consideration.—Lindsay Post.

FAME DICKENS GAVE BATH.

Bath is a city for which the Dickens lover ought to have a peculiar affection. Dickens stayed frequently in Bath in his early days, when engaged on reporting work, and his tobacco jar and beer mug are still piously preserved at the Saracen's Head. About six miles from Bath is the tiny village of Pickwick, through which Dickens often passed, and he bestowed the name upon his most famous creation. Many of the scenes in "Pickwick" are, it will be remembered, laid in Bath. There is at the present moment—or was until quite recently—a tradesman in Bath of the name of Snodgrass. But can you find a Tupman in the world to bring an action against a novelist?—London Chronicle.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Miss Millan has resumed her position with Miss McGiverin.

The Rev. F. J. Sawers is taking the Lenten service at Havelock to-night.

Miss McClavey has re-opened the dressmaking shop of Miss Hassard for the spring trade.

Mr. F. W. J. McKibbon of Troy, N.Y., is visiting Mr. Manson Comstock, of 289 Sherbrooke street.

There is every indication of a large number from the city attending the Lakefield carnival to-morrow evening.

Miss Kate Collins has returned from Toronto, where she has been in the wholesale. She has resumed her position with Miss McGiverin.

Miss Allan has returned from Toronto, where she has been attending, with her staff of clever assistants, the wholesale millinery openings during last week.

Miss McGiverin returned from Toronto this week with her trimmer, Miss Ruyeke of Colborne, who has spent three weeks in the wholesale preparing for the spring opening.

The many friends of Miss Hassard, who has been away from Peterborough on account of illness, will be glad to learn that she has recovered and expects to return to the city in a few days.

Miss A. Gillespie, Miss McIntosh and Miss L. Allen of the millinery trimming staff at R. Fair & Co., Ltd., have returned from Toronto, where they were engaged in spring preparations for their department at the Golden Lion.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hossburger, 19 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

Curling Notes

W. J. Thompson's rink eliminated J. H. Renwick's quartette by one shot, in the race for a place in the semi-finals of the Primary event last evening. The content between these two well-matched rinks, was witnessed by a handful of curling enthusiasts, who unanimously declared it to be one of the best that has been pulled off on local ice this winter. It was chock full of sensational plays, and the placing of the shots, on both sides, savoured of the acme of curling perfection. So close was the game at the finish that the services of an umpire was needed to measure the shots on the tee, two stones resting on the outside rings at the close of the last end. The umpire's decision was in favour of the Thompson rink, who secured the winning shot by reason of their stone being a few inches nearer the centre of the tee. The score at the finish, stood at 10-9.

Skip Lang's rink entered the fourth round of the Primary, with one shot to their credit. The score was 12-11.

The Consolation Event.

Those who played for a place in the third round of the Consolation, with the attendant scores, were as follows:

W. G. Ferguson vs. T. B. Yeats—score 16-9.

W. G. Read vs. S. T. Medd—score 11-7

R. G. Sturgeon vs. G. Maitland—score 15-10.

J. E. A. Fitzgerald vs. T. Hamstone—score 10-9.

W. G. Morrow vs. H. Taylor—score 11-6.

It is up to the winner of the Lang vs. Brightman game to play W. J. Thompson for the finals.

To-night will be an off-night at the rink as far as the local Bonspiel is concerned, as many of those billed to play to-night are in Orillia, looking after the local curlers' interests in the Neil-Sheppard competition.

The four skips who went to Orillia to-day to play in the second round of the Neil-Sheppard event, were Messrs. R. Neil, T. Lang, W. G. Morrow, and T. F. Matthews. In the first round which was played here, several weeks ago, Orillia won out, with 11 shots to their credit.

Campbellford has come across with the request that three local rinks go down and give them a friendly game. It's a shame to take the money, but in all probability their request will be granted to-morrow or next day.

STRANGERS TERRORIZE LONE WOMEN IN THE SOUTH END.

Three rough-looking characters have been menacing the tranquility of some of the south end residents. They persist in adhering to the vicinity of Aylmer street, ranging from the C. P. R. track to Lake street. They accentuate the undesirability of the presence in the neighbourhood by appealing to the residents for alms. One resident in particular was called out of bed at 1 o'clock in the morning, by one of the men, pleading to buy his request for assistance was refused. Beyond terrorizing some of the women who are left alone in their homes during the day, the men appear to be harmless. The presence in the vicinity is, however, a source of annoyance to the people of that district.

THE DOUBTING THOMAS REBUKED.

Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my fingers into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. And after eight days again the disciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book, but these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.—John xx., 24.

ELLIOT'S

The healthiest children are born in houses which have cracks and knot holes in them. When the house is tight sealed and hot water radiated, it is said to be "comfortable," but it is bad for the kiddies.

Out on the newer prairies there are sturdy little fellows snuggled down every night in shacks, through which the hungry winter, prowling after dark, blows a little thin stream of cold, ozone laden air across the bed. It has a tonic in it. A nailhole through the outside of the house, if not overdone, is worth $25 a year in good feeling. While this is all true beyond a question, yet when we find a crack in the outer wall of the house we cry havoc and putty it up. This is the tribute we pay to the coal trade.—Minneapolis Journal.

RESULT IS IN DOUBT

Amundsen Declared to Have Reached South Pole

DID SCOTT MAKE IT TOO?

London, March 8.—The result of the polar race is still more or less an enigma. One paper, The London Chronicle, states definitely that Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, cabled his brother Leon in Christiania, to the effect that the goal had been attained on December 14-17, 1911.

Earlier in the day The London Daily Express published a despatch from its correspondent in Wellington, New Zealand, which said simply: "Amundsen says Scott reached pole."

The conflict of statements causes some confusion and the British public does not know what to think. The cablegram, however, from Amundsen to his brother bears every mark of authenticity. It was transmitted in cipher to The Chronicle and the London office of The New York Daily Times, which paper contracted before the start of the expedition for the exclusive rights to Amundsen's story in case he proved successful in his search.

The exact text of The New York Times' despatch is jealously guarded by copyright and at present the situation resolves itself into a newspaper war for which journal will be first to tell the news.

None of the London papers this morning, with the exception of The Chronicle, has any definiteness of the result of the race for the South Pole. The Times contains the following comment:

"It can only be a few hours now before we learn the facts. Capt. Amundsen's ship left Buenos Ayres at least a month before the Terra Nova sailed from New Zealand to Capt. Scott's headquarters. If the ice were favorable Amundsen would then be able to start back long before Scott. On his way back he might well have called at Scott's headquarters to learn the news and so ascertain whether Scott had reached the pole, only to find that he had been forestalled by his English rival.

"The main point at present is that there is no reason to doubt that Amundsen might well have learned what Scott had done and may have been generous enough to reveal the good news even before he cabled his own tale, but it is all conjecture, and we can only hope that early information assure us of the Englishman's victory."

Lieut Evans, secretary of the British Antarctic expedition, which Capt. Scott led, has issued the following statement:

"No authoritative news whatever regarding the success or otherwise of Capt. Scott's expedition has yet reached here."

The Chronicle says editorially:

"Our first thoughts (though we may have wished that Commander Peary's hope had come true, that 'The world should whirl between the ensigns of the same Anglo-Saxon race' will compel Britons, who have striven so heroically for the prize, that has been won, to congratulate heartily that great explorer and his nation, to whom the honor of the discovery of the South Pole has so deservedly fallen."

Time Extended.

Ottawa, March 8.—The time for deporting the two Sikh women who have been detained at the coast has been extended pending the consideration of the report of the special commissioner of the Immigration Department, F. C. Blair, who went to British Columbia to study the question.

In formation was received in Ottawa yesterday that the Sikhs have lost their habeas corpus case before the British Columbia courts in regard to their detention.

Four Killed In B.C. Mine.

Vancouver, B.C., March 8.—A gas explosion yesterday in the mine of the Diamond Vale Mining Co. at Berrett, B.C., ten miles northeast of Vancouver, killed four men and imprisoned ten others. Rescue apparatus has been sent.

It is difficult to get news from the mine, which is situated in the Nicola district, on a branch that runs from the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Separate School Agitation

Montreal, March 8.—Preparations are said to be under way by local Nationalists to stir up a wide agitation throughout the province regarding the Keewatin Annexation Act, and the attitude assumed by the Quebec members of the Cabinet. A mass meeting, it is said, will be held at the Monument National during the next ten days, at which Henri Bourassa will be the principal speaker. Hon. Messrs. Monk, Nantel and Doherty will be invited to be present and explain their attitude.

A similar meeting is being arranged for the same day in Quebec, where Armand Lavergne will challenge Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, to meet him.

A series of meetings in all the counties represented by Nationalists who voted with the Government on the Keewatin bill, it is reported, will follow.

Abandons Effort to Rush Boundary Bill Through

MINISTERS WERE SILENT

Ottawa, March 8.—The House of Commons sat till two o'clock this morning in debate on the second reading of the boundaries bill. Both parties were determined to fight to a finish, but Premier Borden called off the struggle two hours after midnight.

At 12.30 a.m. a vote was taken on the amendment of Hon. Wm. Pugsley, calling for the deferring of the financial settlement with Manitoba till a conference of the representatives of the provinces could be held, with a view to a readjustment more favorable to the Maritime Provinces. The amendment was declared lost by 101 to 62.

Then Hugh Guthrie (S. Wellington) who has an amendment cutting out the arrearages to be paid to Manitoba and make the financial arrangements date from July 1, 1912, tried to move an adjournment, but the Government would not hear of it, and the discussion was on again.

Another amendment, that of A. A. Mondou (Yamaska) declaring that any rights that exist in the newly annexed territories be preserved, also remains to be dealt with.

Dr. Molloy, one of the two Manitoba Liberals in the House, spoke with an eye to his strongly Roman Catholic constituency of Provencher. From the beginning of the session he had predicted, he said, two things if the boundary question were dealt with by the Borden Government. That Manitoba would receive less territory than was offered it by Laurier, and that the minority in that province would "get the tomahawk."

"And they have received it," he added.

Passengers Were Endangered.

Kingston, March 8.—The lives of the passengers on the Bay of Quinte train were endangered when a mixed train, running south from Battlefield, left the rails between Bridgewater and Queensboro. One coach, baggage car and box car were ditched, but as the train was running slowly no one was injured. The engine stayed on the track.

Col. Matheson Goes Home.

Toronto, March 8.—Hon. A. J. Matheson, who has been ill in the Western Hospital for a fortnight, left last night for his home in Perth, where he will rest for a time before resuming his duties as Provincial Treasurer for Ontario. A special car was provided for him by the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway.

Canal Bill Is Passed.

Ottawa, March 8.—With its objectionable features, from a provincial standpoint, eliminated, the Georgian Bay canal bill passed the railway committee in the Commons yesterday.

Secretary Knox at Nicaragua.

Corinto, Nicaragua, March 8.—Secretary Knox and party arrived here at 3.30 yesterday afternoon. The trip was made without incident.

TURNED DOWN.

Borden Denies Saskatchewan's Claim to Access to Bay.

Ottawa, March 8.—In answer to Premier Scott of Saskatchewan, in his demand for access to Hudson Bay, the following reply was sent by Premier Borden:

"I beg to acknowledge your telegram of yesterday. The legislation now before Parliament does not contain the provision alluded to. The Province of Ontario considers it desirable to extend its state-owned railway to a port on Hudson Bay. For this purpose the governor-in-council has passed an order granting to that province a strip of land five miles in width from the western boundary of Ontario to the mouth of the Nelson River. This grant is made by virtue of the federal ownership of the land within the extended boundaries of Manitoba.

"In case the Province of Saskatchewan should undertake the construction and operation of a state-owned railway to the shores of Hudson Bay, this Government will be glad to give to its proposals the most careful and earnest consideration. May I point out, however, that, apart from this, the claim of Saskatchewan was disposed of by the late administration.

"On July 13, 1908, Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed the decision of his Government with regard to the claim of Saskatchewan in the following words: 'After giving due consideration to this claim on the part of the Province of Saskatchewan, it seemed to us that, as between the claim of the Province of Manitoba, to have the territory which lies north of Manitoba and east of Saskatchewan allotted either one way or the other, the weight of argument was certainly in favor of Manitoba, and we could not grant the prayer of Saskatchewan. We, therefore, had to ignore it. R. L. Bordon."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Hon. Dr. Reid admitted he dismissed a customs collector because of a letter in which he disapproved of bribery in elections.

The Young Men's Christian Associations of Ontario and Quebec met in Toronto to discuss the question of a national organization.

The discrepancies charged against five Kingston dealers were caused, the latter alleged, by the adhesion of snow and ice on the sleigh.

Lieut.-General Sir Frederick Kitchener, governor and commander-in-chief of Bermuda, and brother of Lord Kitchener, died Wednesday night after an operation for appendicitis.

Gertrude Vigeault, Ontario street, Montreal, 23 months old, was drowned early yesterday morning by falling into a tub of water her mother had just bathed her in and had left on the kitchen floor.

Geo. H. Kennaugh, the night clerk of the Canadian Express Co., who was on duty the night that the company's office in Hamilton was entered and robbed of $6,500, was acquitted of conspiracy yesterday.

The body of William Sangster, a prominent farmer living one mile east of Norwich, was found in his room at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Beside him was the remains of a dose of paris green. He had been in ill-health.

In order to take a short cut home, Mrs. Wm. Bullock, aged 37, of Kingston, crawled under a freight train at the outer station yesterday afternoon. Just as she was in the act of getting under the train, it moved and her left foot was cut off.

G.T.P. Wants a Loan.

Ottawa, March 8.—The Grand Trunk Pacific is still after a loan from the Government. Charles M. Hays and William Wainwright were in Ottawa again yesterday and had an interview with the Government. It is understood that they want a fifteen million dollar loan to help complete the Pacific section. The securities are standing none too high in England at the present time, and the officials are pressing the Government to come to the G.T.P.'s assistance.

It is understood that the officers of the company are not getting much encouragement from the Cabinet.

DEBT IS GROWING

Hon. I. B. Lucas Brings in Budget in Legislature

EXPENSE VERSUS RECEIPTS

Toronto, March 8.—"The Province is travelling at a fast pace, the debt increasing as much in one year as it did in fourteen years of Liberal rule," said Hon. A. G. MacKay, in attacking the financial policy of the Whitney Government, as disclosed in the budget speech delivered in the Legislature by Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday afternoon. Mr. Lucas, who presented the budget owing to the illness of Hon. A. J. Matheson, admitted a deficit of $240,100 of expenditure over ordinary revenue for the fiscal year, but attempted to show a surplus by including some $250,000 of deferred payments which had been received by the Provincial Treasurer during the first eighteen days of last November after the fiscal year had closed on October 31.

A great experiment in public ownership was the way Hon. I. B. Lucas described the T. & N. O. Railway. The ordinary revenue of the province had reached $9,370,099.90 during the past year—the largest amount in the history of Ontario. In fact, he said, the revenue has been more than doubled since the present administration came into office seven years ago. In spite of all this, Mr. Lucas declared the Government's expenditures for all sorts of purposes had increased in comparison with that of the late Liberal regime.

Figures were given illustrating the tremendous difference. For instance, during the last year of the Ross Government $178,000 was devoted to colonization, while the present Government gave $451,000, last year $58,000 was given by the late Government for public buildings, while $134,000 was given for the same purpose during 1911. The grants for agriculture for the same years had increased from $9,000 to $26,000, and for hospitals and charities in New Ontario from $9,000 to $41,000, and enforcing liquor laws throughout the province the old Government in their last year of office gave nothing, while last year $10,000 was used for the purpose.

In commenting on the progress and extension of the T. & N. O. Railway, Hon. Mr. Lucas referred to the fact that the railway was now a revenue-producer, and he declared that however favorably cheap fares were regarded by the people, the point should not be lost sight of that the efforts of the commission to extend the railway through the territory that was to be organized, should not be handicapped by a reduction in fares, thereby cutting down the revenues of the Government railway.

In his opening remarks Mr. Lucas regretted the illness of Col. Matheson, the Provincial Treasurer. He then drew attention to the fact that the sources of revenue in Ontario were such that they could be estimated with some degree of accuracy. They were to a certain extent fixed; not like they were in the House of Commons. Between the revenue and the strong box of the Treasury there were no leaks, and no barnacles either.

The tax on bar receipts in the Provincial Secretary's Department had reached $119,801 in five months, and indicated an annual revenue of $280,000 or upwards from that source. A new source of revenue was the stock transfer tax.

In his reply to the budget speech, Hon. A. G. MacKay scored the administration of the T. & N. O. Railway because, he declared, the Government looked more to the receipts from the road than to the necessary improvements.

"Hon. Mr. Lucas tried to show that the railway made a big surplus," said Mr. MacKay. "But he didn't consider the uneven, excessive freight rates. It seems to be the object of the commission to make this road a great paying proposition when it ought to be made a colonization road, in order to fill up the country with settlers, which are absolutely necessary. Complaints fairly flood the Government regarding excessive rates and inadequate transportation generally, but, ah, no, they don't bother their heads about this end of it. They like to see money pour into the Treasury so they can say there is a big surplus as a result of wise, efficient administration."

"There was no reason," said Mr. MacKay discussing the general revenue, "why Ontario should not come in for a greater subsidy from Ottawa, like the sister province in the west. He was in the confidence, sorry to say, of the Premier of Ontario, but he saw no reason why Ontario should not assert her rights and get a fair and square share. Ontario had a right to $500,000 additional revenue."

Naturally, Mr. MacKay declared, that the finances were fixed largely by the old Government and not by the so-called "magnificent Conservative administration. The Conservative Government had increased the net debt of the province to $3,[illegible],715. As a remedy for the liabilities the Government should learn what was causing the current expenditures to run behind the current receipts. Hon. Mr. Lucas had a great talent in befogging the question of surplus and debt. He claimed that if everything was shown in its true light the province would have a deficit of $2,000,000.

Duke is Censured.

Ottawa, March 8.—The Social and Moral Reform committee of the Ottawa Presbytery is out with a strong criticism in its annual report, directed at the Duke of Connaught. It is worded:

"Sabbath observances heve received a blow in our city and the Dominion through the head of our Dominion giving by his presence sanction to sports at Rockliffe Park on the Lord's Day. He may not be a Puritan, yet there is a large and important part of the nation over which he presides who believe in a day free from the common rut of life, and as he would not willingly hurt the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus, he might at least care for the conscience of feeble fellow-Christians."

Fourteen Years for Robbery.

Montreal, March 8.—"You planned this diabolical deed and then you sought to escape from the consequences of your encouragement of two weaker men to commit a crime by a cowardly confession, implicating them," said Judge Lavergne yesterday morning to Charles Vega, who directed the savage attack made by Albert Jones and George Beldondo on a jeweler, Louis Cohen, in his store, on Feb. 24.

Vega was given 14 years, the heaviest sentence ever imposed for robbery in this city, while Jones and Beldondo received 10 years and 12 years respectively.

Suffragettes Smash More Windows.

London, March 8.—A number of suffragettes assembled in the neighborhood of the large drygoods establishments in the west end, soon after dawn, and as soon as the shutters were taken down they attacked the plate glass with hammers, which they carried concealed beneath their cloaks. The women selected the largest windows in all London for their demonstration.

Passersby who witnessed the demonstration did not allow the suffragettes to escape, but detained them until the police arrived. Six were arrested.

London to Paris Flight.

Paris, March 8.—Henri Salvey, the French flying man, arrived at Issy-Les-Moulineaux, a suburb of Paris, in his monoplane at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, having traveled from London, about 235 miles, without a stop, in 3 hours and 57 minutes.

Over the channel his machine was shaken by violent squalls, but the motor worked perfectly.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an accident in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segments must be set low, so low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course, this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Famous Invisible Kryptok. Ask for booklet describing them.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"Mrs. Watkins," Mr. Gryce from that moment ignored the daughter, "did you see it there?"

"Yes; but I didn't know where it came from. I had not seen my daughter stoop. I didn't know where she got it till I read that bulletin."

"Never mind that. The question agitating me is whether any stain was left under that pillow. We want to be sure of the connection between this possible weapon and the death by stabbing which we all deplore — if there is a connection."

"I didn't see any stain, but you can look for yourself. The bed has been made up, but there was no change of linen. We expected to remain here; I see no good to be gained by hiding any of the facts now."

"None whatever, Madam."

"Come, then. Caroline, sit down and stop crying. Mr. Gryce believes that your only fault was in not taking this object at once to the desk."

"Yes, that's all," acquiesced the detective after a short study of the shaking figure and distorted features of the girl. "You had no idea, I'm sure, where this weapon came from or for what it had been used. That's evident."

Her shudder, as she seated herself, was very convincing. She was too young to simulate so successfully emotions of this character.

"I'm glad of that," she responded, half fretfully, half gratefully, as Mr. Gryce followed her mother into the adjoining room. "I've had a bad enough time of it without being blamed for what I didn't know and didn't do."

Mr Gryce laid little stress upon these words, but much upon the lack of curiosity she showed in the minute and careful examination he now made of her room. There was no stain on the pillow-cover and none on the bureau-spread where she might very naturally have laid the cutter down on first coming into her room. The blade was so polished that it must have been rubbed off somewhere, either purposely or by accident. Where then, since not here? He asked to see her gloves —the ones she had worn the previous night.

"There are the same she is wearing now," the anxious mother assured him. "Wait, and I will get them for you."

"No need. Let her hold ont her hands in token of amity. I shall soon see."

They returned to where the girl still sat, wrapped in her cloak, sobbing still, but not so violently.

"Caroline, you may take off your things," said the mother, drawing the pins from her own hat. "We shall not go to-day."

The child shot her mother one disappointed look, then proceeded to follow suit. When her hat was off, she began to take off her gloves. As soon as they were on the table, the mother pushed them over to Mr. Gryce. As he looked at them, the girl lifted off her cloak.

"Will—will he tell?" she whispered behind its ample folds into her mother's ear.

The answer came quickly, but not in the mother's tones. Mr. Gryce's ears had lost none of their ancient acuteness.

"I do not see that I should gain much by doing so. The one discovery which would link this find of your indissolubly with Miss Challoner's death, I have failed to make. If I am equally successful below—if I can establish no closer connection there than here between this cutter and the weapon which killed Miss Challoner, I shall have no cause to mention the matter. It will be too extraneous to the case. Do you remember the exact spot where you stooped, Miss Watkins?"

"No, no. Somewhere near those big chairs; I didn't have to step out of my way; I really didn't."

Mr. Gryce's answering smile was a study. It seemed to convey a two-fold message, one for the mother and one for the child, and both were comforting. But he went away, disappointed. The clew which promised so much was, to all appearance, a false one.

He could soon tell.

VI.
INTEGRITY.

Mr. Gryce's fears were only too well founded. Though Mr. McElroy was kind enough to point out the exact spot where he saw Miss Watkins stoop, no trace of blood was found upon the rug which had lain there, nor had anything of the kind been washed up by the careful man who scrubbed the lobby floor in the early morning. This was disappointing, as its presence would have settled the whole question. When, these efforts all exhausted, the two detectives faced each other again in the small room given up to their use, Mr. Gryce showed his discouragement. To be certain of a fact you cannot prove has not the same alluring quality for the old that it has for the young. Sweetwater watched him in some concern, then with the persistence which was one of his strong points, ventured finally to remark:

"I have but one idea left on the subject."

"And what is that?" Old as he was, Mr. Gryce was alert in a moment.

"The girl wore a red cloak. If I mistake not, the lining was also red. A spot on it might not show to the casual observer. Yet it would mean much to us."

"Sweetwater!"

"Shall I request the privilege of looking that garment over?"

"Yes."

The young fellow ducked and left the room. When he returned, it was with a downcast air.

"Nothing doing," said he.

And then there was silence.

"We only need to find out now that this cutter was not even Miss Challoner's property," remarked Mr. Gryce, at last, with a gesture towards the object named lying only on the table before him.

"That should be easy. Shall I take it to their rooms and show it to her maid?"

"If you can do so without disturbing the old gentleman."

But here they were themselves disturbed. A knock at the door was followed by the immediate entrance of the very person just mentioned. Mr. Challoner had come in search of the inspector, and showed some surprise to find his place occupied by an unknown old man.

But Mr. Gryce, who discerned tidings in the bereaved father's face, was all alacrity in an instant. Greeting his visitor with a smile which few could see without trusting the man, he explained the inspector's absence and introduced himself in his own capacity.

Mr. Challoner had heard of him. Nevertheless, he did not seem inclined to speak.

Mr. Gryce motioned Sweetwater from the room. With a woeful look the young detective withdrew, his last glance cast at the cutter still lying in full view on the table.

Mr. Gryce not unmindful himself of this object, took it up, then laid it down again, with an air of seeming abstraction.

The father's attention was caught.

"What is that?" he cried, advancing a step and bestowing more than an ordinary glance at the object thus brought casually, as it were, to his notice. "I surely recognize this cutter. Does it belong here or—"

Mr. Gryce, observing the other's emotion, motioned him to a chair. As his visitor sank into it, he remarked, with all the consideration exacted by the situation:

"It is unknown property, Mr. Challoner. But we have some reason to think it belonged to your daughter. Are we correct in this surmise?"

"I have seen it, or one like it, often in her hand." Here his eyes suddenly dilated and the hand stretched forth to grasp it quickly drew back. "Where—where was it found?" he hoarsely demanded. "O God! am I to be crushed to the very earth by sorrow!"

Mr. Gryce hastened to give him such relief as was consistent with the truth.

"It was picked up—last night—from the lobby floor. There is seemingly nothing to connect it with her death. Yet—"

The pause was eloquent. Mr. Challoner gave the detective an agonized look and turned white to the lips. Then gradually, as the silence continued, his head fell forward, and he muttered almost unintelligibly:

"I honestly believe her the victim of some heartless stranger. I do now; but I cannot mislead the police. At any cost I must retract a statement I made under false impressions and with no desire to deceive. I said that I knew all of the gentlemen who admired her and aspired to her hand, and that they were all reputable men and above committing a crime of this or any other kind. But it seems that I did not know her secret heart as thoroughly as I had supposed. Among her effects I have just come upon a batch of letters—love letters I am forced to acknowledge—signed by initials totally strange to me. The letters are manly in tone—most of them —but one—"

"What about the one?"

"Shows that the writer was displeased. It may mean nothing, but I could not let the matter go without setting myself right with the authorities. If it might be allowed to rest here—if these letters can remain sacred, it would save me the additional pang of seeing her inmost concerns—the secret and holiest recesses of a woman's heart, laid open to the public. For, from the tenor of most of these letters, she—she was not averse to the writer."

Mr. Gryce moved a little restlessly in his chair and stared hard at the cutter so conveniently placed under his eye. Then his manner softened and he remarked:

"We will do what we can. But you must understand that the matter is not a simple one. That, in fact, it contains mysteries which demand police investigation. We do not dare to trifle with any of the facts. The inspector, and, if not he, the coroner, will have to be told about these letters and will probably ask to see them."

"They are the letters of a gentleman."

"With one exception."

"Yes, that is understood." Then in a sudden heat and with an almost sublime trust in his daughter notwithstanding the duplicity he had just discovered: "Nothing—not the story told by these letters, or the sight of that sturdy paper-cutter with its long and very slender blade, will make me believe that she willingly took her own life. You do not know, cannot know, the rare delicacy of her nature. She was a lady through and through. If she had meditated death —if the breach suggested by the one letter I have mentioned, should have so preyed upon her spirits as to lead her to break her old father's heart and outrage the feelings of all who knew her, she could not, being the woman she was, choose a public place for such an act—an hotel writing-room—in face of a lobby full of hurrying men. It was out of nature. Everyone who knows her will tell you so. The deed was an accident—incredible—but still an accident."

Mr. Gryce had respect for this outburst. Making no attempt to answer it, he suggested, with some hesitation, that Miss Challoner had been seen writing a letter previous to taking those fatal steps from the desk which ended so tragically. Was this letter to one of her lady friends, as reported, and was it as far from suggesting the awful tragedy which followed, as he had been told?

"It was a cheerful letter. Such a one as she often wrote to her little protegees here and there. I judge that this was written to some girl like that, for the person addressed was not known to her maid, any more than she was to me. It expressed an affectionate interest, and it breathed encouragement—encouragement! and she meditating her own death at the moment! Impossible! That letter should exonerate her if nothing else does."

Mr. Gryce recalled the incongruities, the inconsistencies and even the surprising contradictions which had often marked the conduct of men and women, in his lengthy experience with the strange, the sudden and the tragic things of life, and slightly shook his head. He pitied Mr. Challoner, and admired even more his courage in face of the appalling grief which had overwhelmed him, but he dared not encourage a false hope. The girl had killed herself and with this weapon. They might not be able to prove it absolutely, but it was nevertheless true, and this broken old man would some day be obliged to acknowledge it. But the detective said nothing of this, and was very patient with the further arguments the other advanced to prove his point and the lofty character of the girl to whom, misled by appearance, the police seemed inclined to attribute the awful sin of self-destruction.

But when, this topic exhausted, Mr. Challoner rose to leave the room, Mr. Gryce showed where his own thoughts still centered, by asking him the date of the correspondence discovered between his daughter and her unknown admirer.

"Some of the letters were dated last summer, some this fall. The one you are most anxious to hear about only a month back," he added, with unconquerable devotion to what he considered his duty.

Mr. Gryce would like to have carried his enquiries further, but desisted. His heart was full of compassion for this childless old man, doomed to have his choicest memories disturbed by cruel doubts which possibly would never be removed to his own complete satisfaction.

But when he was gone, and Sweetwater had returned, Mr. Gryce made it his first duty to communicate to his superiors the hitherto unsuspected fact of a secret romance in Miss Challoner's seemingly calm and well-guarded life. She had loved and been loved by one of whom her family knew nothing. And the two had quarrelled, as certain letters lately found could be made to show.

VII
THE LETTERS

Before a table strewn with papers, in the room we have already mentioned as given over to the use of the police, sat Dr. Heath in a mood too thoughtful to notice the entrance of Mr. Gryce and Sweetwater from the dining-room where they had been having dinner.

However as the former's tread was somewhat lumbering, the coroner's attention was caught before they had quite crossed the room, and Sweetwater, with his quick eye, noted how his arm and hand immediately fell so as to cover up a portion of the papers lying nearest to him.

"Well, Gryce, this is a dark case," he observed, as at his bidding the two detectives took their seats.

Mr. Gryce nodded; so did Sweetwater.

"The darkest that has ever come to my knowledge," pursued the coroner.

Mr. Gryce again nodded; but not so, Sweetwater. For some reason this simple expression of opinion seemed to have given him a mental start.

"She was not shot. She was not struck by any other hand; yet she lies dead from a mortal wound in the breast. Though there is no tangible proof of her having inflicted this wound upon herself, the jury will have no alternative, I fear, than to pronounce the case one of suicide."

"I'm sorry that I've been able to do so little," remarked Mr. Gryce.

The coroner darted him a quick look.

"You are not satisfied? You have some different idea?" he asked.

The detective frowned at his hands crossed over the top of his cane, then shaking his head, replied:

"The verdict you mention is the only natural one, of course. I see that you have been talking with Miss Challoner's former maid?"

"Yes, and she has settled an important point for us. There was a possibility, of course, that the paper-cutter which you brought to my notice had never gone with her into the mezzanine. That she, or some other person, had dropped it in passing through the lobby. But this girl assures me that her mistress did not enter the lobby that night. That she accompanied her down in the elevator, and saw her step off at the mezzanine. She can also swear that the cutter was in a book she carried — the book we found lying on the desk. The girl remembers distinctly seeing its peculiarly chased handle projecting from its pages. Could anything be more satisfactory if—I was going to say, if the young lady had been of the impulsive type and the provocation greater. But Miss Challoner's nature was calm, and were it not for these letters—" here his arm shifted a little—"I should not be so sure of my jury's future verdict. Love—" he went on, after a moment of silent consideration of a letter he had chosen from those before him, "disturbs the most equable natures. When it enters as a factor, we can expect anything—as you know. And Miss Challoner evidently was much attached to her correspondent, and naturally felt the reproach conveyed in these lines."

And Dr. Heath read:

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.

By reading Mr. Donneral's letter you wil be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.

"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, y appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

SOME EXPLANATION OF THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

(BY ADELINE C. ROBERTS.)

In this article I intend to deal with some of the arguments set forth by anti-Suffragists against the extension the franchise to women.

Many are opposed to this reform through prejudice and shortsightedness, through inability to see beyond their own very limited horizon. They forget that we live in an age of progress and that customs and ideas which were accepted without question in the middle ages are no longer acceptable in these more advanced and enlightened times.

Then there are the extreme sentimentalists, who base all their objections on the supremely convincing argument that God made Adam first. On such as these, rational arguments and logical reasoning are utterly thrown away.

Others who are neither over-sentimental, narrow-minded, nor ignorant of facts bearing on the subject, yet continue to bring out a variety of arguments which have been controverted, time and again, and to some of which I will refer. But first, these two questions arise:

1. Are women human beings, individuals, persons, parents of their children (they are not yet recognized as "parents," before the law, the father only being so recognized!), taxpayers, law-keepers, householders, property-owners, and wage-earners, as men are? Are they as intellectual, as well educated, as capable of taking an intelligent interest in matters which directly or indirectly affect their work, homes, surroundings, the health and education of their children, etc., etc.? Or

2. Are women only inferior beings, standing on a lower plane, a sort of chattel or possession of men, symbols of sweetness and innocence, creatures with pretty kitten-like ways, and no knowledge or concern with the business of the world, feeble dependent timid with no interests or responsibilities outside their own four walls and very few inside them?

It is undoubtedly true that beneath all the veneer of civilization and the changes of centuries this latter antiquated and narrow-minded view of women still obtains and to those who hold with these notions little or nothing can be said. One can only hope that time and education may broaden and enlarge their minds. To them Mr. Austen Chamberlain's well-known "reason" for his opposition to women suffrage doubtless appeals very forcibly. Readers will pardon my repeating it for the benefit of those to whom it is not familiar. After a very lengthy and beautiful peroration on general matters he announced that he was now coming to his reason for opposing woman suffrage. He had been "coming to" it for upwards of an hour, and his audience was on tiptoe of expectation. This was his argument:

"Men are men" (cheers), "women are women" (cheers). "God made them different, you cannot change their natures" (loud cheers).

After such a profound and convincing argument, given by such an eminent speaker, the trifling facts that Suffragists have never attempted to deny that men are men and women are women, and that the aims and principles of the women's movement are not "to change their natures," weigh nothing.

But let it be granted that the first view of woman is the correct one. Then, if she is socially and intellectually man's equal, and equally affected by legislation, taxes, etc., why in the world is she to be debarred from the privilege of exercising the franchise, merely because she is a woman? As well debar a man from the same privilege because he is a man. There is no argument that can be advanced against women exercising the franchise which cannot be applied equally well to men.

Anti-Suffragists say that women have never done anything sufficiently eminent to deserve the franchise. Does a man's privilege of voting depend on whether he has done anything sufficiently eminent to deserve it? It is not eminent people who can do great things well, so much as honest, conscientious people who do ordinary things well, who are needed to do the country's housekeeping, for after all, is not government simply housekeeping on a public scale? A city is in many respects a great business corporation, but in other respects it is enlarged housekeeping. May we not say that city housekeeping has failed partly because women, the traditional housekeepers, have not been consulted as to its multiform activities?

Every once in a while appears the time-worn argument that no woman should be allowed to vote unless she can fight and do police duty. "Government is based on force" is a fashionable phrase among anti-Suffragists. It is quite true that governments require police and military force for various purposes, but when did anyone ever hear of eligibility for military or police service urged as a condition or qualification for man's suffrage? There is no nation on earth where a man is allowed to vote because he can fight, or not allowed to vote because he cannot fight. Nor are these the days of the military post, when war was the regular and chief business of nations. In these days we may hope the world is gradually being organized on a more rational and civilized basis than a basis of battle and the barracks.

Another favourite objection is that politics would draw woman away from her proper sphere, the care of her home. This argument strikes one as somewhat illogical also. Strange that no one ever suggests that it interferes with a man's business in his factory, store, or office. Evidently it is considered quite possible for a man to attend to his business and at the same time possess a vote; but in the case of a woman the exercise of the franchise would apparently occupy the greater part of her life, to the detriment of her other duties. For the great majority of men, politics consists in recording a vote occasionally in going to an occasional political meeting, and in talking over the subject with acquaintances. What is there in this that is incompatible, in the case of a woman, with a complete fulfilment of her home duties? What a small amount of time is required by politics compared with that spent by the well-to-do woman in her social pleasures, and by the working woman at her employment.

It is often said that the majority of women do not want the franchise. True enough; for the majority are never in favour of progress. Reforms are won by the efforts of the persistent few, and advocates of progress have always to contend with indifference as well as with active opposition. Many improvements have been made during the last half century in laws relating to women. But not one of these improvements would have been made yet if it had been necessary to wait till the majority of women asked for it. When will the majority of women rise to a higher sense of their social responsibilities, when will they begin to realise the terrible, the inconceivably appalling, social and moral conditions under which thousands of their sex are living and working to-day, and in whose condition no improvement will be made until women have a share in the legislation of the country? Alas, that the majority of women are so indifferent, that they have not more of a passion for humanity, a wider and more human sympathy and fellow feeling.

There may be said to be two classes of people in the world. In the women of one class a keen sense of justice is developed. In the other class the sense of justice is so undeveloped that the women belonging to this class do not object to a condition of disfranchisement that reduces them to the same political level as the idiot, lunatic, criminal, pauper, and minor! This large class of women may be well described as "average," and by mere force of numbers these average women may continue for a long while to retard the march of reform. But human progress means the setting aside the opinions and wishes of average people, and in the long run the world is governed by the minority of men and women who love justice, who know what justice is, and who, by this love and knowledge are raised above the average.

One might easily fill several columns with regulations of other anti-suffrage arguments, but it would occupy too much of the "Examiner's" valuable space.

In the next article I propose to discuss the "militant" Suffragists in England and their methods.

VEGETABLES THE PRETTY GIRL'S FRIEND.

Try a vegetarian diet for a little while and see what it will do for your billious complexion. You are right in thinking that vegetables don't feed the brain sufficiently for mental work. Many great statesmen have tried it, but they have all given it up. From a pretty girl's standpoint, however, it is perfection, as it clears the skin if you don't overdo it by keeping it up too long. As you have to be a brain worker and a pretty girl, too, try this. Use vegetarian diet for a week or two. Take very little tea or coffee, as vegetable eating demands less. When you feel the need of some stimulant greatly, treat yourself to a juicy beefsteak. It will act like wine upon you and when you see how stimulating it is you will realize what the bad effects might be of overdoing it.—Woman's World.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

DYSPEPSIA

The symptoms of this form of indigestion are known by sad experience to many of our readers, and by observation to all the rest. Hurried eating and imperfect mastication and insufficient digestive fluids are prolific causes. It produces pain in the stomach and bowels, wind in the bowels, sour stomach, nausea, heartburn, headache, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness, bad blood and many symptoms of impaired nutrition. Radway's Ready Relief cures in a few minutes all pains caused by indigestion, biliousness, nervousness, or other derangements of the internal organs.

CHOPPING BLOCKS

In old times butchers' chopping blocks were made of a cross section of a suitable sized tree trunk. When they had got this big solid chunk of wood sawed out they smoothed one side of it for the top of the chopping block, and then into holes bored in the under side they drove long, stout, and heavy pegs for legs, and there was your chopping block; and such a block of fine-grained hardwood and absolutely without check, was certainly a fine thing.

As forests were cut down and timber became scarcer, it came to be more difficult to get suitable flawless blocks of this sort except at prices considerably higher than the old, and then somebody invented the built-up chopping block. The built-up block is made of numerous uniform sized, small square sections of wood set upright and bolted together to form a solid block. The old time chopping block was round, of the shape of the tree trunk; though the modern chopping block is made square or oblong and in various sizes. The built up block costs less than a perfect tree trunk would now, and it is said to wear longer. Even in a perfectly flawless trunk block the wood might vary in density from centre to circumferance or in spots. The best built up blocks are made of selected heart sections of wood, giving a uniform quality throughout.

Of course all chopping blocks wear awlly and hollow out on top with the constant chopping on them, and they have to be re-surfaced. A man who makes a business of this work, comes along and levels the top off with an adze and then refinishes it. With long continued wear and repeated levelings the block finally gets to be too low to be convenient, and then they raise the block by giving it longer legs.—New York Sun.

MAKES HAIR GROW

McDermid and Jury, druggists, have an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that zaps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid and Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

COLLAPSIBLE MILLINERY

There is hope for the husband, who, when travelling abroad with his wife, is worried to death by huge hat-boxes, one of which takes up as much as his own personal luggage. "Collapsible" millinery may now be obtained which can be folded up and squeezed into a handkerchief satchel, while four of these collapsible hats could be placed in a small hat-box.

"These hats are just the thing for a woman who wishes to look reasonably dressed when away from home," she said. "If one is on a motor tour they can be easily stowed away in a suit-case. The tarbo[illegible] in soft white felt trimmed w[illegible]ge feather is one of the most stylish of collapsible hats. It can be twisted round and made perfectly flat, the feather folding over neatly on the top. Collapsible headgear with a body of straw adorned with an osprey feather and large bow is also on sale and can be folded up into a very small space. "Another design of hat is made of felt which can be expanded and altered to several shapes. With a trimming of bright plumage and a feather it looks very attractive. Hats trimmed with flowers cannot be made collapsible. Feathers and plumage of all sorts can with care be made to occupy a very small space."

Britain's Cattle Trade.

A national testing station for cattle destined for export, at which health certificates will be given, is shortly to be established by the British Board of Agriculture.

The people of South Africa and of the South American Republics are anxious to stock their vast grazing grounds with British cattle, and, when the testing station is opened, it is expected that a great impetus will be given to cattle-raising both in Great Britain and Ireland.

Favors "Bull's Eye" Target.

Col. Hughes, Minister of Militia, favors the "bull's eye" target. He points out that the majority of those who won on the service target had practiced on the bull's eye. He states that something should be done to promote rapid fire. The men in action should not be able to time their shots. What was wanted was rapid firing. On this point Col. Hughes suggested a means whereby the competitor would be compelled to fire rapidly. If he did not fire in a stated time he would be credited with a miss.

THE EXPLANATION.

Mr. Cleaver, how do you account for the fact that I found a piece of rubber tyre in one of the sausages I bought here last week?"

"My dear madam, that only goes to show that the motor-car is replacing the horse everywhere."

BERLIN "CABBY" TO GO

The motorcar is displacing the horse in the German Capital.

The picturesque Berlin cabman who, with his white enamel hat, his out-of-date vehicle, his aged horse, his exorbitant charges, and his ungrateful manners, has for years interested visitors in the German capital, is to disappear. An edict has gone forth from the Berlin Chief of Police that, in view of the obsolete nature of these conveyances, they can no longer be allowed to circulate in the thoroughfares of the city. Compensation of $150 in money is to be paid to each of the sixty licensed horse-cab drivers who are affected, and application for permission to drive motor vehicles from any of them is to be favorably considered provided they are able to qualify.

Fourth son and fifth child of King George and Queen Mary. He was born December 20, 1902.

Doomed Mariners' Farewell.

A farewell message from the ill-fated steamer Frederick Snowden was contained in a bottle washed ashore near Buckie, Banffshire. The message was scrawled on a sheet of paper torn from a notebook, and stated that the ship had lost her anchor off Peterhead, and was drifting on the rocks. It was already known that the vessel had gone down with all hands.

Ingenious Housebreakers.

Three Glasgow detectives, while on the watch at a warehouse in Trongate, from which a number of articles had been stolen, effected the arrest of two men under somewhat peculiar circumstances. The men, dressed as painters and wheeling a barrow containing a ladder, arrived at the warehouse and set to work with a number of paint pots and brushes. Ultimately one of them entered the warehouse through a window, and when he reappeared carrying a sack both men were apprehended.

WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD

"Shakespeare's England" to recall the good old days of old.

Mrs. George Cornwallis West, is exceedingly busy with the organisation of "Shakespeare's England," which will attract all "The quality" to Earl's Court. One of the most interesting and romantic events in that presentation of Elizabethan life will be a sixteenth century tournament, which for splendor and elaborate detail will surpass the famous Eglinton. The lists will be set up as in the old days, when the red-haired Queen watched the gallantry of her gentlemen and in jousts and tilting and a great tourney the descendents of men who stood close to the throne in the history of England, and whose names are still bright upon the roll-call of honor, will splinter lance upon lance and hack each other's armor with trusty swords. There is no truth in the rumor that Conservatives and Liberals will be on opposites sides, nor in the suggestion that Mr. Winston Churchill will challenge Mr. F. E. Smith to mortal combat. But a great many famous gentlemen will put on armor most accurately copied from old models, and two dukes have already volunteered to ride into the lists. Around the lists will be some 3,000 noble gentlemen and fair ladies, like the living ghosts of Queen Elizabeth's Court. So far the Queen of Beauty, who will put the laurel wreath upon the lance of the victor who has done the most daring deeds in the fire of bright eyes, has not been chosen. Perhaps there will be a little private competition for the high post.

USEFUL HINTS FOR THE HOME

A teaspoonful of powdered alum mixed with ordinary stove-polish will give a fine lustre when the fireside is polished, and saves half the labor.

If sausages are rolled in flour before cooking, they will not break. They may be toasted, stewed or fried. This is much better than piercing them.

When burning vegetables refuse, put a handful of salt into the fire with it to prevent an unpleasant odor.

Don't put salt in new milk before boiling it. Put a spoon into your saucepan before the milk comes to a boil. This will prevent its boiling over. After boiling milk, fill your saucepan with cold water. It will clean much easier than with warm water.

Fresh meat will keep longer if hung up.

One egg well beaten is worth two half beaten.

Only half fill your pudding-basin. But the basin should be full when boiled if the pudding is as light as it ought to be.

Mix suet paste with warm water instead of cold, and it will be found much lighter.

Before roasting, slightly sprinkle meat with flour and the gravy will be delicious.

A little ground rice added to salt will prevent it ever getting lumpy, and will always be ready for table use.

Common soda sprinkled on sinks and allowed to melt gradually will keep away all smells, and the pipe will be perfectly clean without any other disinfectant being necessary.

A few drops of methylated spirits added to water when cleaninng winrows and mirrors will add to their lustre and brightness.

If the odor of cabbage is unpleasant when boiling add a piece of stale breadcrust to water, and it will somewhat rectify it.

Boots to the Rescue.

Edwin Plimmer, "boots" at the Royal Sportsman Hotel, Carnarvon, Wales, was presented in the police-court by the mayor with a silver-mounted malacca cane, for assisting the police among a crowd, many of whom were hostile, and who afterwards assaulted Plimmer.

Foxhunters' Vandalism.

How huntsmen looking for a fox which had gone to earth beneath a prehistoric monument in North Wales pulled down some of the ancient stones, was related by Sir John Rhys, at a sitting of the Royal Commission on the Ancient Monuments of the Principality.

"Shoot, Box, or Run."

Much amusement was created at Gwyrfai Rural Council, at Carnarvon, Wales, when the chairman enumerated the "qualifications" given by several candidates for the post of sanitary inspector. A quartermaster sergeant thought that, as one who had served his country well, he was entitled to another chance, and he had the additional merit of being able to "shoot, box, or run with any man ten years his junior."

One-Course Dinner for Children

The Edinburgh School Board propose the substitution of a one-course dinner for the two-course dinner hitherto provided for schoolchildren. It was stated that the nutritive value of the one-course dinner was considerably higher than the two-course.

Ancient Town Hall.

The Town Council of Dunbar contemplate removing the front portion of the police station, and also an adjoining office, in order to expose the original hall. The town hall of Dunbar is a favourite subject of postcard collectors and artists. Last year a replica of the picturesque old building was reproduced in the Glasgow Exhibition.

Children Overclothed.

The annual report by Dr. Buchanan, medical inspector of schools for Haddingtonshire, states that the process of "sewing up" the child for winter was much more common than was generally supposed. Overclothing was rather common, especially among country and young children. Special attention is directed to the widespread decay in teeth.

The Queen and the Cat-Artist

Mr. Louis Wain, the famous cat artist, has received the following message from the private secretary of the Queen, to whom he sent a copy of his Annual:—"Her Majesty is much pleased in possessing such an interesting work."

Unknown Man Starved to Death

At an inquest at Old Windsor on an unknown man it was stated that he had died two days before he was found of starvation. A day or two before the end he was seen lying down with a sack over his head. When questioned he said he was all right, and did not complain of hunger.

Coronation Gift Demanded Back

Mr. Courtauld, who a year ago presented the Halstead Urban District Council, Essex with $5,000 to provide public baths as a Coronation Memorial, now demands the money back, owing to the failure of the council to take any steps for utilising it in the way intended.

Remanded Till After Wedding

Harry Lynch, a ship's stoker, who was charged at Southend, with breaking into St. Saviour's Church, Westcliff, was allowed to go out on bail for the purpose of being married. He said he had $400 in money and furniture in London, and he was required by the magistrate to find a surety in $750 for his re-appearance.

Avenue of Crossed Truncheons

Imitating the method of military marriages at which couples walk through an avenue of crossed swords a number of policemen made an arch of their truncheons at St. Margaret's, Westminster, when Police Constable Bolter, the champion rifle shot of the division, walked down the aisle with his bride.

Interesting Find at Winchester

The lost canopy of the monument to Aymer de Valence, who as bishop Ethelmar reigned over the see of Winchester from 1250 to 1260, has been found during the excavations for the new buttresses on the side of Winchester Cathedral. It is a fine piece of carved Purbeck marble. The monument itself used to mark the spot where the bishop's heart was buried in the chapel.

Soldier Robs Army Warden

Sentence of three months' hard labor was passed on a soldier at Aldershot for stealing an antique box valued at a sovereign from the Rev. J. W. Pickance, warden of the Church of England Soldiers' and Sailors' Institute. The clergyman said this was the first theft by a soldier at his private house during the last twenty years, though over a thousand privates had received religious instruction on Sunday afternoons from him at various times.

Mutiny Veteran and His Bible

Samuel Walker, who served throughout the Indian Mutiny with the 52nd Regiment, was buried at Colchester with full military honors. His Bible given to him by an English lady when he was in India, was placed on his coffin at his express wish. During the Mutiny this Bible was lost. Some years afterwards an English officer bought it in an Indian bazaar. Seeing Walker's name and regiment on the fly-leaf, he sent it home to him.

Detective's Fight for Life

Detective-Sergeant Summers, the resident detective at Enfield, has retired after twenty-six years' service. Probably the most striking episode in his career was when he was inveigled into a cottage and set upon by three ruffians with firerons. After a desperate struggle he made his escape, but was pursued by his assailants with brooms and sticks. Finally he was knocked down with a blow which fractured a cheek bone. He was on the sick list for four months, but his assailants were all severely punished.

Laborer's American Legacy

Patrick M'Grath, who resides in a laborer's cottage at Hacketstown, County Carlow, recently signed an agreement to accept $5,000, being portion of the fortune of a deceased American relative. It is stated that the latter left $27,500, that $15,000 is the sum to be divided amongst the next-of-kin in Ireland, and that $17,500 were the legal expenses incurred.

Out-of-Work Eats Judge's Lunch

One of the Dublin judges was robbed of his luncheon in rather an amusing way. A man supposed to be one of the unemployed entered unobserved the Chamber of one of the judges, at the Four Courts, and proceeded to help himself to the lunch which had been prepared for the judge. While he was in the act of pouring out a cup of tea he was discovered by the attendant in charge of the chamber, who had him removed, and went to look for a policeman. In the meantime the man escaped.

"Tom Moore Tree."

In a letter to the Press the Rev. P. Dempsey, Avoca, Ireland, makes an appeal for subscriptions towards the proposed memorial to Moore at the "Meeting of the Waters." Father Dempsey recalls that the famous "Tom Moore Tree," which for ages had stood there, fell to the ground in August last, and that owing to the exertions of a committee steps had been taken to replant the tree, and make a railing round it for protection. A stone bearing a suitable inscription will also be placed within the railing.

WITH PRINCE OLAF

The Little Norwegian Had a Big Time at a Bazaar.

Perhaps the most excited child in London recently was a little boy in a sailor costume, who spent the entire time between mid-day and 1.30 inspecting for the first time a new palace of delight in Bayswater, accompanied by his parents and grandmother.

The little boy was Prince Olaf, who accompanied Queen Alexandria, Princess Victoria, and the King and Queen of Norway to the new Whitely's to select a present from Queen Alexandra.

The prince lost no time in persuading his elders to visit the toy bazaar on the top floor, where he purposed to select his gift. As soon as he arrived in the bazaar he was attracted by a large doll's house, and immediately tried to crawl inside it, to the mingled amusement and concern of the royal party.

It was in the mechanical toy department, however, that he made his selection. Espying a number of motor cars, he quickly jumped into a dark bodied one, and, without a word to anyone, gripped the steering wheel with his small hands and began to pedal vigorously.

It evidently pleased him immensely, for he motored swiftly round the department—a distance of about fifty yards—cutting curves, taking corners, and back-pedalling like an expert, to the admiration and delight of the assistants.

This car was ordered by Queen Alexandra to be sent to Marlborough House.

It was Queen Alexandra's first visit to the new Whiteley's, and before taking her departure she warmly complimented the management on the originality and magnificence of the establishment.

TO BEAUTIFY LONDON

A movement has been started having for its principal object the unification of London's improvements, and the beautification of the city. The inaugurators of the movement are a number of prominent architects, sculptors and painters. At a meeting at the gallerier of the Royal Society of British Artists, the first steps were taken to form the new association, which is to be known as "The London Society." The idea of the movement is not to criticise what has been done, or is being done, but to get Londoners to take an interest in the development of their city, and the movement has the warmest endorsement and promises of substantial support from the London County Council, the City Corporation and the various artistic and architectural societies.

• Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work along at your position or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at night unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach bad? Is there no help ahead in the world for you? Are you ready to give up and say you might as well put a stop to your misery. Very possibly you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your liver right to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold, in the form of lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring a cure in 99 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who write to him. Over 680,000 grateful patients have come from his private practice and voluntary testimonials.

Don't be misled into buying some substitute that some dealer tells you is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's." Into The House Beautiful

A Short Story

From the time of her kitten days, when up among the chimneys on the roof of the studio building her mother used to purr her to sleep with fairy tales, Amber had dreamed dreams of the house beautiful. A home where there was an open fire to toast herself before, a soft-cushioned chair to nap in, a saucer of milk waiting for her pink little tongue to lap. And in hungry winter days of a paw to mouth existence in the cold rain and wind of winter nights a little alley cat has need of a dream to keep her heart warm, to soften the pangs of longing that constantly gnaw her starved little body.

It was on the roof of the same studio building that the artist and the alley cat discovered each other.

Seated on a camp stool in the shelter of the chimneys, Harrington was busily sketching when suddenly he broke off with an enthusiastic exclamation.

"By Jove, what a fine piece of colour- Pure, limpid amber!"

Then, gradually it was borne in upon him that the fine bit of colour was pathetically thin, and that the pitiful little "M-e-w!" attached was begging food.

That was the beginning of a three-fold end in the little alley cat's life—the acquiring of a friend, a name, a career.

The last was most distasteful to Amber, who had not genius for business but was by nature distinctly feminine—old fashioned feminine, that likes to have its fur stroked, to be sheltered, cared for—and she only submitted to the hated role of Jack Harrington's model for the wage sake—the ravishing dish of raw liver, the delectable offering of shrimps, at the end of a sitting.

But even the mess of pottage fails to hold the imagination on a May morning when birds are chirping in the new-leafed boughs of the tree on the corner, and the love of the chase is stirring in every fibre of a young cat's being.

Besides her pose that day was most exacting, one so difficult in fact, that it had taken long, patient coaxing to wheedle her into it at all.

"Now, Amber, keep very still," said Harrington. "My whole skeich depends on the next few strokes!"

In his eagerness the artist spoke more sharply than he knew. The sound of his voice rasped upon Amber's nervous ear. She quivered, twitched—suddenly let go of herself. The careful pose irreparably ruined.

As she saw him approach, Amber shrank back. Flashed a swift glance toward the half open door. Made a dash for the hall and liberty.

"You brute!"

Amber, crouching on a lower step of the stair leading to the roof, lifted wide with wonder eyes to the opposite doorway, where suddenly had appeared a fair-haired girl in an enveloping blue apron, her cheeks aflame, her beautiful eyes flashes of scorn.

"A great big man trying to hit a poor, inoffensive little cat!"

Turning her back in contempt upon the offender, the speaker hurried toward the stair.

Half-fascinated, half-frightened, wholly mystified, Amber solemnly regarded the woman bending over her—the marvellous being so different from, so infinitely superior to, Harrington or the janitor.

In words of music almost as sweet to Amber's ear as her own mother's purr, she caressed, she coaxed, she conquered—she lifted the bewildered cat in her arms and cradled her against her breast.

Harrington sheepishly approached.

"I must apologize for the unpardonable disturbance made in the hall," he faltered, his face crimsoning as he quickly slipped into his shoe, "but when a fellow loses his model and his temper at the same time——"

"I didn't understand that you were sketching the cat——"

The change in her tone, in her eyes, more than the words, held out a flag of truce, and Harrington's smile was quick to snatch the advantage.

"If you will step into my studio a moment," he begged, "I'll show you my provocation to wrath."

She hesitated an instant, then with a twinkling glance at the cat in her arms as much as to say, "Why not, since I carry my chaperon with me," followed the lead.

In a tense silence the three gazed at the unfinished sketch on the easel—the artist, the girl, and the cat in her arms.

"I am the one to apologize!" at last the girl exclaimed in a moved voice. "It is simply wonderful! I never knew until now that a cat had a soul!"

"You like it?" he asked eagerly. "I'm glad. But it's only half done," he added with a sigh, "and now I've queered myself with Amber I can never coax her into such a difficult pose again."

"Yes, you can!" she cried enthusiastically. "You must! It will take only a few minutes. I'll hold the cat for you."

"Will you really?" he answered in a relieved tone. "That's awfully good of you."

The experience of making her own way in the world had taught Amber the necessity of yielding to the inevitable, and this time there was the compensating grace of soft, stroking fingers, of soft caressing words.

"There—I've finished!" at last Harrington announced, triumphantly. "I can't thank you enough, Miss Darcy, for——"

"Miss Darcy!" interrupted the girl, in astonishment. "How did you know my name?"

"Spirits!" he laughed. "Your aunt Mrs. Brewster, whose acquaintance I had the pleasure of making at a little dinner last evening, played medium and revealed the fact that her artist niece, Mistress Nancy Darcy, had just taken a studio in the same building with me."

"I protest against your unfair advantage."

"Permit me to present myself... He bowed low before her. "Your most humble servant, Jack Harrington."

"Jack Harrington!" she excitedly cried. "Why, I know everything that you've painted by heart! Your canvases are simply adorable! I've raved over you for years, but I never dreamed of meeting you!"

"She worshipped from afar," he teased, "and when she came nigh found the idol had feet of clay!" And wickedly he wriggled the slipper that had spun down the hall.

"How can you be so cruel!"

"It's because I'm a 'brute,' you know."

With prolonged badinage they laughed in the hall, then Nan Darcy bestowed a kiss of dismissal upon Amber, put her down and vanished into her studio.

Harrington still lingered at his door. But he was so occupied looking at nothing that he did not see Amber. Not even when she swallowed her pride, walked over, rubbed against him, and looked up into his face with hungry eyes.

So again there was a beginning of a threefold end in the life of the little alley cat—this time, dazzling surprises of dainty dishes constantly set out, now on one side of the hall, now on the other, of the studio building's top floor—the delicious fragrance of hothouse flowers triumphing over the offence to the nostrils of turpentine and cigarette smoke; daily visits from Jack Harrington and Nan Darcy to her roof garden, its ugly, bare stretches transformed into a bower of loveliness by the mysterious arrival of palms, potted plants, and window boxes of mignonette.

As a rule, when they visited her the two artists sketched endless sketches of the clouds scudding overhead, of the distant waters of the bay, of nearby picturesque street scenes. But this time that they came just at the golden tide of sunset they brought neither paint nor brushes. Instead, they sat in the shelter of Amber's chimneys and held each other's hands and talked in low, purring tones.

Then, as suddenly as she had come into his life, Nan Darcy went out of it, and was no longer seen at the studio buildings, and by and by Harrington went away, too, and poor Amber was all alone again, more forlorn and hungry and heartsick than ever.

One evening, in a twilight loneliness haunted by memories, the little cat was sadly pacing up and down the old familiar hall, when to her astonishment Harrington's door opened and the artist stood before her.

"Hello, old girl!" he cried joyously. "This is luck! I've been looking everywhere for you!"

Gratefully the little cat accepted his invitation to enter the studio. It seemed late for a sitting, but on the floor a basket with a soft, knitted scarf in the bottom was already waiting, and she meekly acquiesced as Harrington lifted her in—purring appreciation of the rare privilege now accorded her of choosing her own pose. Instantly the lid of the basket snapped shut over her head. It was a trick, a trap, a prison.

She sprang to her feet. She hurled herself against the fastened lid. She scratched, spit, struggled. All in vain.

Relentlessly the little captive was lifted up, carried from the studio, borne along the hall, down the stairs, out into the hideous uproar of noises.

Amber no longer fought. Terrified, she crouched, motionless—only vaguely conscious of swaying through air, of spinning through space. In a stupor of horror she waited for the end.

It came at last in a sudden cessation of movement, of sound—except for a low murmur of voices that seemed unreal to her dizzy brain.

Then the enveloping darkness was changed to a bright light that made her eyes blink, and dazed, surprised to find herself alive, she was lifted out of the basket.

"Watch and see what she does."

The words were Harrington's, but he had not brought her back to the studio.

"Jack, dear, the poor little thing is almost frightened to death!"

At the sound of the second voice, Amber turned from the man to the woman kneeling beside him. It was Nan! Nan bending over her, cradling her against her breast.

"Doesn't dear Amber understand that she's come to live with us?" she tenderly cried.

Trembling, the little cat looked about the room.

There was a warm open fire to toast herself before, a soft-cushioned chair to nap in, a saucer of milk waiting for her litle pink tongue to lap.

Her heart leaped with a great happiness.

This was what her mother had sung of. This was the house beautiful that she had dreamed dreams about. This was a home.—Springfield Republican.

DOCTORS AFRAID TO OPERATE

Could Not Remove Stone From The Bladder. Gin Pills Enabled Him To Pass It.

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist.

THEY COULD DO NOTHING FOR HIM

He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

Isn't it wonderful? Just think of these simple pills, that even children can take, being able to perform what the greatest specialists in Canada could not do. Surely, the days of the miracle have not passed away, as long as we have Gin Pills. These wonderful pills dissolve stone in the bladder or kidneys because they are a natural solvent for uric acid, which causes calculus. If GIN PILLS are not sold in your neighborhood, send us 50c. for a box or $2.50 for 6 boxes. Sample free if you write us mentioning this paper. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Dept. Doan's Kiuney Pills

Are the Best Remedy In The World FOR BACKACHE.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

You overtax the kidneys—give them more work than they can possibly do—then they cry out in protest through the pain in the back.

Backache is simply kidneyache and the best remedy in the world for backache and all kidney troubles is Doan's Kidney Pills.

We have thousands of testimonials from all quarters of the globe to prove this. Here is one from a party who used them in England, but who is now a resident of Canada.

Mr. P. R. Glanville, Wycliffe, B.C., writes:—"When living in the 'Old Country,' three years ago, I suffered severely from pains in the back, and had to give up work. The pain was so bad that when I stooped down to pick anything up, I felt my back must break. I tried all sorts of remedies and several doctors, but all to no purpose. One day I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, and thought I might as well try them, and to my surprise, before I was half through one box the backache had entirely disappeared, and it has not caused me any trouble since. I always keep "Doan's" in the house and shall always recommend them to all sufferers."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

A BLACK NAPOLEON

Mushidi, who made himself Master of Central Africa.

A chapter of horrors would be a mild description of the account given by Daniel Crawford, a Scottish missionary who has returned on furlough to his native town of Greenock, after 23 years' peril in the heart of Africa. He was in the great Katanga country, southeast of the Congo and north of Rhodesia—a great black Babylon, where nameless horrows were perpetrated every day, where slaves were butchered for the mere sake of blood.

At first there were two other missionaries with Mr. Crawford—Fred Arnot and Mr. Lane (brother of W. R. Lane the well known Free Churchman)—and, says he, "we had to bore our way in. For hundreds of miles Africa is blocked by impudent chiefs of the Rob Roy type, whose only motto is 'Own up and pay up.' You go 15, 17, 20 stupid little miles, perhaps you merely cross a river, and another 'Rob Roy McGregor Africanus' meets you with extortionate demands. He looks at your jacket, and he wants your jacket; he looks at the shirt underneath, and he wants your shirt. Few people have survived to tell a story of more blood curdling atrocities than this broad-shouldered Scotsman, who went out a victim of consumption, but who found the African climate the most effective exterminator of the dreaded bacilli, but the country was full of dangers of another kind.

After the two other missionaries left him, Mr. Crawfoed attached himself to a slaver's caravan. "Along the coast," he said, "there are any number of these Portuguese slavers. They don't move themselves but they employ a lot of black cut-throats, who load the caravans up with powder and flintlock guns, and over the hills and far away they go on their pacific penetration of Central Africa.

"And it was then I saw the horrors of the slave trade. All along the path we saw the shackles and the yokes of slaves who had died on the way down to the coast. To prevent the slaves escaping at night the legs of each four of them are tightly bunched together in wooden shackles. Dozens of shackles were found along the same route in 1909; not old shackles, but green shackles, shackles still wet with the sap of the tree. Though Britain prevents slaves being shipped to Jamaica or elsewhere, in Africa there is always any amount of slavery up the black path. Africa lives on slave labour.

"It was the nightmare of my life in the interior. At all hours of the night natives came to me saying, 'Mr, sir, we are nearly all killed,' and they would tell me of attacks by the slavers, of women dragged off, of old men killed. Often the slaves were led by white men, men sporting false names and there lay the difficulty. I have got date, name of town wiped up, names of all the victims, but I have not got the names of the Portuguese leaders. These men put on the mask of a false name, and under the shield of it they do the devil's work in Central Africa."

The caravan to which Mr. Crawford attached himself to get into the interior, however, was bound for a place where there were always slaves to be obtained cheap—the capital of the Emperor Mushidi.

"Years before," says Mr. Crawford, "Mushidi journeyed into the interior with his wife, Kapapa, and two slaves, grand total of four, and this terrible quartette smashed up all the tribes of Central Africa. Mushidi was a veritable black Napoleon of Central Africa. His brain worked with the precision of a machine. Tribe after tribe fell under his sway, and thus was evolved a great black Babylon, where all the tribes formed a seething mob and where slaves poured in by hundreds and thousands.

"It was a city of scores of thousands of people, certainly over 100,000. And there for years I was kept practically a prisoner, for Mushidi refused to let me go. It was a case of 'Will you walk into my parlour? said the spider to the fly.' Partly perhaps it was a case of pride, for Mushidi wanted the enemies north, south, east, and west to know that he had caught a white man.

"Life there was awful"—and Mr. Crawford shuddered as he recalled the scenes. "Hills of skulls all over the place, and drastic executions daily in full swing. Blood, blood, and yet more blood; blood of babes, blood of women, blood of old men. And there I was shut in, a hopeless prisoner, seeing these people killed off in batches, 10, 14, 20 a day, frightful murders, committed with unspeakable barbarities."

For a time Mr. Crawford was helpless, but gradually he was taken into Mushidi's favour, and acted for him almost in the capacity of secretary. And then daily he petitioned for the lives of some of the condemned people to be spared him. "Fifteen or twenty people were to be killed on, say, the Monday morning. I begged the Emperor, 'Oh, king, live for ever; give me two.' Another batch on Tuesday morning. Again, O, king, live forever; give me three, give me three.' And I got three.

"The result is a lot of these people are called by a word which means 'Begotten again from the dead,' and they turn up from all parts of Africa bringing me little presents.

"What kind of man was Mushidi? A typical Bantu cut-throat, but he had a wonderful head, really two heads in one, the curled ridged occiput telling of terrible potentialities. He had 500 wives.

"One day a strange flag was seen approaching, and this heralded the advent of a new factor in the country. It was but a small expedition which penetrated orth-ward from Rhodesia. That accounts for my being here. In a little while the great mushroom empire of Central Africa was scattered to the winds, and Mushidi's head was cut off and sent to the museum of a certain London institution in a petroleum tin."

Pekin, March 8.—The diplomatic representatives of the foreign powers held a conference yesterday and decided to continue the guards along the railway to Chinwangtao, in spite of the fact that the river is now open from Tientsin to the sea. Additional soldiers will be necessary, as the effect of the present guard is only moral.

The possibility is widely discussed of the Manchus taking over the city and proclaiming a monarchy again The Chinese papers print this suggestion, but as no Manchu leader has been forthcoming in the past six months it seems hardly probable that one can be found now.

The killing of many whose queues had been cut off, the attack on the Nanking delegates at the first outbreak and the desertion of Yuan Shi Kai by his soldiers, all indicate the reactionary feeling. Furthermore, the Republican flags which for a time decorated every house in Pekin, by order of the police are now displayed only on the Government buildings, although the dragon flag has not reappeared.

A party from the British legation is returning to Pekin with the body of Rev. F. G. Day, a missionary of the Church of England, who was killed Wednesday by mutinous soldiers near Paotingfu.

Foreign Powers Lend Money.

Shanghai, March 8.—A banking syndicate representing the four powers, Great Britain, the United States, Germany and France, yesterday paid over 1,000,000 taels, approximately $700,000 to the Provisional Government of China. It is expected that within a week from now 7,000,000, approximately $4,900,000 will be handed over at Nanking and Pekin.

Japan Holds Neutral.

Tokio, March 8.—Viscount Uchida, the Japanese Foreign Minister, replying to an interpellation yesterday in the House of Representatives, reiterated Japan's adherence to the policy of strict neutrality in the Chinese situation. He emphasized Japan's special interest in the south of Manchuria and also expressed the readiness of Japan to despatch more troops should the necessity arise.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Headache
AND Constipation.
After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

THREE GENERATIONS

Kept Healthy by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Over fifty years ago people began to find out the effectiveness of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills in correcting constipation and toning up the system.

Since then the popularity of this reliable old family medicine has grown steadily, and the increase in sales during the past year was the greatest in the whole half century.

As long as livers get sluggish, bowels constipated or kidneys inactive, just so long will

Sick headaches, coated tongues, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and similar disorders are almost invariably caused by impurities which should be removed from the system by the bowels, the kidneys and the pores of the skin. By toning up these organs so that they can do their work properly, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure, or prevent altogether, a large proportion of the common everyday ailments which keep so many people miserable.

U. S. Senate Mutilates Treaty.

Washington, March 8.—Stripped of the clause, which it was claimed would invade the constitutional treaty-making power of the Senate, and with many other limitations added, the general arbitration treaties between the United States and England and France, proposed by President Taft and Secretary Knox, as forerunners of universal peace, were ratified by the Senate yesterday by a vote of 76 to 3. The Senators who voted against the ratification were Lorimer, Martine and Reed. The latter two are Democrats.

President Taft last night, before leaving for his speaking trip to Toledo and Chicago, did not comment upon the Senate's action. He had hoped to see the treaties passed unamended. He had declared publicly, however, that certain amendments would not be objectionable.

Virtually, the treaties, by the Senate's action, are "up in the air." In their modified form they must be referred to England and France.

Had to Protect Suffragettes.

London, March 8.—The extent to which the window-smashing raids of the suffragettes has aroused public feeling against them was evidenced by the large force of foot and mounted police necessary to protect them from a great mob, carrying an effigy of Miss Christabel Pankhurst, which gathered outside of the London Opera House, where the militant section of the suffragettes held a meeting last night. The speeches at the meeting were tame and there was a noticeable absence of all incitement to violence.

The public was practically asked yesterday to help the police catch the window-smashers. The commissioner of police issued a circular calling attention to the fact that under the common law anybody is empowered to restrain persons attempting to do such damage and hold them until a policeman arrives, and, similarly, if detected after the damage is done.

R.N.W.M.P. Will Get More Pay.

Ottawa, March 8.—There is a movement on foot to increase the financial status of the Northwest Mounted Police by granting an increase of pay at the rate of fifteen cents a day. Already the policemen receive 60 cents a day, and it is understood that the pay will be increased to 75 cents a day. The other improvement will be the lowering of the term of service from five to three years.

These views have been placed before the Premier, who has given them a sympathetic hearing, and who is desirous of doing all possible for the comfort and security of "Canada's finest." The idea underlying the movement is that it is felt in influential quarters that the men with their abilities can secure a higher rate of wage than that received on the police and with a minimum of danger.

Liberal Caucus Called.

Ottawa, March 8.—A Liberal caucus has been called for to-day, to decide what amendment, if any, will be proposed on the third reading of the Manitoba boundaries bill.

Meanwhile Mr. Mondou, French Conservative, who voted with the Government, has given notice of an amendment "to preserve any existing rights now enjoyed by the Catholics of Keewatin." One reason is to cause Sir Wilfrid Laurier to declare himself on the schools question.

Call to P.E.I. Legislators.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., March 8.—The Provincial Legislature will meet on March 27. This will be the first meeting of the House under the new Conservative Premier, Hon. J. A. Mathieson. He will report on the result of the delegation to Ottawa, where the claim of the island against the Federal Government were pressed.

The parties in the Legislature will stand 28 Conservatives and 2 Liberals.

Five Killed In Indiana Wreck.

Logansport, Ind., March 8.—Five persons are dead and fifty injured in the wreck of the Continental Limited on the Wabash at West Lebanon, Ind., according to the official bulletin sent to Supt. J. C. Sullivan of the Peru division last night. The wreck occurred at the Redwood Bridge, near the Indiana state line, part of the train going through the bridge. The injured are being taken to Danville, Ill.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Free selling by speculators in wheat to-day hardened the market down. Rose-colored reports of the condition of the winter crop furnished a pretext. Closing prices were easy, 1-2c to 1-3c under last night. The outcome in corn was a decline of a shade to 1-2c, oats finished 1-4c to 3-8c down, and hog products at a decline of 10c to 25c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ½d to ¾d higher than yesterday, and corn ¾d to 1d higher. During April wheat was ⅝c to ⅞c higher. Paris, Antwerp and Buda-Pest closed unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 7.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for nearby shipment and a fair demand for May-June, but as the prices bid for the latter were out of line and no ocean freight available for the balance of this month, little business was done. The demand for oats is fair and sales of several loads were made for May-June shipment at profitable prices. There is a good demand for oats for local and country account and all the offerings met with a ready sale.

An active business continues to be done in flour and some large sales were made for April-May and May-June shipment, but bids on winter wheat flour are away out of line. The demand for mill feed is good and sales of full carloads of bran were made at $26 and millers in some cases are asking $28 for shorts. Butter is firm under a fair demand. Eggs weak and much lower on increased receipts. Demand for provisions fair.

Feeders, 800 to 950 lbs., $5 to $5.25; stockers, $4 to $4.50.

Milkers and Springers

Receipts during the week have been liberal, but too many of the common and medium, which had the tendency to depress the market. Prices ranged all the way from $30 for inferior to $105 for superior quality cows. The general run was from $45 to $70 each. At the close of the week, prices were reported by the dealers to be from $5 to $10 per head lower than on Monday last. See the many, sales given below.

Veal Calves.

Prices for veal calves remain steady at $4 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.50 to $5.25 per cwt.; rams, $3 to $4; lambs, $6 to $7.50, with selected lots of ewes and wethers at a little more money.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7 to $7.10, the latter price being for standard weights; hogs, f.o.b. at country points, $7.75 to $7.85. Mr. Harris complains of too many light hogs coming forward.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Serious Fire at Bracebridge.

Bracebridge, March 8.—A store owned by A. A. Mahaffy, M.P.P., and occupied by him as a law office, James Thomson's stationery store, W. M. Ross' grocery store, and R. H. Ryan, photographer's studio, were destroyed by fire early yesterday. Loss $35,000. Insurance $14,000.

Cutting Out Legal Red Tape.

Ottawa, March 8.—It is considered likely that the Minister of Justice will call a meeting during the Parliamentary recess of the Provincial Attorneys-General with a view to systematizing the methods of procedure in the law courts.

A Queer Old Time Law.

A seventeenth century law in England forbade street hawkers to sell fruit, for the reason that apprentices might be tempted to steal their employers' money to buy it.

Home Rule Bill at Easter.

London, March 8.—In the House of Commons Premier Asquith yesterday said the exigencies of public business would not allow the home rule bill to be introduced before Easter.

Sir J. Lonsdale asked, amid loud cheers, whether the Premier had arrived at that opinion after the South Manchester election. No answer was given.

Caterpillar Barometers.

Caterpillars are good weather prophets, especially those that shelter themselves in webs. When rain is due they stay at home instead of foraging on the leaves of the trees which they inhabit. Their sense of barometrical change is keener than that of the oldest weather prophet.

A GOOD DEAL OF DOUBT ABUUT POLE DISCOVERY

English Papers To-day Are Inclined to Treat Matter With Reserve —Amundsen is Very Reticent.

SAYS HE'S PLEASED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, MAROH 8.—Big English newspapers this morning generally treat the announcements of both Amundsen and Scott, reaching the Pole, with a good deal of reserve. At the very best they seem to think they are about to be plunged into another bitter Polar controversy. The question will be, "is it really the South Pole, and who was there first? Some, editorially, plainly indicate that they do not think it worth while to argue about it, as a public issue, and that it had better be left to the scientists to fight over. The Daily News says: "Until there is more to go we must hold that the South Pole is still unconquered." The Morning Leader admits there are many perplexing facts Sir Ernest Shackleton, whose analysis of the situation was blazoned forth under formidable, copywritten lines in the United States and Canadian Morning papers is this morning very skeptical about the Amundsen announcement. Some word is still awaited from Scott. Direct authenticated despatches from Hobart Tasmania, this morning, says Capt. Amundsen, himself, is the only person who has landed from his vessel "The Fram," and nobody is allowed to board the vessel. Amundsen says he's very pleased with the results of the trip, but will make no more definite statement than that.

Praise For Miss Hopkins

Former Peterboro' Nurse is Superintendent of Bruce County Hospital

The following from the Kincardine Review refers to an old Peterborough resident and a sister of Miss Hopkins of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co's office:

The graduating exercises held in the Bruce County General Hospital, Walkerton, on Friday evening last proved the biggest in number of graduation ever held in that institution, there being no less than four diplomas issued and four medals presented on that occasion, the fortunate recipients being Misses Myra Blackwell of Kincardine, Miss Florence Squirrell of Guelph, Miss Gertrude Lawrence of Toronto and Miss Nina McIntosh of Lucknow. All the young ladies passed with first class honours, thus reflecting credit in their own ability and that of their instructor, Miss Hopkins, who has proved the most capable superintendent the Hospital has yet had."

OLD TIMER SAYS A FINE SPRING

First Thursday of the Season Indicates the Weather

Yesterday was what the older residents call the trial day for the spring season. It was the first Thursday in March, and according to old Canadian lore ,the weather on that day will predominate throughout the season. An elderly gentleman who spoke of the matter to the Examiner was quite pleased with the prospects. "It should be a fine spring," he said "the weather was just right. It was bright and warm and we should have quite a lot of that kind of weather now." The first Thursday in every season may indicate, as the old timers say, the character of the most of the weather during the season, but the present day generation is from Missouri, so to speak, in this respect, at the same time recognizing the experience of the patriarchs of to-day.

UNANIMOUS FOR UNION

NO OPPOSITION

At a largely-attended meeting of the Quarterly Official Board at the George Street Methodist Church, held on Wednesday night, a vote was taken on the question of church union, and resulted in an unanimous expression of opinion in favour of the proposed union. The total vote for church union will not be made public at present, on account of the fact that several officials of the church are out of the city and have not had an opportunity of voting.

WAY TO GAIN FLESH

There is only one way for thin, weak persons to gain flesh and strength and that is to eat and digest more food.

"But that's just the trouble," says one. "I don't want to eat at all and the doctors say it does more harm than good to eat what I don't want."

That is true. The thing to do is to get an appetite and good digestion. Miss Henrietta Huber, of the Bronx, N. Y., says on this subject: "I was very weak and had been for several months ,so I thought I ought to take Vinol to gain strength. Since taking Vinol I have gained over 15 pounds in weight and my appetite is good. Now I am as strong as ever."

This is a remarkable case, but there are thousands of others, proving that our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol, is a certain body builder and strength creator. If you are weak and thin, you should by all means give yourself the benefit of Vinol for it will build you up and make you strong. We guarantee it to do this. BUTTERED THE CEILING AND CHASED THE COOK

Fracas in Restaurant Dealt With in the Police Court This Morning

OTHER CASES DEALT WITH

Two local men appeared in the police court this morning, charged with being disorderly in the Dominion Chinese Cafe on the night of March 6th. The disorderly conduct consisted of throwing the butter up to the ceiling and chasing the cook into the cellar and various other qundry, but obnoxious performance.

Mr. W. H. Moore appeared on behalf of the prosecution.

"These men went into the Cafe on the night in question and made themselves generally offensive towards the management," stated the counsel for the plaintiffs. "This is a common complaint and one that must be checked. It is a detriment to business."

The defendants were fined $2 and costs each, amounting collectively to $9.20.

Will Leave the City.

Leaving behind him a very definite promise to leave town as soon as possible, Wm. Armstrong left the court with nothing worse than "suspended sentence" written opposite his name on the court record.

"This is his second appearance in custody this week and the seventh time within the past six months," asserted the Chief by way of a brief mental survey of Armstrong's record as concerns the police annals.

To the Magistrate the prisoner said that his home was in Havelock.

"I have $200 in the bank and a house and lot in Havelock," said Armstrong.

Since his last appearance in court, he has lost his overcoat watch and chain and other small possessions. He was also accused of entering people's houses on Aylmer street and frightening lone women, while their husbands were away at work.

A man purporting to hail from Toronto had a charge of theft registered against him last night, but at the eleventh hour this morning the plaintiff withdrew the charge.

Will Also Migrate.

The man promised to leave town immediately and was given the opportunity of carrying out his plans.

Epidemic Wipes Out Family

Special to The Examiner.

HUNTSVILLE, MARCH 8.—From reports received here this morning, from Dorset, near here, the family of Mr. Angus McKay may practically become annihilated, through an epidemic of a malignant type of scarlet fever. Some time ago his eldest daughter went to Toronto to train for a nurse in the Western Hospital, where she became ill and a few days later died. The body was brought home for burial, and the casket was opened in the home before the funeral. Immediately following upon this one after another of the members of the family were stricken down with scarlet fever and four have since died. Two others are dangerously ill, and little hope is held out that they can recover. Strong demands are being made for an investigation by the provincial authorities. The doctors say the nurse did not die of a contagious disease.

ORDERS FOR CARS

Orders for over 4,000 cars of various classes have recently been placed by the Grand Trunk Railway to augment its present equipment; these include 44 passenger coaches, 23 baggage cars, 300 box cars, and 1,000 coal cars apart from which 948 cars of all kinds have been received and put into service during the past quarter. The Grand Trunk has also ordered 1,000 freight cars from the Canadian Foundry Co., 250 refrigerator cars in Chicago and 250 automobile cars in Detroit. Delivery of these last to commence this April and to be completed at the rate of 25 cars per day.

23 CENTS IS PRICE TO FARMERS FOR EGGS

Montreal Market Weaker—Wholesalers Offer 25c To-day and Country Buyers Offer About 23c According to Report

SUPPLIES INCREASING

Montreal provision houses, according to a report this morning, are paying 25 cents a dozen for eggs. This means that dealers in this vicinity who ship eggs to the Montreal market, are paying about 23 cents to the farmers.

A farmer's wife, this morning, asked a dealer what price he was quoting for eggs.

"I know you won't accept my price," he replied and told her that 23 cents was the price.

"I should think I won't," she replied, "I can get a better price than that."

It was stated to the Examiner that local wholesale dealers were offering only twenty-three cents to farmers. The report from Montreal states that owing to increased supplies the market is weak and lower.

The prices quoted are for the benefit of those who will attend to-morrow's market. The report comes from a good authority, and on the strength of it citizens may expect still further reductons from last week's quotations Of course, it must be understood that the price, 23 cents to farmers is usually for large lots and it could scarcely be expected that purchasers of a dozen or two should be given the same terms. If there is a large attendance of farmers to-morrow the price should be favourable to buyers.

As an indication of the tendency in the market the commission houses are closely examining eggs, as usual, and many are being culled that would, under a strong market, pass examination. That is, when the supply is heavy the provision houses can afford to throw away all those that are at all questionable, and which, under light supplies, would be used. Thus, recently, the percentage of rejected stock has been increasing.

The demand for eggs, at present, is reported heavy, and if the supplies are as plentiful as it is reported, there should be a good business done. A reduction to 23 cents to farmers will certainly not prove welcome after the high prices they have been receiving, but this is the season when the barn yard cackle chorus lifts the soft pedal and swells with fortissimo volume.

It is difficult to say what price will rule on the market to-morrow. The roads are good but the weather, in the meantime, may change. However, with favourable conditions, consumers should find prices much to their liking

OPPOSITION TO THE BILL

There Promises to be an Exciting Time in the House of Commons This Afternoon and Evening

MONDOU IS DETERMINED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH 8.—There promises to be an exciting time in the House of Commons this afternoon and evening if the Government proceeds with the Manitoba Boundary Bill. Mr. Mondou, the M. P. for Yamaska, whose determination to press his amendment, in regard to the rights of the minority in Keewatin, caused an adjournment of the House this morning, when it had been determined that the Bill should be put through at all costs, insists that he will go on this afternoon and that he will press his amedment to a vote. But the Government may not go on with the Bill to-day. If it does it faces the prospect of a sitting of the House, which may last until midnight on Saturday. The opponents of the Bill do not propose to let it go through without an adequate discussion and have passed the word around that every man must be on hand to bear his share in the fight. One Conservative member from the West lost a bet last night that the Bill would go through at yesterday's sittings, and other bets that the bill would be disposed of by to-night. It seems likely to be equally unsuccessful.

A STATEMENT FROM G. T. R.

Examiner Special.

MONTREAL, MARCH 8.—The report published in the Ontario papers to the effect that another strike is threatened on the Grand Trunk, caused a sensation among the officials of the Company, here. The following statement was given out at noon today.

"While it is true that the G. T. R. has given notice of a reduction in the rates of pay governing employees in the train and yard service, the number of men affected is comparatively small and such action was necessary, owing to the fact that the wages paid to the trainmen on branch lines and light runs were all out of proportion to those paid on other and heavier runs."

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

PAY-AS-YOU-ENTER SYSTEM TO BE INTRODUCED HERE

Development of Crawford's Grove by Street Railway Company a Myth.

THE PROPOSED EXTENSIONS

A consignment of ties, the product of the Peterborough Lumber Company arrived in the city a few days ago, and are being deposited on a vacant lot on Albert street. These ties, together with a large quantity of rails and other material used in street railway construction, is one of the preliminary signs of the street railway extension in the south end, which the Peterborough Radial Railway propose to undertake as soon as the weather will permit.

Mr. Munro, manager of the Street Railway, was interviewed this afternoon regarding the rumours which were current re an extension of the line to Crawford's Grove with a view to converting the Grove into a Street Railway park.

"There's nothing to it," replied Mr. Munro. "The rumour is without foundation and is one of many which has been circulated periodically regarding this matter, for several years past."

As regards Jackson park the same conditions will prevail there this summer as in former years.

New System of Collecting Fares.

The introduction of the "Pay-as-you-enter" on the entire Radial Railway system will be an innovation that will transpire during the year. Three new cars specially adapted for the P.A.Y.E. system of collecting fares have already been procured and in all probability more will follow. The three new cars will be placed on the George street route as soon as a 'Y' has been placed in the north end to permit of turning the cars.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Cornelius O'Brien, of Douro, Induced by Melancholia, Tries to End His Life—Had Been Ill

IS IN HOSPITAL

A farm residence situated on the boundary of Douro, two miles east of Douro church, was the scene of a most lamentable occurrence yesterday morning, the household having been thrown into great distress by reason of its head, Cornelius O'Brien, having attempted suicide.

When found he was bleeding profusely from a gaping wound in the throat which, it is said, was inflicted by a butcher's knife. Dr. McNulty was immediately sent for and after dressing the wound, the injured person was conveyed to St. Joseph's hospital. For some time his life wa sdispaired of, but at ten o'clock last night hopes were expressed for his recovery.

The unfortunate man, it is understood, has not been in the best of health for the past year and of late has been afflicted more or less with melancholia, as if having some weight on his mind, a condition that is a recognized indication of irresponsibility and of predisposition to self-destruction. He is a middle aged man and resided with his wife and seven or eight children, who, as far as appearances go, lived happily together. He was, by occupation, a farmer.

Enquiries were made as to the state of the patient at 9 o'clock this morning, when it was ascertained that he was "resting quietly."

BUGLE BAND MINSTREL SHOW TO-NIGHT

The Bugle Band Minstrels held their final rehearsal last night for their show this evening in the recreation room at the Armouries. The programme ran smoothly, and this evening's production should be pleasant surprise to those who have been waiting to hear the musicians of the Bugle Band. The choruses are well prepared and Conductor Beach has faithfully provided for the details. The olio has not been overlooked and some particular funny numbers will be presented.

Those who are taking part in to-night's production are: Sergt. Wm. Sharpe, Messrs. Al. Spendley, Walter Fitzgerald, Mat. Drysdale, W. Spendley, Percy Stock, W. Allen, Asa. Huycke, Sergt. Edwards, Edgar Lebar, Percy Neill, Grant Rightmyre, S. Gibbs, T. Sargisson.

An Quartette, comprised of Messrs. W. Cunningham, Joe Zeipp, Ed. Walton and W. Miller. Mr. F. Clarke will also be heard in a banjo number.

Miss L. Beach is the musical directress, and is assisted by Mr. Geo. Chambers, drums and traps.

ANNUAL REPORT OF SUN LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

The Annual Report of this Company appearing in another portion of this issue, furnishes interesting reading to those carrying policies in the Company and to the public in general. Insurance, particularly life, furnishes a very fair gauge of financial conditions. Such being the case, the report of the Sun Life gives a strong indication of the very healthy state of Canada's fiscal affairs.

The report shows a total volume of business in force of $184,579,073, or an increase of $21,022,798 over the previous year.

New Assurances have been increased over 1910 to the extent of $2,924,403, and the income from rents, interest, etc., by $981,681.

Since the Company's inception the enormous amount of $29,670,271 has been paid out to policy holders.

These figures and the more complete ones as given in their published report illustrate the solidity and enterprise of the Sun Life.

The secret of the success of the Company's operations lies in the fact that they have placed the interests of their policy-holders first—that their investments have always been made in the safest and strongest propositions, and that their management is composed of men whose known probity and business acumen gives to them the unhesitating confidence of their business associates and the public at large.

It should be with considerable pride and satisfaction that these gentlemen present this year's very gratifying report.

FITTING REBUKE FOR "NEW-COMER"

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—After reading the letter signed "Newcomer" in your last night's issue, I fail to see what useful purpose it serves.

Leaving out of the question all political issues, it simply serves as a creater of ill-feeling between Canadians and British residents, which is not desirable. Such a letter would never be written by a healthy-minded Englishman ad must not be taken as representing the feeling or sentiments held by hundreds of respectable Britishers who live in this city, and who are well satisfied with present conditions.

If "Newcomer" cannot express himself in a different mood I would advise him to "move back" with his slang, to the place where he originated, whether it be England, Ireland or Scotland, and leave Peterborough to the ones who are glad of the opportunities of advancement, which this city affords for those who are contented.

FIVE PEOPLE ARE KILLED IN A COLLISION BETWEEN TRAINS AT OTTAWA THIS MORNING

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MAROH 8.—Almost under the shadow of the Parliament buildings, this morning, five people were killed and twenty-four injured, some seriously, when a C. P. R. freight train ran into the rear of the Pottac passenger train, which was backing into the Union Station, here.

All those killed were in the second class coach, which was completely telescoped by the heavier first-class coach and nearly demolished.

The dead are John Moyles, undertaker, Guyon, Que.; John Derby, of Hull; Katherine Kehoe Quyon, Que., and one unidentified boy; John Anderson, C. P. R. Conductor.

The injured are all Ottawa and Quebec people.

There were not many people in the train, or the casuality list would have been much larger.

The injured were conveyed in the baggage car to Hull Hospitals.

The wreck took place in a sharp curve and deep cutting.

KILLED IN VANCOUVER

Alex. Dawson, Former East City Resident, Met a Tragic Death Yesterday.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

Word has been received in the city to the effect that Mr. Alexander Dawson, a former resident of this city, had been killed in a runaway accident in Vancouver.

Mr. Dawson was well known in this city, having left here about three years ago for Vancouver, where he has since resided. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson formerly resided in East City. Friends here have been notified of the fatality, and the remains will be sent here for interment. The accident occurred yesterday afternoon.

FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1912

WHERE THE BLAME LIES.

The essence of Dr. Merchant's report on bilingual schools, is the demonstration of their inefficiency, through the neglect of the Education Department of Ontario, to apply a policy that will provide good teachers. A similar investigation into the Public schools of the province, would no doubt result in a report of a similar character and meaning. It is recognized that there are difficulties in the way of securing an adequate supply of qualified, efficient teachers. But governments and education departments exist to overcome such difficulties; they are the only means provided, and the full responsibility for credit or failure to meet educational needs, must rest upon them. It is the simplest and most self-evident axiomatic truth, that good schools depend upon good teachers. The best equipped schools are no better than a bare barn, without good teachers. The scarcity of good teachers is the direct fault of the Education Department of the Whitney government. It does nothing, where it should do something; it drifts where is should drive. Cheap school books, or free school books, or even school books with a bonus added are of no account if we do not have capable teachers to give them effect.

DO IT RIGHT.

The idea of permanently paving George and Charlotte streets, without the removal of poles, would be an unpleasant one, but not so bad as the idea of paving these streets without sewer or gas services being previously laid .In the past, the bane of our streets has been that they have been continually broken up for some purpose or other. We built a good street and in some way, no sooner has the work been done and the street in good condition, than it was broken up with trenches, here and there, and these so improperly filled as to destroy the surface of the street and ruin it for driving purposes, the only legitimate purpose for which streets are built. If we go to the expense of paving George and Charlotte streets, we shall have, judging by precedent, an epidemic of sewer and water services break out in the paved district. The pavement would be broken up, a much more expensive process than opening a macadamized or gravelled street The City Council and the Water Commissioners should get together and work together to secure conditions that will remove all possible cause of complication that would interfere with the best success of the work of paving George and Charlotte streets .If the sewer,water and gas services are all laid before paving is done there will be enough inevitable breaking up of the street services from accident, without inviting openings for sewer and water services, that should be laid before the work is done. The best way to do a thing is to do it right.

TWO-OF-A KIND.

Messrs. Bourassa Lavergne and other Nationalist allies of the Conservative party are ot satisfied with the Borden Governments disposal of the Manitoba School question. Le Devoir, Mr. Bourassa's paper, announces, in big fat letters, across the whole width of the front page, that

"On Saturday evening at the Monument National, Messrs. Bourassa, Lavergne and their friends will discuss, in a great public reunion, the question of the schools of Keewatin. Admission free."

The inconsistency of the Nationalist members of the Conservative Government will no doubt be criticised on the ground that they think more of the enrolment of office than they do of the principles upon which they were elected. In this they do not differ from the other members of the Cabinet. They hold office by the help of interests and influences diametrically contrary to the grounds upon which they gained the bulk of the support that enables them, with the help of naturally antagonistic elements, to hold office. They have surrendered to influences that they denounced in Ontario with the greatest vigour. The Conservative candidates were all pro-British, flag-wavers, and all that. Now, at the dictation of the anti-British element, in Parliament, and even out of parliament, they abandon the Canadian Navy, and applaud the humiliation of Canada in concert with the Nationalist cheque. In regard to sacrificing principle to retaining office, the Nationalist and Conservative members of the Borden Cabinet are "two of a kind."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dr. Merchant's report is a noisy ending to a still hunt.

If Dr. Merchant should become a timber merchant he will know when not to look for good "pine."

Under the last fourteen years of Liberal administration of provincial affairs, the debt of Ontario was at the rate of $288,000 per year. The increase of the provincial debt under Conservative rule has, for the past seven years been $3,308,000 per year, nearly thirteen times greater.

LEMIEUX USES PELLETIER AS POLITICAL OBJECT LESSON

Shows Inconsistency of Nationalist-Conservative Attitude in Manitoba Bill With Their Pre-Election Campaign

Speaking in the House of Commons, on the second reading of the Manitoba bill, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux gave a good deal of attention to the Postmaster-General in the Nationalist-Conservative coalition Government, Hon. Mr. Pelletier's speech was a contrast of the attitude assumed before, and previous to, the election, as modified by the treatment given by the "alliance" of the Manitoba School question to-day:

In opening, the Quebec Liberal Lieutenant briefly reviewed the bill before the House. From the trend of the debate by members of the Government last night it was evident that they considered it less important for what it contained than for what it did not contain. By whom had this vexatious school question been imported into the debate? The trouble must be assigned exclusively to the "Nationalist wing of this coalition Government." It was to be expected. "They know more about it than we do," added Mr. Lemieux. "It is a family feud." Last night the Postmaster-General, in the course of a deliverance which would be remembered, if not eulogized, had followed his attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier by attempting to play the martyr. He had complained that he and his fellow-Nationalist Ministers had been "called names"; that they had been told to hand over their portfolios; that they had been designated arch-traitors. "Let me tell this House," proceeded Mr. Lemieux, "that the Postmaster-General will not hand over his portfolio. (Laughter.) My hon. friend would stand for being called names for years to come before he would turn over his portfolio. (Renewed laughter.) But by whom is he called names? By whom is he designated an arch-traitor? Why, by his own friends. (Cheers). Mr. Bourassa, the head of the Nationalist wing of this coalition Government, has declared that his conduct makes his British blood boil. Mr. Lavergne, the leader of the hon. Minister, has said of him, 'I am ashamed of him.' So the Postmaster-General is an arch-traitor to his own friends. He has not led them into the promised land of Nationalism, as he pledged them he would do. He is an arch-traitor to his own friends, an arch-traitor to his own promises, an arch-traitor to his own policy. It is his friends who made the charge; they presumably know their man. We on this side of the House are simply looking at the 'quarrel'."

The Best Evidence.

Proceeding, Mr. Lemieux said that the best evidence of the "arch-traitorous" conduct of the Postmaster-General was to be found in the speech of Mr. Lamarche, who had declared that he felt it his duty to separate himself from his Ministers who had led him astray by their promise that if they were elected separate schools would be restored to Manitoba. This was evidence as to who had raised this issue and by whom it had been introduced. The young Nationalist member had made these promises to his constituents, and he had been induced to make them by the Post-master-General, the Minister of Justice, and the Minister of Inland Revenue. These members of the Government—or at least three of them—had induced these young men throughout the Province of Quebec by incendiary speeches to vote for the present Administration on the pledge that it would establish a system of separate schools in Manitoba and Keewatin. "What was the difference between these three Ministers, the Postmaster-General, the Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Inland Revenue, and the young Nationalists whom they sought to stir up?" asked Mr. Lemieux. "Just this —that the Nationalists were sincere, and the Ministers who are called names were ot sicere." (Cheers).

Meant for Bourassa.

"You heard the Postmaster-General last night," continued Mr. Lemieux. "You heard him defending his own gates—(laughter)—defending his own home, aye, and defending his own portfolio. (Prolonged laughter.) You heard him hurling defiance and making charges against Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Does any hon. member of this House think for a moment he was addressing himself to the Liberal leader Not for one moment, Mr. Speaker, not for a moment. His bold rejoinder was addressed to one far beyond the walls of this Parliament. He was addressing the Samson of the Nationalist party, the Samson for whom they can find no Delilah, whose locks cannot be clipped. (Cheers and laughter.) He was addressing himself to Mr. Bourassa. He has desecrated the Nationalist temple and he does not want the columns of that temple torn down upon his head. His denunciation of Laurier was but a plea to Bourassa; to Bourassa who had dared to continue the Nationalist movement after September 21; to Bourassa, who, at least, was honest and sincere in his agitation. And it was addressed to Lavergne, his own leader, and to the editors of the clerical and Nationalist newspapers in Quebec. His denunciation of Laurier was an appeal to these men. It will avail him nothing, Mr. Speaker. He is denounced by those he misled, and he and the Government of which he is a member—which did not hesitate to use these tactics and reap the benefit of them—they will be condemned on the first opportunity, the first time they dare to open a constituency in the Province of Quebec.

Puzzled at Mr. Mens.

For a few moments Mr. Lemieux turned his attention to Hon. Mr. Monk. "From him I hear things new to my ears," he said.

"I had to pinch myself to be sure that I was awake and hearing aright. He told us he always understood that the school question was settled finally settled by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1896, and he spoke learnedly of the law as a professor of Laval University. It sounded like a legal sermon. But for some time past this Minister has been associating himself with the young Nationalist element and the clergy in the Province of Quebec." Exhibiting a campaign pamphlet of Mr. Monk in his constituency during the last campaign, Mr. Lemieux read from it his declarations in favour of the minorities. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his French-Canadian colleagues in Quebec were great criminals in the eyes and judgment of the Minister of Public Works.

Facing Two Ways.

But he had spoken one way before the electorate and another way before the House. The campaign of the Nationalist Ministers in Quebec had been based on two matters. Some they had stirred up by attacks on the navy policy, others they appealed to on the school question. To add some public semblance of sincerity to his position he had severed public relations with his leader. Last year, at a meeting where the speaker had been present, Mr. Monk had "fiercely denounced the Laurier naval law, and fiercely denounced the Laurier settlement of the school question in Manitoba." Mr. Monk was speaking along these lines at one meeting when a voice interupted 'What about Borden?"

"He's all right;" was shouted from the Government benches, amid cheers.

"Yes, but he was not all right then," rejoined Mr. Lemieux.

"When the interruptor appealed to Mr. Monk, the Minister of Public Works turned round with sobs in his voice and replied: 'And have I separated myself from that man to be told now that I am a partisan of Borden?'" (Liberal laughter and cheers).

Proceeding, Mr. Lemieux recalled Mr. Monk's anti-naval declarations, and his subsequent statement in the House that he was always in favour of the navy policy. "And when I read him the riot act from Hansard," added Mr. Lemieux, amid renewed laughter and cheers, "he did not have a word to say."

Salamander-Chameleon.

Then the speaker turned again to the Postmaster-General. "It may be" said he, "that my friends of the Tory party think that this loud and staunch defender of Tory principles has always been what he professes to be to-day. Far from it. I know him from A to Z. He belongs to the species of what the Romans called the salamander, and that little creature which we know as the chameleon. I know him. I have known him for twenty-five years. In 1885 he joined the ranks of the then Nationalist party; then he became a humble follower—a very humble follower—(laughter)—of the Liberal leader, whom he denounced last night. In 1891 he was an ardent champion of unrestricted reciprocity, which now he repudiates in all forms. In 1908 he ran in Lotbiniere county, and told the people he did not run as a Conservative candidate. He was an independent. I was present to unmask him, and I know."

Mr. Jacques Bureau—We all know him in Quebec. (Liberal cheers and laughter.)

Pelletier and Lavergne.

"Well," continued Mr. Lemieux, "he told the people of that county he was a follower of Laurier, but he thought the Liberal Chief was too much under the thumb of Sifton on the Manitoba School question." Last election, Mr. Lemieux proceeded, the Postmaster-General became a follower of Mr. Lavergne. From L'Evenement, Mr. Pelletier's own paper, Mr. Lemieux read his pre-election tribute to "the great Bourassa and Lavergne," and what they had done. Proceeding, Mr. Pelletier had then declared: "The people love you, Lavergne, because you have loved the people—Bourassa and you, Lavergne, have written a unique page in the annals of our country. I offer myself as a candidate because I have the support of Armand Lavergne, and when you vote for me on September 21, next, you will contribute to the victory of Pelletier and Lavergne."

Had to Take Bitter Pill.

Continuing, Mr. Lemieux declared that Mr. Pelletier had been found out in Quebec. Even La Croix was fiercely denouncing him in its last issue. Reading from it Mr. Lemieux proceeded: "From Pelletier we expect nothing good."

"I have too much respect for the ability of the hon. Minister, at any rate, to read the next sentences," added Mr. Lemieux.

"I would not read the paper," exclaimed Mr. Pelletier in wrath. 'It is not respectable.'

"It was respectable enough for you when you were using it," replied Mr. Lemieux.

"He would use anything," volunteered Mr. Bureau.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier jumped to his feet, shaking with passion.

"The hon. Postmaster-General is very nervous," quoted Mr. Lemieux. "Let him take his medicine. The Ultramontane pill must be a very hard pill and a very bitter pill for him to take."

A General South Renfrew.

Continuing, Mr. Lemieux quoted Mr. Pelletier's declaration that he relied on his friend Roblin to establish separate schools in Manitoba. In his opinion the Borden Government was making a great mistake in not facing the issue boldly and in dilly-dallying with the question. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whether in Massey hall, Toronto, on the parish platforms in Quebec, or in the House of Commons, had taken the ground of Provincial rights and no coercion for Manitoba. "It was in standing true to principle and being loyal and straightforward that public confidence was won and held. "That is the reason," added Mr. Lemieux amid applause, "that there will soon be a general South Renfrew throughout this whole country."

Anomalous Statements.

Proceeding, Mr. Lemieux pointed out the anomalies between the statements made last night by Messrs. Monk and Pelletier. While Mr. Monk had practically approved the Laurier settlement of the school question in 1897, Mr. Pelletier had declared it was a miserable settlement. For fifteen years in the Province of Quebec the men sitting on the coalition Government benches had kept up a continuous agitation against Laurier and his followers on the ground of alleged treachery to Roman Catholics.

The Postmaster-General had been one of these most assiduous in his appeals to the prejudices of Catholics against Laurier, and for years Liberals in Quebec had been crucified because they supported the agreement of 1897. Mr. Monk had gone into an elaborate argument that legally the minority had no vested rights in separate schools in Keewatin. Therefore he can keep his portfolio. But Speaker Landry of the Senate, in a long interview in Le Devoir of yesterday, argued just as emphatically that there was a vested right. Deputy Speaker Blondin was quoted as also emphatically declaring before the election that these rights must be safeguarded. Amid all this quarrel and conflict of opinion on the Government side the Opposition could justifiably hold aloof ad let the Government take the responsibility for framing and explaining its policy.

In conclusion Mr. Lemieux referred to the pre-election boasts of Minister ialists about their standing for justice and liberty to all under the British flag. Liberals, too, stood for the flag and all is represented. Now, perhaps, the Catholics of Manitoba might look for the rights they expected under the combined aegis of the Roblin Government and the British flag.

"Amusing Reminiscences."

Premier Borden closed the debate with a fairly brief and somewhat labored effort to meet Mr. Lemieux's criticisms as well as those of Mr. Lamarche's speech of last night, the calcitrants Mr. Lemieux's attack he characterised as consisting of "more or less amusing reminiscences." He complained that while the Opposition had said much on the school question they had not yet defined their own policy. Mr. Lemieux's speech was undoubtedly designed to furnish ammunition of a certain sort to which the Liberals were accustomed.

In regard to family quirrels he made the rather weak retort that the Opposition had better look to their own ranks. Dealing with Mr. Lamarche's speech of last ight, the Premier practically repeated Mr. Monk's argument to the effect that no separate schools were already provided for in the district of Keewatin and the Government would have been foolish to establish them on the eve of enlarging the boundaries of Manitoba. A dual system of schools in the enlarged Province was both politically and constitutionally impracticable.

In conclusion he transferred the onus of dealing with the whole matter to the Roblin Government. The Roman Catholic population of the Province, he said, was greater proportionately to the total population of the Province than was the proportion of Roman Catholics to non-Roman Catholics throughout the Dominion generally. Consequently the Catholics in Manitoba could hope for at least as much justice from the Provincial Legislature as they could hope for from the Federal Parliament

POULTRY MEN HAVE AN UNIQUE SCHEME FOR ADVERTISING THEIR STOCK

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association was held last night in their hall on Simcoe street. Mr. Fred Holmes, President, was in the chair. There was a fair attendance and considerable business of importance was transacted. The members are becoming more enthusiastic than ever, as was evidenced by the manner in which they took part in the many discussions of vital importance to the Association.

As an evidence of how the poultrymen are advertising Peterborough, many of the members of the Association reported having received numerous inquiries for stock and eggs from points all over Canada, and many from Uncle Sam's domains.

As a result of a discussion last evening on a more efficient manner for advertising their stock and eggs for sale, the breeders of the city have decided on a unique scheme, which, if carried to a successful issue, should prove very satisfactory to all concerned, and for the benefit of those who were unable to attend the meeting last night, it was decided to leave the plan at the store of Mr. J. T. C. Lang, George street, where they can call and examine it, and obtain further information regarding the same.

The officers would like to see a full house at the next meeting, as it will be of great interest to all. There will be several varieties of birds on exhibition and the competition promises to be keen. There will also be a paper read by Mr. J. H. Callander on "The Producing of Early Chicks." This should prove of great interest and benefit to the members, more especially at this season of the year.

BRISTOL CUSTARD

Here's a dessert dainty that is a prime favourite in the west of England, and has already proved a big success whenever tried amongst Canadian cooks. Take two cups of milk and scald with a 1-inch piece of stick cinnamon. Add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and boiling water to one tablespoonful of Fry's Cocoa, stirring until smooth, and then add to milk. Take two eggs, beat slightly, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-quarter teaspoonful of salt. Combine both mixtures and strain into buttered cups. Set cups in pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven until firm. Just try it and be prepared for something real good.

PRIZES ARE OFFERED FOR ESSAYS ON GOOD ROADS

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., MARCH 7.—In order to stimulate interest in good roads throughout Canada, W. J. Kerr, President of the Canadian Highway Association, is offering three valuable medals, for the best essay on "What Good Roads Mean to Canada." The competition for these medals is to be confined to boys and girls under eighteen years of age, and no distinction is to be made between the sexes. Women have long since taken a place in literature equal to that occupied by men, Mr. Kerr believes, and a contest in which girls will compete against boys will be more interesting to all concerned than one in which separate prizes are given.

The competition will be open to students in all parts of Canada and there will be no hard and fast rules as to the length of the essay submitted, although articles of 600 to 800 words will be preferred. The well known newspaper rule that writing must be on one side of the paper only will be strictly enforced.

Competitors will be required to deal with facts as well as with theories in the preparing of their papers, and all essays must be in the hands of the secretary, P. W. Luce, 614 Columbia street, New Westminster, on or before May 15.

The first prize will be a solid gold medal bearing on the obverse a reproduction of a part of the Canadian Highway, encircled by the words, "Canadian Highway Association, 1912." On the reverse the name of the winner will be engraved, followed by the words, "First Prize Winner Canadian Highway Association Essay Competition." The second and third prizes will be the same as the gold medal, but will be of silver gilt and of silver. In addition, a silver souvenir pin will be given every competitor whose essay obtains a certain standard of merit.

In discussing the proposition to interest all young people in good roads by means of this competition, Mr. Kerr pointed out that it was imperative that the gospel of good roads should be preached to the boys and girls because it is while the mind is in a formative stage that impressions are lasting and ideas easily grasped.

"By interesting the young people of Canada in the proposal to establish a Canadian Highway that will reach from Alberni, B. C., to Halifax, N.S.," says Mr. Kerr, "I expect to create wide interest in this movement. I realize that once we have the support and sympathy of the public at large the success of this enterprise is assured. Get the young people interested and willing to talk about a cause that is for the public good and it is only a question of time until success crowns our efforts. I would like every school master and school mistress in Canada to call the attention of their pupils to the offer I am making and to give them all possible assistance in preparing themselves for the writing of these essays, either by giving them compositions on such subjects as "Good Roads"; "Canadian Highway"; "The Building of Roads"; "Famous Road Builders"; "Early and Modern Road Building"; or "Roads as a Country's Asset."

All essays must be accompanied by the name of the writer and by a statement, signed by parent or guardian, declaring that the composition is the competitor's own work and that the writer is under eighteen years of age.

SMITH COUNCIL APPOINTS ITS OFFICIALS FOR YEAR

BUSY SESSION IS HELD

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber on Monday, March 4th, at 10 o'clock. All the members were present, with Reeve Garbutt in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A petition was presented by Messrs. Robt. Nurse and Geo. Deyell, signed by twenty-one ratepayers, asking that a new union school section be formed with Smith and Emily, the new section to take in Lots One, Two and Three in the first, second, third and fourth Concessions of Smith.

Moved by Mr. McKee, seconded by Mr. McConkey, that the petition be received and that the Council investigate the matter. Carried.

A petition from the cottage and island owners of Clear Lake was presented by Messrs. Beall, Rogers and Crane, asking that the Council open up either the 14th or 15th Concession to the lake and that the amount of Statute Labour Tax paid by these petitioners be applied for this purpose. A clause was inserted in the petition stating that the undersigned island owners lying adjacent to the township were willing to pay the same rate of Statute Labour Tax as those whose lands are on the main shore.

Moved by Mr. McConkey, seconded by Mr. Davis, that the petition be received and dealt with later. Carried.

Messrs. Scots of the 1st Concession Line addressed the Council and asked that some steps be taken to repair the boundary road between North Monaghan and Smith. This road is kept up jointly by the two townships, and North Monaghan has neglected to keep in repair its share of the road. The matter was referred to the Township Solicitor.

Mr. S. Harrison addressed the Council, stating that he had been informed that the 18th Concession had never been surveyed from the road between Lots 30 and 31 east to Deer Bay. The Council were of the opinion that he was mistaken, but the matter would be looked into.

Moved by Mr. McKee, seconded by Mr. Davis, that the sum of $92.30 be allowed the Collector as abatements for 1911, and that the Treasurer be instructed to return $76.72 of this amount to the County Treasurer as taxes to be charged against lands. Carried.

Mr. Jno. McBride of Millbrook addressed the Council concerning the purchase of a snow plough for the township. As the season was well advanced, and the cost of keeping the roads open to the present time was very heavy, it was moved by Mr. Davis and Mr. Cann that no action be taken. Carried.

Mr. J. A. Young and Mr. R. J. Edmison, the Auditors for 1911, gave their reports showing the township to be in good financial condition, with a total balance on hand of $2,616.23.

Moved by Mr. Davis and Mr. McKee that the Auditors' report be received and that the Clerk be instructed to have 200 copies printed for distribution. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cann and Mr. McConkey that Heard Bros. be employed to run the grader for the year 1912 at the same salary as last year. Carried.

A letter was received from Messrs. Hall, Medd & Davidson stating that the township and Mr. Alex. Elliott would have to come to some agreement concerning the division of the money which the Government granted for damages done the shores of Chemong Park by high water.

Moved by Mr. McKee and Mr. Cann that no action be taken at the present time, unless Mr. Elliott was willing to accept the offer made by the township on Sept. 3rd, 1910, whereby the township received two-thirds of the award and the original owners one-third. Carried.

A by-law was passed appointing road masters, pound keepers and fence viewers for the year 1912. The following were appointed:

CHARACTER IN FINGER NAILS.

Amuse your friends by telling them their characters by their finger nails. Broad nails are said to indicate a gentle nature, and persons possessing them are inclined to be timid and bashful. Those who have red and spotted nails have a desire to command, show great delight in war, and have a disposition to be cruel. White spots on the finger nails denote misfortune.

Those who have very pale nails are subject to much infirmity of the flesh. Melancholy persons, and those who have a desire to higher branches of knowledge, have pale or lead colour nails. White nails denote a great love for the society of the opposite sex, very weak constitution, and feverish subjects.

Persons with narrow nails are ambitious, have a keen love for scientific knowledge, and are quarrelsome. Round nails show a great desire for knowledge in general and liberal sentiments; also that their possessors take great pride in their own accomplishments and are rather hasty. Those persons who lack confidence in human nature, and are decided in opinions, have long nails. Small nails indicate a very small mind, obstinate and secretive nature.

Persons who have very good appetites and lovers of sleep have fleshy nails. Nails that grow into the flesh at the sides or points denote that their owners are given to luxury.

CANARIES IN MINES

About fifteen years ago Dr. John Scott Haldane, who had studied conditions in Cornish mines, suggested that canaries could be used to advantage for detecting poisonous gases. These delicate birds are very susceptible to impure atmosphere and can be used to give a warning before a man feels the slightest discomfort.

The first test of canaries in a real mine disaster in this country took place at the Cross Mountain mine explosion at Briceville, Tenn. Here the government rescuers, equipped with oxygen making machines upon their backs and carrying caged canaries, were followed by squads of unprotected volunteer rescuers. The birds were watched, and as long as they remained cheerful all was well, but when their wings began to droop and they gasped for breath it was known that the men without oxygen machines must venture no farther.

The canaries drew the line of safety and as a result no volunteer rescuers were exposed to the dangers of afterdamp.—Scientific American.

MILITARY REGULATION AMENDED

The military regulation, ordering all city corps into camp at least five days this summer has been amended so as to give the corps liberty to attend camp for as many days as they wish. The length of training has been extended from 12 to 16 days, but in order to draw full pay the men must spend at least five days in camp. The amendment has been made in view of the storm of protest which went up from all city corps, not that they feared going to camp, but that they feared they could not muster sufficient men to take to camp

The new regulation gives provision for 11 days' training at regimental headquarters. In order to draw full pay the men must put five days in camp in addition to the training at regimental headquarters.

No arrangements have yet been made with regard to the local regiments.

FOR SCALDING PORKERS.

For scalding hogs I use a rope hoist that is similar to a rope wire stretcher except that it has hooks instead of gripe, and a rope, say, fifty feet long. I fasten it to a branch of a tree ten feet from the ground, set scalding barrel directly under it and put the water in. Take a small rope two or three feet long, make a slipnoose in each end, fasten to both hind legs of hog, hook lower end of hoist in centre of rope; one man can lift a 250 pound hog up, let it in barrel, and hold it just as high or low as wanted. When head and shoulders are properly scalded, the hoist will hold it while you clean front end. Then let it down on table and change ends, using hog hook in jaw this time. When done cleaning fasten a ring or wire to centre of gambrel stick and lift to desired height for removing entrails. When done pull it out of the way of dogs and let it cool. Use as many hoists as you have hogs. I always use two of these hoists in dressing a beef. This is the best and easiest plan I ever saw for butchering. These hoists can be bought at hardware stores or from mail order houses.—R.A.H.

"LIVING FOR OTHERS IS SOMETHING TO LIVE FOR"

So Said Mr. G. A. Mitchell Speaking at the I. O. F. Concert in the Opera House Last Evening.

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME

The concert which took place last evening under the auspices of Court Chemong, Independent Order of Foresters, attracted a large gathering, so much so that the seating capacity of the Opera House was taxed to its utmost long before the commencement of the evening's proceedings. Mayor Bradburn presided.

The first artist to appear was Miss Maud Bigwood, who possesses a soprano voice of exceptional quality, long range and superb finish, and these qualifications coupled, with great control and admirable breathing capacity, renders her a vocalist of no mean calibre. Her first contribution, "Senora" was a masterpiece in itself and this was followed by selections of a lighter character which were rendered in no less distinguished a manner.

Mr. Harvey Lloyd, the well known humorist, provoked much merriment with his quaint mannerisms. His rendition of "the Famous Finigan Band" in which he utilized a tin whistle, created great merriment, and in the Highland song, "The Lass of Killicrankie" he was equally good. To conclude, he sang some verses, in which appeared the following lines:

If I were a married couple, I would,
I would,
I'd come right here and settle down
In bonnie little Peterborough town,
If I were a married couple.

Needless to say this brought forth a round of applause.

Miss Lillian Dillon distinguished herself as a solo pianist, her contributions being rendered in a most masterful manner. She possesses a very delicate touch and was soundly applauded for her selections.

At the end of the programme, the chairman introduced Bro. Geo. A. Mitchell, Superintendent of Field Work, who gave a talk on "Benevolence." In the course of his remarks he said:

There are very few people who know of the good work of such a society as this. Where would the wives and little ones of the working man of today be if it were not for such benefit societies. Who is going to look after those who are left behind. I say to you people, you ought to be ashamed of yourselves to take no interest in such a benevolent society. I want to say, that I have one of the greatest pleasures of my life to meet with the attendance here tonight. If I can only make Peterborough realize what a great and good work we are doing, to look after the welfare of the sick, I shall be amply repaid. Do you know the meaning of benevolence. Benevolence is an organization of men annd women banded together to help a companion or brother out of distress. When we speak of benevolence, we speak of other organizations in the world. They cannot all be Oddfellows; they cannot all be Foresters, but they can be one of them. Let us workmen realize that there are men and women to-day only waiting to join hands with us.

One of the saddest things I know was a Toronto man who would not join the order, as his wife did not approve. At length, however, he was prevailed upon to join without the knowledge of his wife, and two years later he became sick. Wondering why there were so many ready to help, the woman said to me, 'I suppose it is you who are causing these men to be so kind.' In order to cause no disturbance I replied, 'I suppose so.' The man died, and a day or two after I went to the woman and said, 'What a pity he had no insurance.' The woman replied, 'Dont' talk of that now!' I then explained the situation and asked her to sign the papers. Can you imagine how she looked and how she felt when she discovered her good fortune. Her children are now living in comfort.

In this order there are twenty-four thousand brothers, who would guide a man through every stream. Twenty-nine of our brothers are now in hospitals in Toronto. They are not alone; they are being looked after as if they were in their own homes and some of them better. We have a Hospital Board in the city that looks after such cases and we will have a Hospital Board in Peterborough. We will have that true fraternal spirit and not that commercial spirit that is in the minds of some of our brothers. This work gives a man a love for other good work. It is a work that educates a young man to be unselfish to save for a time of need..

We want men and women to co-operate with us in this good work. We have only a short time on this earth, and while we are here we want to do what we can to strengthen and uplift. If we would only live for one another, we should have something to live for.

As soon as a man is dead his friends will fly to the telephone and enquire the price of a wreath. If these flowers were strewn on the path during life there would be some fragrance to them. I want all members here to-night to tell their friends of this organization, which covers a man with the best and most protective policy that can be put on the market to-day. When a man is disabled he is nolonger required to pay his dues, but receives seventy per cent. of his policy. The same applies when a member reaches the age of seventy years. Now our funds are sufficient to allow us to carry out any promise we make. Last year we saved over a million dollars. What do we want with this money. As day by day the membership of our order increases, so also do our liabilities increase.

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to Discover What Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning (Tea is equally harmful, because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee) and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and have suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110.

"I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day, a woman doctor advised me to drink Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum, and gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and am still gaining, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough, I expect, to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Now that a few months have passed since I began to use Postum, I can gladly say I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that relieved me.

"Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road aret Allen 60, Stella Condon 45.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

THE PASSING OF THE LATE THOMAS BEALL

The death on Friday, March 1st of Mr. Thomas Beall marks the passing of another of Lindsay's old citizens. Mr. Beall was a native of Cornwall, England, and recollected distinctly the coronation celebrations of the late Queen Victoria. His family came to this country in 1830, his father taking up land in the township of East Whitby, not far from the town of Oshawa, and of all the family, eleven in number, all have predeceased him but one brother. Mr. Beall was in business for many years in the town of Whitby, removing in 1860 to the village of Oakwood, and thence to Lindsay in 1862, the year following the great fire, and established the jewellery business, which has since been carried on continuously by son and grandson. For many years Mr. Beall gave much attention to tree and fruit growing and to the late Mr. John Knowlson and himself are largely due the honour of first proving by actual results that pears and grapes as well as the better varieties of apples could be grown here—at that time practically everything in the way of fruit being imported — and in 1879 he won the medal for display of grapes at the Dominion Exhibition.

Mr. Beall was for many years secretary of the Victorial Agricultural Society, and the present favourable standing of the Ontario Horticultural Society is largely due to the initial work he did in the organization of subsidiary societies all over this province. To him the credit is due for the arrangement of the trees and shrubs of the Riverside cemetery. He was a member of the Masonic Order, a member of the town council, and a loyal though unaggressive supporter of Conservatism and British connection in Canada. He was a member of old St. Paul's church and always a staunch believer in the tenets of the Church of England.

Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Beall celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. He is survived by his widow, his son, two grandsons, four granddaughters and three great grandchildren.

Mrs. Charles Lyle of this city, is a niece of the deceased.

A dog fight to the average citizen obtains as being a commonplace affair, but not so with the blood-thirsty encounter which took place on Aylmer street this morning between two large hungry-looking curs. At one stage of the game there were fifty-two adults gathered about the spot whereon those canines fought their bitter feud. This, in addition to the usual quota of small boys who invariably attend gatherings of that nature, must have been encouraging to the combatants from a notoriety viewpoint. Old men muttered between their whiskers, strong men gave vent to their feelings by several choice invectives and a woman wept, smiled and became hysterical. These fluctuations varying according to the degree of success which rewarded her doggie's ambition to annihilate its fellow creature.

The battle waged hot, with odds evenly divided and the crowd grew in proportions, until the door of a nearby house opened and an angry-looking occupant emerged with a pail of water. Poising the steaming liquid in the air for a moment, while the crowd with bated breath fell back, she let the contents of the bucket go. The hot water enveloped the dogs like a tent. With a yelp they cut loose a few barrels of speel and beat a clear course for Little Lake.

WRITER SAYS CITIZENS SHOULD PATRONIZE PETERBORO' STORES

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A prominent merchant, who is an agent for one of the Express Companies, made the statement to me lately that Peterboro' people buy as much goods from out of town stores during a year representing a turn over equal to any of the local retail businesses. He stated frequently people get money orders from him to pay for goods they are buying from the departmental stores in Toronto, goods which he can duplicate in his store at the same if not lower prices. Now, this is a question that comes home to every citizen. We hear a great deal about building up our city and those who complain most loudly that we are going ahead fast enough are generally those who order goods from the big stores. Where is there any patriotism, or fair dealing in this. And it is not that the merchants complain although they must feel that public spirit should extend beyond the few cents that may be saved by buying from the big stores.

You would think, however, that the citizens would be the last to spend their money with those big departmental stores which do not contribute one copper toward the development of Peterborough. I want to assure you that I am not a merchant, but this statement I believe is true, not only in regard to Peterborough, but with many other towns and cities around the country.

And I know that our merchants are not looking for sympathy or charity. In most cases I believe they can offer just as good bargains as those offered in the big catalogues that are so carefully illustrated and present such a pleasing appearance to the eye.

At home here, purchasers can see and examine the goods they buy, but by sending out of the city for goods they are buying in ignorance as to the real value of the goods they ask for. True they may exchange goods, but this is not a satisfactory method of doing business. I have known merchants to say that they can duplicate any offerings made in the big catalogues. I do not know the extent to which this is true, but I do know that Peterborough's stores are regarded among the best in the province, not only from the standpoint of appearance, but in the quality of goods they offer and in the reasonable prices asked.

The citizens will continue to please themselves of course, but their attitude is vastly different from what you find in the west, where everyone is really interested in his town and in the welfare of his fellow citizens. The boosting spirit so much in evidence begins with boosting home trade, spending money at home, thus the individual does his share in the advancement of the town. I have written this because it may be that some do not look at the matter in the right light, forgetting that the spending of money with outside dealers takes that much money from the city and indirectly is a loss to the citizens.

Yours truly,
CONSUMER.

Regular Meeting of Board Was Held Last Night—Report of Librarian

BOOKS FOR ARTISANS

The regular monthly meeting of the Public Library Board was held last night, with the following members present: Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, A. Mowat, H. R. H. Kenner, John Corkery, H. Ritchie and D. Spence. Mr. Mowat was appointed chairman pro tem.

The Librarian reported that Mr. W. E. Lech had offered to donate a picture by C. W. Furse, A.R.A., "The Timber Haulers," to the Library. This reproduction is on exhibition in Mr. Lech's store at present.

Moved by Mr. Kenner, seconded by Mr. Spence, that the offer of Mr. Lech be accepted and that the thanks of the Board be conveyed to him. —Carried.

A letter from Mr. G. O. Carlisle stated that a number of the leading boys at the Collegiate Institute had formed what they call the Peterborough Collegiate Club. They asked for the use of a room in the Library for meetings every Thursday afternoon from 4.15 to 5.15 o'clock.

Moved by Mr. Corkery, seconded by Mr. Ritchie that the request of the club be granted until the summer holidays and that the boys be expected to pay any expense incurred. —Carried.

A letter was received from Mr. W. R. Nursey, Insepector of Public Libraries, informing the Board that he had shipped a travelling library case containing 33 books of a technical character loaned to the library for the use of manual workers in Peterborough. The Librarian is requested to record the results and any practical benefit that may accrue from the loaning of these books to the artisans of the city.

Mr. Dela Fosse presented a report of the Library Institute of this district, meeting held at Oshawa, which he attended on Tuesday. The meetings were well attended, he said, the papers excellent, but there were no points brought out for help in library management not already known to the Board. "It will be a matter of satisfaction, however, to the Board, to learn that the Peterborough Library was well spoken of at the meeting. I met several people outside the meetings who told me that they had received glowing accounts of our institution from friends and relatives who had visited Peterborough."

Mr. Dela Fosse was appointed to the Executive committee.

The report was received.

Finance Committee.

The report of the Finance committee was presented by Mr. Corkery, who moved its adoption, seconded by Mr. Hall, that the following accounts be paid:

Adamson and Dobbin	$19.05
John Ellam	7.15
Library Bureau of Canada	4.80
Otonabee Power Co.	18.20
Otonabee Power Co.	12.40

Mr. Ritchie presented the report of the Library committee as follows:

That Mr. Ritchie be chairman of the committee.

That a suggestion book be placed on the receiving table.

That Mr. Peck be requested to interview the Department of Education with reference to securing the use of the travelling technical library for Peterborough.

The tender of Trebilcock Bros. has been accepted for the supply of books amounting to about $180.—Adopted on motion of Mr. Ritchie, seconded by Mr. Spence.

Moved by Mr. Ritchie, seconded by Mr. Kenner, that 12 large sized pamphlet cases, 12 small pamphlet cases and 12 twelve magazine covers, same as samples, be purchased.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kenner, seconded by Mr. Ritchie, that Mr. Hall be authorized to have the materials from the museum placed in position in the Library and if necessary that he secure the services of a capable man to do the work.—Carried.

NO CASCARET USER EVER HAS HEADACHE

A 10-cent box will keep your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh for months.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Salts, cathartic pills, oil and purgative waters force a passageway for a day or two—yes—but they don't take the poisons out and have no effect upon the liver or stomach.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver, and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means inside cleanliness and a clear head for months. Ask any of the millions of Cascaret users if they ever have headache

Old Lady Thought a Moment.—One day a pastor was calling upon a dear old lady, one of the "pillars" of the church to which they both belonged. As he thought of her long and useful life, and looked upon her sweet, placid countenance bearing but few tokens of her 92 years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to ask her, "My dear Mrs. S., what has been the chief source of your strength and sustenance during all these years? What has appealed to you as the real basis of your unusual vigour of mind and body, and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joy and sorrow? Tell me, that I may pass the secret on to others, and, if possible, profit by it myself." The old lady thought a moment, then, lifting her eyes, dim with age, yet kindling with sweet memories of the past, answered briefly, "Victuals."

THE DOCTOR

Gargle.

Everybody knows in a general way how important it is to give the teeth a good cleansing and to rinse the mouth out first thing in the morning.

The object, of course, is to remove the accumulation of bacteria which gathers on the teeth, gums, tongue, and palate during the hours of sleep.

How many germs do you suppose accumulate during the night's sleep? In answer to this question a noted doctor gives some interesting and rather startling figures, which are worth quoting.

He states that he had found the mouth on waking in the morning to contain about three thousand million bacteria capable of being removed by a five-fold rinsing with twenty-five cubic centimeters of water each time.

After ordinary washing of the teeth with a hard toothbrush, about one-fourth the number could still be rinsed away. After using tooth paste, only 120,000,000 were left.

Whooping-cough.

Whooping-cough, as is well known, is a very infectious disease, and where the patient is quite a small child strict isolation should be enforced. It often happens, however, that the illness lasts for a considerable period, and the child affected being in every other respect well and strong cannot be kept indoors the whole of the time. In the case of a baby it can easily be kept apart from other children, but an older child should always, where there is any chance of coming in contact with others, wear a respirator containing some form of antiseptic. This will be found to minimize the risk of infection, at least out of doors. Whooping-cough is so troublesome an affection that to keep it from spreading no reasonable precaution should be neglected.

Cramp.

This sudden and painful contraction of the muscles, which usually affects the legs, is most troublesome at night, in fact, some people suffer regularly from it. The cause is either over exercise of a little used muscle or, in many cases, indigestion. Sometimes the contraction is so severe that the muscle affected stands up like a knot under the skin. The best thing to do is to get out of bed and stand or walk on the leg. If the cramp is in the calf of the leg, the toes should be seized and pulled upward, and the foot kept at a right angle to the leg. A tepid sponge bath before retiring will help to prevent the cramp.

Pressure on a Nerve.

Nerves may be pressed on in consequence of a number of diseased conditions, or as the result of some accident.

Enlarged glands in the armpit, for example, are apt to compress the large nerves which supply the arm. Dislocated or broken bones are also liable to set up symptoms due to nerve pressure.

Among the commonest causes are the pressure of crutches, or pressure on the nerves of the arm during heavy sleep when the weight of the body has been thrown on the limb.

This gives rise to the sensation familiarly known as "pins and needles" in the surface parts supplied by the nerve.

This well recognized sensation indicates nerve pressure from any cause and is followed by a tingling and numbness, which does not pass away as in the case where the pressure is due only to accident as when we lie on an arm or sit on a foot, if the pressure is continued more or less paralysis may follow. The cause of pressure can sometimes be removed, but, naturally, this is a matter which only a doctor can decide.

Scars.

Scars on the face may be removed but by no means easily.

In the majority of cases a surgical operation will be necessary to effect a cure. Certain forms of medicine are now in existence which are occasionally of service, but can never be depended upon, and whilst not in the nature of an experiment are only suitable for isolated cases.

Earache.

When a little baby cries sharply and rolls the head from side to side it is almost certain to be suffering from earache—a very common complaint at this time of the year. Do not, however, be led into the error of dropping oil or any other liquid into the ear unless the doctor has ordered it. The safest thing where by to alleviate the little one's suffering is to place a hot dry flannel over the ear and keep on replacing it as it cools. If there is any discharge, get medical advice at once.

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S ESCAPE.

How He Passed the Guard at Fortress of Ham.

In discussing the origin of Louis Napoleon's nickname of "Badinguet" some details were given incidentally of his escape from the fortress of Ham, in Northern France, on May 25, 1840. Fuller details are now available, thanks to the researches of M. Thirria, and in view of the escape of Captain Lux they have a special interest at the present moment.

It seems that the sole credit for the escape must lie with Louis Napoleon himself. He made his valet, Thelin, buy a black wig, some rouge, a cap (which was scrubbed with pumice stone), and a pair of sabots. Then he cut off his moustache, put on a blue apron, a blue pair of trousers, and a close-fitting shirt of coarse stuff.

Some workmen were carrying out some repairs to that part of the fortress where the prince lodged, and this gave colour to his disguise; so much so that the two watchmen entertained no suspicions regarding the man who walked past them and out at the great gate, a pipe in his mouth and a plank on his shoulder. The sergeant on duty at the drawbridge was reading a letter as he passed, and took no notice of him. It was then 5 o'clock in the morning.

Four times that day, the last time at 3 in the afternoon, did the governor, Demarle, send for the prince. Each time Dr. Conneau replied that the prisoner could not see anybody, because he had taken medicine. When at last the governor lost patience and went himself to the prince's room and walked up to the bed on which the supposed invalid was lying he discovered that a very presentable dummy had taken the place of Louis Napoleon. The discovery was made too late. By that time the fugitive was over the Belgian frontier.—Journal des Debats.

MODERN WOMAN IS UNEASY.

Restlessness is a Characteristic of Feminine America To-day.

The most conspicuous occupation of the American woman of to-day, dressing herself aside, is self discussion. It is a disquieting phenomenon. Chronic self discussion argues chronic ferment of mind, and ferment of mind is a serious handicap to both happiness and efficiency. Nor is self discussion the only exhibit of restlessness the American woman gives. To an accustomed observer she seems always to be running about on the face of things with no other purpose than to put in her time. He points to the triviality of the things in which she can immerse herself—her fantastic and ever changing raiment, the welter of lectures and other culture schemes which she supports, the eagerness with which she transports herself to the ends of the earth—as marks of a spirit not at home with itself, and certainly not convinced that it is going in any particular direction or that it is committed to any particular worth while task.

Freer—But More Uneasy.

Perhaps the most disturbing side of the phenomenon is that it is coincident with the emancipation of woman. At a time when she is freer than at any other period of the world's history—save perhaps at one period in ancient Egypt — she is apparently more uneasy.

Those who do not like the exhibit are inclined to treat her as if she were a new historical type. The reassuring fact is, that ferment of mind is no newer thing in woman than in man. It is a human ailment. Its attacks, however, have always been unwelcome. Society distrusts uneasiness in sacred quarters. And hence society, especially man made society, resents a restless woman. And this is logical enough.

Embroiled as man is in an eternal effort to conquer, understand, and reduce to order both nature and his fellows, it is imperative that he have some secure spot where his head is not in danger, his heart is not harassed. Woman, by virtue of the business nature assigns her, has always been theoretically the maker and keeper of this necessary place of peace. But she has rarely made and kept it with full content. Eve was a revoltee, so was Medea. In every century they have appeared, restless Amazons, protesting and remoulding.

Now this world old restlessness of the women has a sound and tragic cause. Nature lays a compelling hand on her. Unless she obeys freely and fully she must pay in unrest and vagaries. For the normal woman the fulfillment of life is the making of the thing we best describe as a home—which means a mate, children, friends, with all the radiating obligations, joys, burdens those relations imply.

Nature's Plan versus Society.

This is nature's plan for her; but the home has got to be founded inside the imperfect thing we call society. And these two, nature and society, are continually getting into each other's way, wrecking each other's plans, frustrating each other's schemes. The woman almost never is able to adjust her life so as fully to satisfy both.

The typical uneasy American woman of to-day is a variant of a species as old as the world. She is, however, decidedly more thoroughgoing in her theory and her methods than her predecessors, save perhaps the Amazons. Her ferment goes to the bottom of things. Her revolt is against man and his pretensions. The essence of her complaint is that man is a conscious tyrant holding woman an unwilling captive—cutting her off from the things in life which really matter: education, freedom of speech, the ballot; that she can never be his equal until she does the same things her tyrant does, studies his books, practises his trades and professions, works with him in government.

That a man's life may not be altogether satisfactory she declines to believe. The uneasy woman has always taken it for granted that man is happier than woman. It is an assumption which is at least discussible.

Man and marriage are a trap—that is the essence the young woman draws from the campaign for woman's rights. All the vague terror which at times runs through a girl's dream of marriage, the sudden vision of probable agonies, of possible separations and deaths, become under the teachings of the militant woman so many realities.

The New Gospel Offers Escape.

The new gospel offers an escape from all that. She will be a "free" individual, not one "tied" to a man. The "drudgery" of the household she will exchange for what she conceives to be the bread and inspiring work which men are doing. All over the land there are women with children clamouring about them, apologizing for never having done anything! Women whose days are spent in trade and professions complacently congratulate themselves that they at least have lived! There were girls in the early days of the movement, as there no doubt are to-day, that prayed on their knees that they might escape the frightful isolation of marriage, might be free to "live and to "work," to "know" and to "do."

What it was really all about they never knew until it was too late. That is, they examined neither the accusations nor the premises. They accepted them.

And so for sixty years the American woman has been working on this thesis. That she has not demonstrated it sufficiently to satisfy even herself is shown by the fact that she is still the most conspicuous of uneasy women.—Ida M. Tarbell in the American Magazine.

SECRETARY

WM. NORTHEY, Secretary Montreal Arena Co.

In recommending the Preference and Common Shares of the Arena Gardens of Toronto as attractive investments, we draw attention to the following:

The Arena Gardens of Toronto will be a large revenue producer at all times of the year.

In the winter season the greater portion of the revenue will be derived from receipts of hockey games. For years Toronto has been urgently in need of a hockey arena. All the teams belonging to the larger leagues will play their games on this rink's surface. With a seating capacity for over 6,000 people, the new rink will fill all the requirements for many years to come.

Outside the winter season, the new Arena will also fill a long-felt want. It offers an ideal location for the National Horse Show, which is such a popular event in Toronto. Then there are such events as the Auto Show, Pure Food Shows, Vaudeville Shows, large conventions, Band Concerts and Industrial Exhibitions, all of which attract large crowds. Up to the present time Toronto has not had any properly equipped building for such events, & these will help to insure the success of the new Arena from the very outset.

A new departure in connection with these undertakings is that a hundred ton artificial ice plant is being installed, under contract with the De La Vergne Company, dated June 23rd, 1911. This plant will not only maintain the skating ice during the winter, but will also manufacture fifty tons of ice per day for family consumption during the summer months. The profit on the sale of ice during the summer season will, it is expected, not only pay for the cost of running the ice plant during the winter but furnish a very considerable revenue.

Mr Lawrence Solman, who is well known throughout Canada for his successful management of theatrical and summer amusements, has kindly consented to act as Managing Director.

PEPPER, BLACK AND WHITE.

The relative merits of white and black pepper have caused some rather heated, not to say peppery, disputes. One set of authorities declare that white pepper has lost some of the pungency of the peppercorns that are treated by the process that evolves black pepper, for both white and black pepper are produced by the same vine.

On the other hand, one of the best, though an early authority, says that the white kind as produced under the name of Tellicherry pepper is superior in aroma and flavour to the black pepper, being made from the best developed and largest berries on the vines, and there can be no dispute as to the white pepper being preferred in those parts of Europe where the finest spices have been in steady use long before they became well known in this country.

In comparing white and black pepper the best grade of each should be selected for the test. Pungency may be the principal merit of black pepper, but the best white pepper makes its best appeal through its superior flavour and aroma.

Some years ago a spice expert of international reputation expressed the opinion that the consumption of white pepper in this country would increase tenfold if the people could obtain pure white pepper of the best quality. Since then the standards in the American spice trade have been raised, but superior white pepper is probably not as freely sold as it might be with proper attention given to quality.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosen the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it extending to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mr. A. M. Moore, Alvinston, N.O., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it saved a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

A Meeting of the playing members will be held at eight fifteen o'clock the same evening, to elect Captains and Committees for the coming season. 3d-57

MAKE FRIENDSHIP WITH THE ANIMALS.

There is satisfaction, as well as profit, in having the confidence of your farm animals and making intimate friendship with them. This is especially true with horses, mules, and cattle. And it is much better to own tame hogs and sheep that can be easily handled than to own wild ones that you cannot touch with your hands—some of which you are actually afraid of at times.

All animals of the farm when young are wild by instinct. This makes them afraid of human beings. The young colt and calf will not allow you to pet and rub them at first because they fear that you may do them some harm. The small pigs will run and hide at human approach, and if one is caught and held it will squeal lustily, which is the wild call of the infant for the mother sow to come to its aid. Little chickens, too, before they have become accustomed to human beings, will run and hide, and are as wild as the wildest of birds.

KITCHEN LORE

Out of the 700 samples of milk examined in London in three months 108 were tuberculous, and the task of tracing the milk necessitated the examination of 8,715 cows at 102 farms scattered over the country.

Dumplings for Stew.

One pint of flour sifted before measuring, one-half teaspoonful salt, one teaspoon cream of tartar, and one-half teaspoon of soda or two level teaspoons of baking powder. Mix with a scant cup of milk. Make a dough just soft enough to handle. Pat it out one-half inch thick or you can make it softer and drop by spoonfuls into the stew. Be sure to have stew boiling and leave room for them to rise. Cook ten minutes. Do not add any shortening as that will make them heavy.

Home-made Worcester Sauce.

One gallon of vinegar, one-half pound onions cut small, one pound brown sugar, one-fourth pound salt, one-fourth pound raisins (stoned and left whole), three apples (peel and cut small), one tablespoonful of cayenne pepper, one tablespoonful of ground ginger, one tablespoonful of cloves (tie these in a muslin bag), one tablespoonful of dry mustard. Boil all together and simmer gently for two hours. Strain through close wire strainer; bottle and seal.

GREAT INTEREST IN TRENT VALLEY FINAL

Peterborough Fans Are Anxious to See the Much Tooted Marmora Team in Action and Will Get a Chance To-night--Easterners Will Bring Big Crowd of Supporters With Them.

Unusual interest is being taken in to-night's Trent Valley final at Brock street rink among Peterborough fans, especially as two outside teams are battling for the silverware. However, this is accounted for by the fact that the Lakefield team is well known here, while the reports of the ability if the Marmora team that have reached Peterborough have been so glowing that local fans are naturally anxious to see whether these Easterners are the speed merchants they are cracked up to be or not. There is a fine sheet of ice ready, so that there can be no excuses on that account. Marmora are coming along with a big following. The whirr of the wheels of industry and the hum of busy marts of trade will be silent in Marmora this afternoon for the powers that be have declared to-day a half holiday to give the exponents of hockey an opportunity to play and see a game on a real rink. Lakefield players resent the inference that they are to be butchered to make a Marmora holiday and they will be down here to play hockey from the drop of the hat. Harvey Sproule will referee the game, which will start at 8.15 o'clock sharp.

The teams will be as follows:

TEMPLIN WILL BE HERE TO MEET LOCAL BALL MANAGEMENT TO-NIGHT

"Old Folks" Templin, the probable Manager of the Peterborough Baseball Club, is expected to arrive in Peterborough on the local C. P. R. train to-night, to discuss the situation with the Peterborough promoters. If the two parties come to terms, and no difficulty is anticipated, Templin will undoubtedly get the appointment, and will set to work at once to round up his team who will report in Peterborough at the end of next month. The ex-Berlin player writes that he will have no difficulty in collecting a team that will be in the race all the way. Stock is still being subscribed rapidly and the committee is delighted.

HASTINGS TELLS NORWOOD TO ATTEND TO ITS OWN AFFAIRS

Norwood village council had a special session last week and memorialized Provincial Secretary Hanna to cut off the liquor store license in Hastings. What do you know about minding your own business? Certain people in the little graveyard by the C.P.R. will have lots to do if they just skin their own sables at home and by the tme they have cleaned up their own back, yards and have any time left why then come over.

The seconder of the motion at the Norwood Council, Councillor Searight is also in the furniture and undertaking business, as is Mr. Howard who holds the store license here. Surely trade is not comin gto Hastings from near Norwood?

We also notice a motion to advertise in the Globe for a dentist and a lawyer.

Sore again on Hastings. Dr. Wilson formerly of Norwood, goes there one day a week now. As to the lawyer, that's about all that is needed over there, but not for long. Get him to make all your wills and then move right over to th ecemetery and the end won't be far away.—Hastings Star

Orillia Win The Neill-Sheppard Cup

Orillia doubled their lead in the Neil-Sheppard Cup competition, the second round of which was played yesterday. Four rinks from Peterborough lined up with as many rinks of the Orillia curlers, and some good, clean games were witnessed. The rinks, when seen in action, showed very little contrast, as regards ability to put the shots over in a manner that would appeal to a judge of good curling, but the Orillia "brithers" were a little too much for their opponents. This circumstance, augmented by the fact that they were playing on home ice, with an eleven-shot lead on the first round, was a little too much for the visitors to expect to overcome. The completion of the round found Peterborough with a deficit of 22 shots to the credit of the homesters.

As a resuk one of the finest pieces of silverware that ever passed through the portals of the Charlotte Street Rink will figure as one of the possessions of the Orillia Curling Club for the year 1912.

Bonspiel games will again be regames should grace the curling calgames should grace the curlig callendar this evening.

A match between mixed rinks was the bill of fare at the rink this morning, and some excellent plays were recorded by the ladies. Miss Davidson and Miss Colling, wearing blue sweater coats, trimmed with white, played good combination as they assiduously plied their brooms on No. 5 ice.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Rustlers had no difficulty in putting the Colts away at the Brock street rink last night from seven to eight o'clock, winning out by 10 goals to one. The teams lined up as follows:

The Rink Rats added another to their string of victories last night, when the Rodents took into camp the junior Lock Works in a one-sided game at Brock street rink. The score was 9 to 3 in favour of the Rats, who lined up as follows:

Goal—Walker.
Point—Kenneally.
Cover—Cavanagh.
Rover—Bain.
Centre—May.
Right wing—Bartley.

Brass Dept. 12 goals, Armature Assembly 1 goal. These teams met in a return match on Thursday evening at Brock street.

In their first meeting the Brass won by the odd goal in three. Condon played his usual fast game and it isn't his fault that the Armature were beaten. McGill also played well, but his style would have been appreciated in Matthews packing house, butchering pigs, or in the prize ring. There is some talk about matching him against "Knockout" Brown.

The Brass Dept., who were without their star, "H.Y." Hillier, played a good game. Prest scored 3 goals, Clute 3, Sanderson 1, Hagerman 1, Davidson 2 and Russell 2, Tommy Barnett scored for the Armature.

The Brass have played 4 games this season, won three and drawn one, scoring 34 goals to their opponents 9

Now that hockey is getting over, he Brass would like a game of football with any other department of the C. G.E. Don't all speak at once.

Line up:

Brass—Barnett, Hagerman, Prest, Clute, Davidson, Russell, Sanderson.

Armature Assembly— Russell, Fallon, Condon, McGill, Gordon, Chambers, Barnett.—Com.

The Camrose Publicity Club have arranged for a special Grand Trunk Pacific tourist car to contain the exhibits of the Province of Alberta, to tour Eastern Canada with a view of attracting further settlement to that Province.

This car will arrive in Peterborough a 8.10 a.m., March 13th, and will remain on the Station siding at the Grand Trunk depot until 5.30 p.m., the same day. Everybody interested in that great country are cordially invited to pay this car a visit.

Sporting News

CLEVELAND, March 8th. — Although Joe Choynski never weighed over 170 pounds in fighting condition, I believe if he could step into the ring to-day in his old time form, he could go down the line and clean up with our big army of so-called white "hopes," said Bug Slattery at the Victor A. C. yesterday afternoon.

"Choynski in his fighting days was like Tommy Ryan in a great many respects. He had the natural cunning, much speed, a cool head, and he could hit hard with either hand. He was one of the best ring generals of his time. I saw Joe in several of his bouts, but I believe his battle with George Godfrey in 1894 was the best I ever saw him participate in. In fact it was one of the prettiest scraps I ever saw between heavyweights. Choynski won in the fifteenth round by a knockout.

"You younger geeks can scarcely know what a contest lasting 15 rounds between such men as Joe Choynski and "Old Chocolate" Godfrey means. They were very evenly matched in height and reach, but Godfrey was a few pounds heavier, while Joe made up for that in youth. He was a few years the colored fighter's junior.

"At that time there were a great many big fellows posing as topnotchers who didn't care for Godfrey's game. There were few of the boys who could do much with him, and he never stepped into a ring that he did not give a good account of himself. He and Choynski were favourites with the fight fans of the early 90s, and they drew a big crowd that night in Boston.

A DANDY FINISH

"The betting was about even, and there was plenty of it done. They were slated for 20 rounds, and both were trained like greyhounds for the fray. They sparred in pretty fashion in the first few rounds, both being graceful and rapid in their movements, and lightning hitters.

"Choynski used a sort of a downward chop for a left hook, and it was a very effective blow, for he had the knack of putting all of his power into the blow. He shook up George with this punch several times during the battle. Both men landed many stiff smashes, but Joe had an edge on the going after the eighth round. He blocked the coloured gladiator's dangerous right and countered with neatness and force. It was a most exciting battle from start to finish. Choynski finally drove a right-hander to the region of the heart, and almost at the same instant he dropped his famous left chop-hook to the point o' the jaw, sending Godfrey down for the count of eight. When the big fellow arose Joe measured him carefully, and after jabbing him lightly with the left, he again sank the right to the body, following with that left chop to the jaw, sending Godfrey down for the final count. It was a sensational finish to one of the best battles of the decade.

"Joe Choynski would have been a champion had he been a few pounds heavier. He broke into the game at a time when our champions were big fellows, and great fighters. He gave Jim Corbett two or three spirited battles, and was by many believed to have been Jim's equal, barring the weight.

"Of course, we must take off our hat to Bob Fitzsimmons as the only middleweight who was able to go down the line and clean up all the heavies, chapions and all. But then Fits was of peculiar build, and was a freak. He had the height, strength and power of a heavyweight, with exceptionally small legs and neck. He won his greatest fights by his hitting power, combined with strategy. He would stall along for a few rounds, taking the other fellow's blows, while he awaited an opening to get in one of his own. Whenever he landed left or right with full force to either body or jaw, the battle was usually at an end.

JOE AND JIM FLYNN

"A fighter of Joe Choynski's ability would have a rare picnic these days with such beefy monsters aspiring for championship honours. They could not land upon Joe, and he would cut them to ribbons and end the agony by dropping that short left to the jaw."

"Bug, I agree with you that Bug was a great fighter," said Colonel d. Stauffer, but in my opinion this boy Flynn could have outslugged Joe the best day he ever saw. I don't believe he could have stopped Flynn's rushes, and take it from me, boys, this fellow Flynn is one tremendous walloper when he gets to close range. I like his style."

"You have another guess coming on that score, Edward," said Slattery. "Joe Choynski was an artist at stopping rushes. He knew how to feint them into wild leads, and could cop them out with remarkable neatness. I also like Flynn. In fact, I believe he is one of the best men of his inches of the present decade, and the best of all the white hopes; but he is not as good as Joe Choynski was when Joe was in his prime."

Joe is now boxing instructor for the rich Pittsburg Athletic Association in Pittsburg.

A SLEIGH DRIVE.

The Mowat Club, consisting of some twenty young people from the Mission Band and Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Church, held a very enjoyable sleigh drive to the home of Miss Telford, in Smith, last evening. The occasion was a delightful one, the evening being pleasantly spent in games and singing, after which light refreshments were served.

TO GET AHEAD OF MENDING

From the Philadelphia North American.

The only way to get ahead of mending is to discard the worn parts of garments and replace them with new, strong, material.

This can be done in a way not to suggest mending, but as it requires some ingenuity, the work must be carefully planned before you begin. None of us like darns and patches on our under clothes, yet these are the garments that wear out first, and unless mended carefully have to be discarded long before it is really necessary if a little thought is not exercised in the mending.

In the first place keep all scraps of lace and insertion that may be left from the making of summer clothing, and when a worn spot or tear appears in a dainty undergarment use the lace or insertion instead of a plain patch or new and perhaps heavier material. A chemise, for instance, will tear out under the arms in long slits where the material has been rotted with perspiration. When mending, insert a plain patch of the same material of which the garment is made, and around it one row of lace insertion, cutting away the material under the lace so that it will look like a pretty mode of trimming instead of a patch. Of course this must be done on both sides.

When the lace insertion on your lingerie has been torn out in the washing the best way to mend it is to stitch new lace of the same design if possible, over the old and cut away the worn portion as you would under a new garment.

Beading can be replaced in the same manner while a new lace edge can be whipped on with very little trouble.

The embroidery on long white petticoats can be repaired when it has been worn out by constantly catching in the heels of your slippers by cutting away the torn part and inserting a piece of narrow embroidery that matches or nearly matches the old pattern.

If it is necessary to make over or repair a corset cover or nightgown where the beading is ripped out, stitch a row of narrow linen tape over the worn beading and run the ribbon under that.

THRUMS.

The world delights in sunny people. The old are hungered for love more than for bread.—Drummond.

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds; therefore let him seasonably water the one and destroy the other.—Bacon.

Little apologies would end many difficulties. There is a way out of every quarrel if all parties will look for it.—Holmes.

Time is incalculably long, and every day is a vessel into which very much may be poured, if one will really fill it up.—Goethe.

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and spend a little less; to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence; to renounce when that shall be necessary, and not to be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself; here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—R. HARRY HAD TWO GOOD JOBS.

The charge was vagrancy—that blanket accusation that the police wrap around all the phlegmatic members of the Amalgamated Association of Toil Haters.

"Who? Me?" exclaimed the accused, Harry White, 30 years old, in the South Side Municipal Court.

Judge Halstead looked all around the courtroom for a substitute, but in vain.

"Yes, I guess you're it, Harry," he said. "This court holds, and always has held, that when a man has no visible means of support, i.e., no occupation, he's——"

"But I got a job, your honour," Harry declared.

"Wha—what!" the judge gasped.

"Sure," said the culprit. "My father is an old soldier and I help him live on his pension."

"Such filial devotion commands our respect," the court declared gravely. "Have you any other—er—er—line of work?"

"Yes," Harry replied. "I also run a grocery bill."

"Keeps the grocer on the run, too, I fancy," the court commented. "Fifteen dollars, Harry. And costs. The city needs such energetic workers."

AN EASY WAY TO GET RICH.

Take one million cats and get rich quick. This is the advice of the Liberte of Paris to its readers. The prescription is quite simple. A million cats will supply you with twelve million kittens a year. The skins are worth a little over twenty-eight cents each, so there you have a daily revenue of about $10,000. To skin the cats you will have to employ one hundred men, who will charge you $2 per fifty cats. Your net revenue will thus be reduced to about $9,000 a day. It should cost you nothing to feed your cats. Start a rattery. Rats breed four times as fast as cats, so the cats can have a daily diet of four rats apiece, which is ample. To feed the rats is perfectly simple. Give them the skinned cats. One cat will be ample for four rats. The scheme works out simply and automatically. The cats eat the rats, the rats eat the cats, and you have the skins.

A WARNING.

After little Edwin's mamma had borne with his naughtiness until her patience was exhausted, she gave him a long overdue spanking. After the first sting had passed away and his angry crying had subsided into a whimper of grieved repentance, he sobbed mournfully:

"You w-want to b-be p-pwetty careful, mamma, how y-you 'pank me—'tause y-you might cwack m-me!"

This is especially true in the case of hens which have stolen their nests or which have nested in the haymow or other secluded places.

But feed and not necessarily love, will make the tamest and most confiding domestic animal of one which was by nature and habit wild or timid. Some individuals by nature, intelligence, or from previous mistreatment or accident are wilder and more cautious than others, but even those which have been as wild and shy as the wildest of wild animals can easily be made tame. And it pays all along the line. H.H.S

A HOT ONE FOR A WAITER

Patron in restaurant (who has waited fifteen minutes for his soup): Waiter, have you ever been to the Zoo?

Waiter: No, sir.

Disappearing Politeness.

Politeness takes time, and time is money. How many of us have fairly realized what the luxury costs once we have been lured to indulge in it? The Keystone Telephone Company of Philadelphia is said to have requested its subscribers not to say "please" to the operators, and enjoined the operators not to say "please" to the subscribers. The use of this polite flourish in that particular telephone district involved 900,000 repetitions of the word, causing a loss of over five days every year of the time of both employees and the public.—Boston Herald.

No Chance About It.

"I'm awfully sorry it happened!" apologised the abject young man, after the stolen kiss.

"Happened!" she exclaimed. "Happened! That is worse than the kiss! If you mean to say to me that you didn't have it in mind when you asked me to stroll away back here in this quiet corner of the conservatory, I shall be offended, after all."—Judge.

To Gentlemen!

It chills my blood to hear the blessed Supreme
Rudely appealed to on each trifling theme;
Maintain your rank, vulgarity despise,
To swear is neither brave, polite, nor wise,
You would not swear upon a bed of death!

MEN AND WOMEN

As the time goes on we have the two results to be anticipated. Men reach the point—usually early in life—where business or politics absorbs their whole attention, and they have little time, strength or interest left for the broader culture and the amenities of life, while women are prone to be too much preoccupied with these things, to the injury of the home—not, perhaps, in its smooth running, for in the average American home the wheels of its machinery do usually run smoothly, though at great expense and to the injury of the home spirit. If the two could be averaged we should more nearly approach the ideal. Men need more relaxation, more rest, more variety, especially as they advance in life. Women need more concentration, more definiteness in their work, and especially more interest and a different kind of ideal in their home-making.

OBITUARY

CHARLES HOLLAND.

A bright young life ended yesterday afternoon when Charles, son of the late Mr. Stephen Holland, passed away at the early age of twenty-three years.

The deceased young man was a life long resident of Peterborough and consequently had many friends by whom the news of his demise was received with great regret. He had been ailing for about twelve months.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning, At 9 o'clock the funeral cortege will leave the late residence of the deceased, 538 Concession street, East City, to St. Peter's Cathedral and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

BIRTHS.

FELL THROUGH A WINDOW

Youths Break a Window at Chinese Cafe and Escape.

Residents in the vicinity of George street were startled by the sound of crashing glass about nine o'clock last evening. Investigation revealed the fact that a window facing the Arcade and belonging to the Dominion Cafe had been broken. The youths responsible for the act, made their escape, which later proved to be only a temporary one, for in so doing they fell victims to the watchful eye of the police force, with the result that they will ultimately be asked to give an account of their doing in connection with the matter at a later date.

AS OTHERS SEE IT.

Every two or three weeks I approach my house from the unusual side and make a note of the effect of porch, windows, and the curtains. Then I try to go into the house as a stranger. Pictures which have become so familiar that they were a part of the wall I see the need of changing and so I see things all through the house.

I think, more than anything else, I find the rooms overcrowded and fussy and something can be banished. Of course, I can't always do these things at the time, but I make a note of them. This has worked so well with my house that I am trying it for myself. When dressed for the street or house I step to the glass and say, "Let me present you to Mrs. ——" and try to look at myself as a stranger and I see many things to improve. It is a good thing to "see oorsels as ithers see us."—E.B. in Harper's Bazaar.

STORY IS VERIFIED

WEATHER WAS VERY MILD

London, March 9.—There seems to be no further doubt as to the discovery of the South Pole by Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer. His silence upon his arrival in Hobart, Tasmania, is explained by the fact that he had contracted to sell an exclusive account of his trip to a syndicate of papers. His sailors were kept aboard the "Fram," and no one was allowed to see them.

The story appears in several papers in the syndicate and is closely guarded by copyright. It tells a clear and definite story of the leaving of winter quarters and the dash to the Pole, which was reached on December 14. The narrative reads like the tale of a winter tramp in bright frosty air and, although the cold was severe, the traditional hardships were almost entirely lacking. The party stayed about four days at the spot which they ascertained to be the Pole, named it "Polheim" and planted flags. After taking observations in clear sunshine they returned as from a jaunt. The whole story reads most prosiacally.

Captain Amundsen intends to stay at Hobart for a few days. He will then go to Australia and give a few lectures there, afterwards departing for Europe by the circuitous route of Buenos Ayres, then round Cape Horn, up to the Behring Straits and through the Northwest passage and the Arctic Ocean.

The confirmation of Capt. Amundsen's attainment of the South Pole on December 14, 1911, received yesterday from the explorer himself at Hobart, Tasmania, sets at rest the conflicting reports current on the subject yesterday.

Christiania, March 9.—When Capt. Raold Amundsen's brother, Leon, personally took the explorer's telegram announcing that he had attained the South Pole to King Haakon Thursday. His Majesty was attending the manoeuvres at Sandviken. King Haakon immediately read the despatch and addressed one to Amundsen at Hobart, Tasmania, saying:

"I thank you for the information. The Queen and I beg to send you and all on board the Fram our most cordial congratulations on the occasion of your Polhe," which are so satisfactory to all of us.

(Signed) "Haakon."

This is all the correspondence that has passed between King Haakon and Capt. Amundsen, King George of Great Britain and King Frederick of Denmark have telegraphed their felicitations to King Haakon.

New York, March 9.—The following message from Captain Amundsen is in reply to a cable from The New York Times, informing him that despatches from New Zealand credited him with the statement that Captain Scott had reached the South Pole, and asking whether these reports were true or not. It will be noted that Amundsen replies in the third person:

(Special Cable to The New York Times.)

Hobart, Tasmania, March 8.—Amundsen knows nothing about Scott.

From H. D. Baker, United States consul:

(Special Cable to The New York Times.)

Hobart, Tasmania, March 9.—Amundsen denies knowledge of Scott's expedition, refuses to disclose anything regarding himself and has isolated his ship's crew. He is reticent, according to his contracts with newspapers. (Signed) Baker."

BORDEN'S ALLIES BALK ON MANITOBA BOUNDARY BILL

Presented an Amendment to the Government's Bill--Lost on Division--Five Nationalists Voted For It.

MR. OLIVER'S AMENDMENT

Ottawa, March 9.—Five of the Nationalist supporters of the Borden Government supplied the full complement of the Parliamentary endorsement of Mr. Mondou's amendment on the school question in the Manitoba boundary bill when the vote was taken in committee of the whole yesterday afternoon. They were Messrs. Sevigny, Lamarche, Bellemare, Guilbault and Mondou. Immediately after the vote was taken Chief Whip Staufield of the Conservative ranks visited Mr. Mondou and conferred with him and his followers. It is evident that the Government is seeking to reach an understanding with them. Mr. Mondou presented his amendment at the opening of the House.

Only two speeches were made on Mr. Mondou's amendment, which reads as follows: "Nothing in this act shall affect prejudicially in any way the school rights of the minority, either Protestant or Catholic, as they may now exist in the territory annexed to Manitoba."

Mr. Mondou supported his amendment by a half hour's speech in French.

He argued that Parliament might legally impose conditions upon the entrance of the territory in question into Manitoba. If the minority had rights, he said, it would be unjust to take away those rights. If the minority had no rights, the clause he proposed would create none. He was astonished, he said, that Manitoba, which had for fifteen years disobeyed a judgment of the Privy Council, should now be granted a portion of the Keewatin district without any guarantee that the rights of the minority will be respected.

J. A. M. Aikens (Brandon) complained that the amendment assumed that there were separate schools existing, and that there might be Protestant or Roman Catholic minorities which had rights in regard to separate schools.

In 1875 a section was passed which did deal with the power to create separate schools. This was amended in 1880 and again in 1885, but this was not a provision creating school districts or school rights. It was merely enabling legislation, conferring on the Government of the Northwest Territories the power to enact school legislation. It did not create separate schools. But the Government of the Territories did not establish separate schools.

In 1906 Keewatin was added to the Northwest Territories. The old Government of the Territories went out of existence and a new Government was created, to whom the same rights in respect to school legislation were given.

But neither did this Government create separate schols. In the eyes of the law there were then no separate schools and therefore there were no school rights in the territory to be annexed to Manitoba. It would be dangerous to pass this amendment. It would create confusion and lead to no end of litigation.

If the contention embodied in the amendment were to stand, the Manitoba Government would have no right to pass any school legislation in future in regard to the annexed territory, for there could be no such legislation that might not be assumed to affect the rights claimed. The Manitoba Government would have no right to levy taxes for the support of public schools.

"Is it right," asked Mr. Aikens, "to say that the people of Manitoba shall have no right to pass school legislation?"

After Mr. Mondou's amendment had been disposed of, Hon. Frank Oliver moved in amendment, "Inasmuch as, under the provisions of this act, the province will not have the public land as a source of revenue then shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter set out, be paid by the Government to the province by half yearly payments in advance on the first days of January and July in each year, an annual sum based upon the population of the territory proposed to be added to the provinces, as from time to time ascertained by the quinquennial census as follows: "The sum payable until the population of such territory reaches 100,000 shall be $300,000. Thereafter until such population reaches 150,000 the sum payable shall be $250,000. After such population reaches 200,000, the sum payable shall be $300,000."

Mr. Oliver vigorously attacked the Dominion taking over the swamp land. If it were reclaimed by drainage, he said, it would eventually produce 100,000,000 bushels of wheat. The Government had not the slightest idea of undertaking a drainage policy. He estimated that Manitoba would lose $600,000 a year by the arrangement.

The bill was reported after considerable debate on an amendment of the Hon. Frank Oliver, and will come up for third reading on Tuesday.

W. H. Martin (Regina) agreed for fair play for Saskatchewan. That province would use the Hudson Bay Railway more than either Manitoba or Ontario. It should at least have the same right of access to the bay as Ontario.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden said the Government would give most careful consideration to any representations which might be made by the Government of Saskatchewan.

Eleven Persons Injured in Run-off Near Palmerston

WILL LIKELY DIE

Durham, Ont., March 9.—Eleven people were injured, four of whom seriously, on the Grand Trunk line half-way between here and Palmerston, yesterday afternoon, when the rear coach of a mixed train jumped the rails and rolled down a steep embankment. Four passengers sustained severe injuries and were removed to Swathcona, Mount Forest, eleven miles away. M. P. Lindsay, a Toronto traveler, of 103 1-2 Grace street, received a scalp wound, and his back was injured. He will recover. C. L. Stevens, Strathroy, was hurt internally, and will likely die.

The injured are:

Seriously Injured.

M. P. Lindsay, 103 1-2 Grace street, Toronto, traveler for the F. F. White Co., head and back injured; will recover.

E. W. Pyke, London, several ribs broken, collar bone fractured.

O. L. Stevens, Strathroy, spine hurt, ribs broken and internal injuries; not likely to recover.

J. A. Cole, London, head, face and hands cut; will recover.

All four were removed to Stratheona Hospital, Mount Forest.

Slightly Injured.

J. J. Wallicott, West Moncton, N.B.
Charles Saunders, Durham.
Frank Warner, Durham.
John A. Hunt, Aleho, Sask.
J. E. Sims, St. Mary's.
M. E. Horne, Durham.
T. A. Caspard, Woodstock.

Reports state that the train, local 56, containing an engine, baggage, freight and passenger coaches, was traveling slowly. At Varney, a flag station, a broken rail was encountered, and the rear coach, occupied by about 35 passengers, principally commercial travelers, was hurled clear of the tracks and plunged down the embankment, turning twice before it struck the bottom. All passengers were cut by glass and severely shaken up and bruised. One woman and a child, the only female passengers, were tossed from one end of the car to the other and suffered serious wounds. Their names are unknown.

Villagers and doctors were soon on the scene and aided by the train crew, had a difficult task in removing the injured. The coach lay on its side and it was found necessary to extricate them through the broken windows. Three men were unconscious and suffering intense agony.

A special train from Stratford was sent to Varney and the four most seriously injured were removed to the Woodstock hospital, while the others were attended by physicians in Varney. Dr. Wilson, Holstein; Dr. Perry, Mount Forest, and Dr. Seannon, Palmerston, were sent to look after the injured on the special train.

The catastrophe happened in the most dangerous part of the little-used road. The line is a branch one and the trains generally travel at a comparatively slow rate. Where the accident occurred there is a precipitious embankment and the ill-fated coach shot to the bottom with terrific force. The wonder was that the result was not more serious. Every passenger suffered slight injuries at least.

More Water for Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 9.—The water commission will petition the Government for permission to construct a new pipe line as well as a pumping station near the cataract to take the place of the present apparatus, which is inadequate to the city's needs. An alternative plan is to place concrete obstructions in the river so as to divert the water to the Canadian shore and enlarge the present plant.

Talk No. 1 About
EYES and GLASSES
by J. W. BROWETT Optometrist

We Examine The Eyes To Determine Which of The 27,000 Lens Combinations Should Be Used

Glasses were invented a great many years ago—so were eyes. The eyes in construction are the same to-day, but the Glasses have changed. The Science of optics has steadily advanced, until now manufacturing opticians are able to grind Glasses in more than 27,000 different combinations of powers to correct defects of vision of many varied forms. Few persons, comparatively speaking, have perfect eyes; and an eye which is not perfect is an annoyance to the brain; the eye and the brain are very intimately connected. When the eyes differ we have unequal vision—unequal vision causes headaches and nervousness, these are symptoms of eye strain. We correct unequal vision with lenses scientifically made. Optical lenses are made from scientifically made glass, except in cheap spectacles; in these the glass is made the same as for windows. We use pure and faultless crystals only.

"Big Griffin, Jr., Ends Life.

St. Catharines, March 9.—Elias Griffin, whose remains were buried in Victoria Lawn Cemetery yesterday, died from self injury in the asylum at Mimico, to which institution he had been committed from Kenora. He had for some time been afflicted by morbid fear that he was going to die, and his mind became unbalanced.

"Big Griffin," jr., was a character in these parts some years ago. He had seen much of life, had been a sheriff in Texas and had traveled in all parts of the continent. The northwest attracted him, and out there he became quite a figure in business and politics. He and a Winnipeg friend took a big contract for ties for the Grand Trunk Pacific and had them already out for delivery, but the coming of spring early a year ago precluded getting them out of the woods and they lost heavily.

It is probable this misfortune preyed upon his mind and led to insanity and suicide.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to slay at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glasses, or a few glasses, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an accident in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segments must be set low, so low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course, this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Famous Invisible Kryptok. Ask for ——— ———.

SHE HAD CONSTANT PAIN

Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dewittville, N.Y. — "Before I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered nearly all the time with headaches, backaches, and bearing down pains, and had a continuous pain in my left side. It made me sick if I tried to walk much, and my back was so weak that I was obliged to wear corsets all the time. But now I do not have any of these troubles. I have a fine strong baby daughter now, which I did not have before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. A. A. Gunn, Route 44, Dewittville, N.Y.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"Dear Miss Challoner: Only a man of small spirit could endure what I endured from you the other day. Love such as mine would be respectable in a clod-hopper, and I think that even you will acknowledge that I stand somewhat higher than that. Though I was silent under your disapprobation, you shall yet have your answer. It will not lack point because of its necessary delay."

"A threat!"

The words sprang from Sweetwater, and were evidently involuntary. Dr. Heath paid no notice, but Mr. Gryce, in shifting his hands on his cane top, gave them a sidelong look which was not without a hint of fresh interest in a case concerning which he had believed himself to have said his last word.

"It is the only letter of them all which conveys anything like a reproach," proceeded the coroner. "The rest are ardent enough and, I must acknowledge that, so far as I have allowed myself to look into them, sufficiently respectful. Her surprise must consequently have been great at receiving these lines, and her resentment equally so. If the two met afterwards—But I have not shown you the signature. To the poor father it conveyed nothing — some facts have been kept from him—but to us—" here he whirled the letter about so that Sweetwater, at least, could see the name, "it conveys a hope that we may yet understand Miss Challoner."

"Brotherson!" exclaimed the young detective in loud surprise. "Brotherson! The man who—"

"The man who left this building just before or simultaneously with the alarm caused by Miss Challoner's fall. It clears away some of the clouds befogging us. She probably caught sight of him in the lobby, and in the passion of the moment forgot her usual instincts and drove the sharp-pointed weapon into her heart."

"Brotherson!" The word came softly now, and with a thoughtful intonation. "He saw her die."

"Why do you say that?"

"Would he have washed his hands in the snow if he had been in ignorance of the occurrence? He was the real, if not active, cause of her death and he knew it. Either he—Excuse me, Dr. Heath and Mr. Gryce, it is not for me to obtrude my opinion."

"Have you settled it beyond dispute that Brotherson is really the man who was seen doing this?"

"No, sir. I have not had a minute for that job, but I'm ready for the business any time you see fit to spare me."

"Let it be to-morrow, or, if you can manage it, to-night. We want the man even if he is not the hero of that romantic episode. He wrote these letters, and he must explain the last one. His initials, as you see, are not ordinary ones, and you will find them at the bottom of all these sheets. He was brave enough or arrogant enough to sign the questionable one with his full name. This may speak well for him, and it may not. It is for you to decide that. Where will you look for him, Sweetwater? No one here knows his address."

"Not Miss Challoner's maid?"

"No; the name is a new one to her. But she made it very evident that she was not surprised to hear that her mistress was in secret correspondence with a member of the male sex. Much can be hidden from servants, but not that."

"I'll find the man; I have a double reason for doing that now; he shall not escape me."

Dr. Heath expressed his satisfaction and gave some orders. Meanwhile, Mr. Gryce had not uttered a word.

VIII.

STRANGE DOINGS FOR GEORGE.

That evening George sat so long over the newspapers that in spite of my absorbing interest in the topic engrossing me, I fell asleep in my cosy little rocking chair. I was awakened by what seemed like a kiss falling very softly on my forehead, though, to be sure, it may have been only the flap of George's coat sleeve as he stooped over me.

"Wake up, little woman," I heard. "and trot away to bed. I'm going out and may not be in till daybreak."

"You! going out! at ten o'clock at night, tired as you are—as we both are! What has happened—Oh!"

This broken exclamation escaped me as I perceived in the dim background by the sitting-room door, the figure of a man who called up recent, but very thrilling experiences.

"Mr. Sweetwater," explained George. "We are going out together. It is necessary, or you may be sure I should not leave you."

I was quite awake enough by now to understand. "Oh, I know. You are going to hunt up the man. How I wish—"

But George did not wait for me to express my wishes. He gave me a little good advice as to how I had better employ my time in his absence, and was off before I could find words to answer.

This ends all I have to say about myself; but the events of that night carefully related to me by George are important enough for me to describe them, with all the detail which is their rightful due. I shall tell the story as I have already been led to do in other portions of this narrative, as though I were present and shared the adventure.

As soon as the two were in the street, the detective turned towards George and [illegible] "I have a great deal to ask of [illegible] business, before us is not a simple one, and I fear that I shall have to subject you to more inconvenience than is customary in matters like this. Mr. Brotherson has vanished; that is, in his own proper person, but I have an idea that I am on the track of one who will lead us very directly to him if we manage the affair carefully. What I want of you, of course, is their identification. You saw the face of the man who washed his hands in the snow, and would know it again, you say. Do you think you could be quite sure of yourself, if the man were differently dressed and differently occupied?"

"I think so. There's his height and a certain strong look in his face. I cannot describe it."

"You don't need to. Come! we're all right. You don't mind making a night of it?"

"Not if it is necessary."

"That we can't tell yet." And with a characteristic shrug and smile, the detective led the way to a taxicab which stood in waiting at the corner.

A quarter of an hour of rather fast riding brought them into a tangle of streets on the East side. As George noticed the swarming sidewalks and listened to the noises incident to an over-populated quarter, he could not forbear, despite the injunction he had received, to express his surprise at the direction of their search.

"Surely," said he, "the gentleman I have described can have no friends here." Then, bethinking himself, he added: "But if he has reasons to fear the law, naturally he would seek to lose himself in a place as different as possible from his usual haunts."

"Yes, that would be some men's way," was the curt, almost indifferent, answer he received. Sweetwater was looking this way and that from the window beside him, and now, leaning out, gave some directions to the driver which altered their course.

When they stopped, which was in a few minutes, he said to George:

"We shall have to walk now for a block or two. I'm anxious to attract no attention, nor is it desirable for you to do so. If you can manage to act as if you were accustomed to the place and just leave all the talking to me, we ought to get along first-rate. Don't be astonished at anything you see, and trust me for the rest; that's all."

They alighted, and he dismissed the taxicab. Some clock in the neighbourhood struck the hour of ten.

"Good! we shall be in time," muttered the detective, and led the way down the street and round a corner or so, till they came to a block darker than the rest, and much less noisy.

It had a sinister look, and George, who is brave enough under all ordinary circumstances, was glad that his companion wore a badge and carried a whistle. He was also relieved when he caught sight of the burly form of a policeman in the shadow of one of the doorways. Yet the houses he saw before him were not so very different from those they had already passed. His uneasiness could not have sprung from them. They had even an air of positive respectability, as though inhabited by industrious workmen. Then, what was it which made the close companionship of a member of the police so uncommonly welcome? Was it a certain aspect of solitariness which clung to the block, or was it the sudden appearance here and there of strangely gliding figures, which no sooner loomed up against the snowy perspective, than they disappeared again in some unseen doorway?

"There's a meeting on to-night, of the Associated Brotherhood of the Awl, the Plane and the Trowel (whatever that means), and it is the speaker we want to see; the man who is to address them promptly at ten o'clock. Do you object to meetings?

"Is this a secret one?"

"It wasn't advertised."

"Are we carpenters or masons that we can count on admittance?"

"I am a carpenter. Don't you think you can be a mason for the occasion?"

"I doubt it, but—"

"Hush! I must speak to this man."

George stood back, and a few words passed between Sweetwater and a shadowy figure which seemed to have sprung up out of the sidewalk.

"Balked at the outset," were the encouraging words with which the detective rejoined George. "It seems that a pass-word is necessary, and my friend has been unable to get it. Will the speaker pass out this way?" he inquired of the shadowy figure still lingering in their rear.

"He didn't go in by it; yet I believe he's safe enough inside," was the muttered answer.

Sweetwater had no relish for disappointments of this character, but it was not long before he straightened up and allowed himself to exchange a few more words with this mysterious person. These appeared to be of a more encouraging nature than the last, for it was not long before the detective returned with renewed alacrity to George, and, wheeling him about, began to retrace his steps to the corner.

"Are we going back? Are you going to give up the job?" George asked.

"No; we're going to take him from the rear. There's a break in the fence—Oh, we'll do very well. Trust me."

George laughed. He was growing excited, but not altogether agreeably so. He says that he has seen moments of more pleasant anticipation. Evidently, my good husband is not cut out for detective work.

Where they went under this officer's guidance, he cannot tell. The tortuous tangle of alleys through which he now felt himself led was dark as the nether regions to his unaccustomed eyes. There was snow under his feet and now and then he brushed against some obtruding object, or stumbled against a low fence; but beyond these slight miscalculations on his own part, he was a mere automaton in the hands of his eager guide, and only became his own man again when they suddenly stepped into an open yard and he could discern plainly before him the dark walls of a building pointed out by Sweetwater as their probable destination. Yet even here they encountered some impediment which prohibited a close approach. A wall or shed cut off their view of the building's lower storey; and though somewhat startled at being left unceremoniously alone after just a whispered word of encouragement from the ever ready detective, George could quite understand the necessity which that person must feel for a quiet reconnoitring of the surroundings before the two of them ventured further forward in their possibly hazardous undertaking. Yet the experience was none too pleasing to George, and he was very glad to hear Sweetwater's whisper again at his ear, and to feel himself rescued from the pool of slush in which he had been left to stand.

"The approach is not all that can be desired," remarked the detective as they entered what appeared to be a low shed. "The broken board has been put back and securely nailed in place, and if I am not very much mistaken there is a fellow stationed in the yard who will want the pass-word too. Looks shady to me. I'll have something to tell the chief when I get back."

"But we! What are we going to do if we cannot get in front or rear?"

"We're going to wait right here in the hopes of catching a glimpse of our man as he comes out," returned the detective, drawing George towards a low window overlooking the yard he had described as sentinelled. "He will have to pass directly under this window on his way to the alley," Sweetwater went on to explain, "and if I can only raise it—but the noise would give us away. I can't do that."

"Perhaps it swings on hinges," suggested George. "It looks like that sort of a window."

"If it should—well! it does. We're in great luck, sir. But before I pull it open, remember that from the moment I unlatch it, everything said or done here can be heard in the adjoining yard. So no whispers and no unnecessary movements. When you hear him coming, as sooner or later you certainly will, fall carefully to your knees and lean out just far enough to catch a glimpse of him before he steps down from the porch. If he stops to light his cigar or to pass a few words with some of the men he will leave behind, you may get a plain enough view of his face or figure to identify him. The light is burning low in that rear hall, but it will do. If it does not,—if you can't see him or if you do, don't hang out of the window more than a second. Duck after your first look. I don't want to be caught at this job with no better opportunity for escape than we have here. Can you remember all that?"

George pinched his arm encouragingly, and Sweetwater, with an amused grunt, softly unlatched the window and pulled it wide open.

A fine sleet flew in, imperceptible save for the sensation of damp it gave, and the slight haze it diffused through the air. Enlarged by this haze, the building they were set to watch rose in magnified proportions at their left. The yard between, piled high in the centre with snow-heaps or other heaps covered with snow, could not have been more than forty feet square. The window from which they peered, was half-way down this yard, so that a comparatively short distance separated them from the porch where George had been told to look for the man he was expected to identify. All was dark there at present, but he could hear from time to time some sounds of restless movement, as the guard posted inside shifted in his narrow quarters, or struck his benumbed feet softly together.

But what came to them from above was more interesting than anything to be heard or seen below. A man's voice, raised to a wonderful pitch by the passion of oratory, had burst the barriers of the closed hall in that towering third storey and was carrying its tale to other ears than those within. Had it been summer and the windows open, both George and Sweetwater might have heard every word; for the tones were exceptionally rich and penetrating, and the speaker intent only on the impression he was endeavouring to make upon his audience. That he had not mistaken his power in this direction was evinced by the applause which arose from time to time from innumerable hands and feet. But this uproar would be speedily silenced, and the mellow voice ring out again, clear and commanding. What could the subject be to rouse such enthusiasm in the Associated Brotherhood of the Awl, the Plane and the Trowel? There was a moment when our listening friends expected to be enlightened. A shutter was thrown back in one of those upper windows, and the window hurriedly raised, during which words took the place of sounds and they heard enough to whet their appetite for more. But only that. The shutter was speedily restored to place, and the window again closed. A wise precaution, or so thought George if they wished to keep their doubtful proceedings secret.

A tirade against the rich and a loud call to battle could be gleaned from the few sentences they had heard. But its virulence and pointed attack was not that of the second-rate demagogue or business agent, but of a man whose intellect and culture rang in every tone, and informed each sentence.

Sweetwater, in whom satisfaction was fast taking the place of impatience and regret, pushed the window to before asking George this question:

"Did you hear the voice of the man whose action attracted your attention outside the Clermont?"

"No."

"Did you note just now the large shadow dancing on the ceiling over the speaker's head?"

"Yes, but I could judge nothing from that."

"Well, he's a rum one. I shan't open this window again till he gives signs of reaching the end of his speech. It's too cold."

But almost immediately he gave a start and, pressing George's arm, appeared to listen, not to the speech which was no longer audible, but to something much nearer — a step or movement in the adjoining yard. At least, so George interpreted the quick turn which this impetuous detective made, and the pains he took to direct George's attention to the walk running under the window beneath which they crouched. Someone was stealing down upon the house at their left, from the alley beyond. A big man, whose shoulder brushed the window as he went by. George felt his hand seized again and pressed as this happened, and before he had recovered from this excitement, experienced another quick pressure and still another as one, two, three additional figures went slipping by. Then his hand was suddenly dropped, for a cry had shot up from the door where the sentinel stood guard, followed by a sudden loud slam, and the noise of a shooting bolt, which, proclaiming as it did that the invaders were not friends but enemies to the cause which was being vaunted above, so excited Sweetwater that he pulled the window wide open and took a bold look out. George followed his example and this was what they saw:

WASTED AWAY TO A SHADOW

"Fruit-a-tives" saved me after 12 years Suffering

HULL, Que. Dec. 25th, 1909.

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. Finally, in March 1908, I suffered such tortures that I was compelled to stay in bed. I could not digest my food and everything I ate caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation, and at times I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came down to only 85 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally I had the good fortune to buy 'Fruit-a-tives' and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy and to the astonishment of my friends, I improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds (and this is more than I ever weighed, even before my illness) I attribute my cure solely to 'Fruit-a-tives'."

Distress From Indigestion

Tried in Vain to Get a Cure—All Medicines Failed

Old Trouble Disappeared When the Liver and Bowels Were Set Right by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You cannot make a greater mistake than to think that indigestion is confined to the stomach. It is a disease of the liver and bowels, and it is only by getting these organs healthy and active that you can ever hope to cure chronic indigestion.

Here are two cases reported by Mr. Skinner, which tell of continued failure to cure indigestion by dosing the stomach. Both were cured thoroughly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. A. C. Skinner, Atlantic St., Hardwoodhill, Sydney, B.C., writes: "My wife was troubled with indigestion and tried all sorts of medicines in vain. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I got her to try them, and to our great delight she was cured. We would not think of being without them in the house for use when the liver and bowels became sluggish.

I told a friend about them and gave him a box. He had suffered from indigestion for years and tried most everything he could get. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were also successful in his case, and he says they beat any medicine he ever came across."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"THE PATIENT"

(Short Story.)

BY GEORGE WESTON.

Panting from the two flights of stairs, Mrs. Harper looked round her with a benignant eye that took in everything, and finally rested upon her son.

"And so," she said, "these are your bachelor quarters, Johnny?" Johnny smiled back at her and answered, "Yes, mother." I call him Johnny because his mother did, and his mother called him Johnny because he had never seemed anything else to her than her baby boy; but outside of the maternal perception, Johnny was forty years of age, portly in his bearing, dignified to a degree, and known to his contemporaries as Mr. John Harper, and a man not to be lightly regarded, no matter how you looked at him.

He led her to the room which had been prepared for this, her first visit to the city. She took off her bonnet and hung it carefully in the closet. While she was unpacking her trunk, she shut the lid, sat on it, and closed her eyes.

"I—I think it was the motion of the train," she murmured. "You know I'm not used to travelling, Johnny, and what with that and the excitement of seeing you after all these years—"

He had the doctor up from the floor below before you could say Jack Robinson, and with the greatest difficulty in the world he made his mother lie down and rest. "The doctor says you must rest for a day or two," he declared.

"Yes, but doctors don't always know," she objected.

"Well, anyhow, you must rest. It's better to be on the safe side. And to-morrow while I'm away I'll have a nurse come."

"A what?" she cried, raising her head.

"A nurse," said John.

"A nurse?" she cried, sitting up. "Now, mother, please. Just for my sake." She lay down, with suspicious docility, and when the nurse knocked on the door the next morning after John's departure, Mrs. Harper smilingly let her in.

"Where's the patient?" whispered the nurse.

"Ah," Mrs. Harper whispered back, smiling more than ever, "that's it. Where is she? You come right in, my dear, and take off your things, and if you'll forgive an old woman for saying so, you need a nurse your own self more than ever I do. You take your things off and draw up to the fire, and I'll make you a cup of tea. Young ladies shouldn't look so pale—and they didn't, either, when I was young."

She bustled to the little kitchen and put the kettle on, bustled back again and helped the nurse to take her coat off, asked her name, patted her pale cheek, called her Jenny, and before the clock on the walk had ticked sixty seconds you would have thought that they had known each other all their lives. "But I came to look after you," laughed the nurse.

"And so you shall, my dear, and so you shall. You shall help me all you have a mind to." Her voice dropped to a confidential pitch as she continued, "I wouldn't mention it to my son for worlds—but I don't think his rooms have had a good cleaning since he came here."

"They look clean."

"Look clean; aye, I'll grant you that, but let's look and see." She bent over and drew her finger along the wainscoting. Dust. She silently showed it to her nurse, silently walked over to one of the pictures on the wall and ran another finger along the top of the frame. Dust. Still in silence, but a silence that had now grown ominous, she tried the rounds of the chairs, the top of the book shelves, the back of the fire screen, the empty bottom drawer of a bureau, and each time that she showed the result to her nurse her lips tightened until determination stood stamped upon her face. They set to work.

First everything came out of the sitting-room, the carpet was taken up, and while an astonished janitor was beating the carpet on the roof, the patient was calling on his wife, and the nurse went shopping. The patient prescribed a cup of hot ginger tea for the janitor's wife's cold, nursed the baby for a minute, and returned to her son's room bearing a broom, a brush, a dustpan, and three dusting cloths. The nurse came back with a cake of scouring soap, a tin of furniture polish, and a piece of chamois. Thus equipped, they fell upon the sitting-room. They swept, scoured, and scrubbed; they dusted, rubbed, and polished—the patient in her glory, and her nurse valiantly following the pace. They whipped the furniture with Mr. John Harper's walking sticks until the last speck of dust gave up the struggle and came out of its hiding-place.

They cleaned the wainscoting and the picture moulding, where the dislodgement of the accumulation of years of dust gave the patient a special pleasure. They helped the janitor put down the carpet, helped move the furniture back, hung the pictures back on the wall, gave the room a long, satisfied look, shut the door, started on the next room, and all with such ardour that at last the nurse sank into the nearest chair and smiled weakly at the patient. "I'll make you a cup of tea" cried the patient sympathetically, "and I'll do the rest of the room myself. Poor dear, you're not used to such hard work. Aye, dear me, shall I ever forgive myself?"

"No, it isn't that," said the nurse "but I was on a special case all night and nearly and—"

"And you didn't get your rest," chided the patient. "That will never do."

So when John came home early from his office, and gently opened the door, he found his mother proudly regarding him over her black satin, and all his rooms as clean as a new made pin.

"What?" said John in astonishment. "You up?"

"Yes, Johnny," she said. "I've been cleaning up a bit."

She kissed him fondly, and proudly she regarded him. "Did the nurse come?" he asked.

"Sh!" she whispered, putting her finger on her lip. "I've just got her off to sleep!"

Sore Chest Croup

You often have pains in the muscles, in the side, the back, the neck, or chest. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense.

Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation, so thoroughly drives out pain, as "Nerviline," which is without an equal for penetrating, soothing, pain-relieving power.

Nerviline simply can't fail to cure, because it's a perfect antidote for all the pains and aches that invade the family.

Nerviline

"For ten years we have used Polson's Nerviline in our home," writes Mrs. M. E. Graves of Freeport. "For hard, croupy colds there is nothing better. In case of a chill, sudden cold, or neuralgia, Nerviline cures before the trouble gets serious. I have used Nerviline for chronic rheumatism and lame back and find it a wonderful remedy."

All dealers sell Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

THOUGHT COLD WOULD TURN INTO CONSUMPTION

LEFT LUNG GOT VERY SORE, HEART DID NOT FEEL ANY TOO GOOD.

Mr. Robert McLarnon, Shawville, Que., writes:—"I am writing to tell you an experience I had with a bad cold and a bottle of your valuable medicine. I was up in the lumber camps teaming horses, and I caught a very bad cold. I thought it was going to turn into consumption, for my left lung got very sore and my heart did not feel any too good. I came home and tried some different remedies but they did me no good. A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I tried it, and when I had taken two bottles my cold was gone. I think it is a great remedy, and will advise any one with a cold to use it. I can't praise it enough."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, which combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies, makes it one of the greatest known preparations for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

MINCE PIE VAGARIES.

By Leroy Runyon.

[All because Dr. Claudius B. Spencer says there is more inspiration in mince pie than in books, paintings, or sculpture.]

I went to a banquet one beautiful eve;
The pride of the city was there;
The music was charming, you sure may believe,
The ladies were witty and fair.
The tables were loaded with goodly supplies,
With chicken and oysters galore;
But the best of it all were the "lovely mince pies,"
Those goodly old mince pies of yore.

The banquet was over, the guests were all fled,
The lights were turned out in the hall;
I went to my domicile, hied me to bed,
And soon fast asleep I did fall.
And then in my slumbers I dreamed me a dream
Of weinerwursts, women and wine,
Of ogres and goblins and witches that scream,
And the mills grinding slowly and fine.

I sat on my stomach cross-legged and, slap!
With a most inconceivable strain,
The Bunker Hill Monument held in my lap,
And then went away on the train.
The goblins rushed out of the forest's dark maw,
My auto went suddenly dead,
The elephant shied and upset his howdah,
And pitched me far out on my head.

My biplane was going like swift moving light,
The witches were hard on my trail;
I surely was getting a terrible fright,
Like O'Shanter of old did bewail.
The ship that was bearing me over the sea
Went under the waves with a roll,
And then 'mid the stress of emotional glee
I went for a nice little stroll.

The ship and the biplane and the mills with their grinding,
The witches and goblins and elephant, too;
The automobile with its headlights so blinding,
All passed o'er my head in a last wild reveiw.
I wake with a yell you could hear past the fences,
And fell from this nightmare out on to the floor;
Then slowly gathered my bewildered senses,
And mince pie at once and for ever forswore.

THAT OLD SWEETHEART OF MINE.

As one who cons at evening o'er an album all alone,
And muses on the faces of the friends that he has known;
So I turn the leaves of fancy, till in shadowy design,
I find the smiling features of an old sweetheart of mine.

The lamplight seems to glimmer with a flicker of surprise,
As I turned it low, to rest me of the dazzling in my eyes,
And light my pipe in silence, save a sigh that seems to yoke
Its fate with my tobacco, and to vanish with the smoke.

'Tis a fragrant retrospection, for the loving thoughts that start
Into being, are like perfumes from the blossom of the heart;
And to dream the old dreams over, is a luxury divine,
When my truant fancies wander with that old sweetheart of mine.

Though I hear beneath my study, like a fluttering of wings,
The voices of my children and the mother as she sings;
I feel no twinge of conscience to deny me any theme,
When care has cast her anchor in the harbour of a dream.

In fact, to speak in earnest, I do believe it adds a charm,
To spice the good a trifle with a little dust of harm—
For I find an extra flavour in memory's mellow wine,
That makes me drink the deeper to that old sweetheart of mine.

Floats out of my tobacco as the genii from the vase;
And I thrill beneath the glances of a pair of azure eyes,
As glowing as the summer and as tender as the skies.

I can see the pink sunbonnet and the little checkered dress
She wore when I first kissed her, and she answered the caress;
With the written declaration that, "As surely as the vine Grew round the stump," she loves me—that old sweetheart of mine.

And again I feel the pressure of her slender little hand,
As we used to talk together of the future we had planned;
When I should be a poet, and with nothing else to do
But write the tender verses that she set the music to.

When we should live together in a cozy little cot,
Hid in a nest of roses, with a fairy garden spot;
Where the vines were never fruited, and the weather ever fine,
And the birds were ever singing for that old sweetheart of mine.

And I should be her lover for ever and a day,
And she my faithful sweetheart till the golden hair was grey;
And we should be so happy, that when either's lips were dumb,
They would not smile in Heaven till the other's kiss had come.

But, ah! my dream is broken by a step upon the stair;
And the door is softly opened, and my wife is standing there;
Yet with eagerness and rapture all my visions I resign,
To greet the living presence of that old sweetheart of mine.

About James Whitcomb Riley.

Mrs. K. C. D., Moberly, Mo., has the following:

James Whitcomb Riley, the author and poet, was born in Greenfield, Ind., in 1853. His father, Reubin A. Riley, was a lawyer. Riley worked first as a sign painter. He afterwards joined a company of strolling actors, for whom he remodelled songs and wrote plays. In 1873 he got a position on the Indianapolis Journal, to which paper his first verses were contributed in 1875. Much of his verse is written in the so-called "Hoosier" dialect, but many of his most beautiful compositions are written in pure English. His first book appeared in 1883 under the pen name of "Benj. F. Johnson of Boone." Its title was "The Old Swimmin' Hole and 'Leven More Poems." He never married. Among his works are: "The Old Swimmin' Hole and 'Leven More Poems," "[illegible] Girl and Other Sketches," "[illegible]," "Old Fashioned Roses," "Pipes o' Pan at Zekesbury," "Rhymes of Childhood," "Flying Islands of the Night," "Green Fields and Running Brooks," "Armazindy," "A Child World," "Neighbourly Poems," "Home Folks," "Poems Here at Home," "Rubaiyat of Doc. Sifers," "The Book of Joyous Children," "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," "Out to Old Aunt Mary's," "A Detective Santa Claus," "While the Heart Beats Young," "Raggedy Man," "Morning," "Home Again With Me," "The Boys of the Old Glee Club," "The Little Orphan Annie Brook," and "Old Schoolday Romances." His home is in Indianapolis, Ind.

BURGLARS? NO, A BURST PIPE

"Come quick, there are burglars in our house," an excited woman on Euclid avenue telephoned to police headquarters at 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

Patrolmen and detectives hastily climbed into the big police motor car and a record run was made. Two men were stationed in the rear of the house and two more in front, while two officers entered the house.

"Listen, they are working in the kitchen," the woman of the house whispered. Sure enough, there was pounding. The detectives cautiously entered. Their flashlights discovered water pouring from a broken pipe and plastering falling to the floor with dull thuds. They waded through water knee deep in the basement and shut off the water.

The Quest of Gentle Hazard

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn.—By H.M.Egbert

A Frustrated Alliance

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman.)

In the bedroom of his apartment on Madison avenue, New York, Lord Richard Jocelyn was struggling into his dress clothes, and his face wore an expression of as much dissatisfaction as he ever permitted to appear there. When he had brushed his hair and settled his white tie he took up a letter from his father, the cause of his distress, and re-read it slowly.

"My dear Richard," wrote the fourth viscount from his home at Stockton, England, "you have now been six months in America and have not succeeded in your quest of a bride who shall restore the much depleted family income to its pristine size before the radical ministries in power had doles for the laboring classes at the expense of the landed gentry. Nor have you displayed any evidence that you are likely to succeed in such an attempt in the near future. And meanwhile the sands of my patience are running out, and, what will discomfort you more, I fear, the allowance that I am making you must shortly cease to its end.

"I have, therefore, Richard, picked out a bride for you. She is Miss May Jerrold, the daughter of the Pittsburg millionaire, who owns a magnificent house in Fifth avenue, New York. The family have recently been visiting England, where I met them. I have entered into a tentative contract with the mother, and you will do your best to bring about an engagement now that they have returned to America. You will be warmly welcomed, and there is little doubt that, if you are not lost to all sense of duty, Doublewith Manor will see a new bride next year."

Upon the table lay a second missive, an engraved card, announcing that Mr. and Mrs. Jerrold requested the pleasure of Lord Jocelyn's company to dinner that evening.

Lord Jocelyn had paid one visit to the Jerrold's and it had not pleasantly impressed the young Englishman. He had found May Jerrold a plain-featured, rather worthy girl, and the father a nonentity, socially speaking, ruled by the mother, a pompous personage, who, in language hardly veiled, had suggested that the exchange of the title for the Jerrold wealth would be in the best interests of both families. As to the wealth, there was no doubt of its existence. Though he had recently been implicated in some rather speculative transactions in Wall street, Jerrold pere was reputed by conservative judges to worth fifty millions.

"I suppose that there's no help for it," Lord Jocelyn sighed. "I've got to get spliced. Tonight I shall warm up to the Jerrold girl, and soon, after a decent interval—two weeks, say—I shall ask her to be my bride."

He struggled into his overcoat and passed out of his apartment and down the stairs. A crawling taxicab loomed up out of the mist. Lord Jocelyn entered, and some twelve minutes later emerged at the threshold of the Jerrold home.

The guests were for the most part already assembled in the drawing room when he entered. Mrs. Jerrold came forward to meet him with affected enthusiasm, and after he had shaken hands with her daughter, introduced him to some of those nearest.

"Prince Von Mitfohlen, I want you to meet Lord Jocelyn," she said.

The prince, a tall, slender young man of military bearing, bowed stiffly and looked at Jocelyn curiously. "A real prince, Lord Jocelyn," whispered Mrs. Jerrold with evident self-satisfaction. "He's in the 'Almanach de Gotha.' Lord Jocelyn—Mr. Henry Doane."

The latter was the antithesis of the prince; a short, round, jovial American of the successful business type, who grasped Jocelyn's hand warmly. A few more introductions were effected, and then the servant announced dinner.

"You are to take my daughter down, Lord Jocelyn," said Mrs. Jerrold; and May Jerrold put her small gloved hand upon his arm and accompanied him down the stairs. The drawing room was at the top of the second flight; at the top of the first was a large conservatory, the entrance guarded by two antique sets of armor, each posed, lance in hand, as though to warn all persons away who had not serious business within. On the ground floor was the dining room, invisibly decorated with pictures of all shapes and sizes, most of which bore the names of old masters and had been skillfully copied for the American purchaser in Brussels.

The dinner passed off quietly, the attention of the guests being concentrated rather on the viands than upon one another. On the other side of Jocelyn's companion sat Prince Mitfohlen, and noticing that he seemed to devote much of his conversation to Miss Jerrold, and that she listened with more enthusiasm than she displayed toward himself, Jocelyn felt disconcerted; he seemed to read a secret understanding in their words and gestures. When the ladies departed, the consciousness that he had in no wise pressed his suit or even created friendly relations was increased by the prince's evident self-satisfaction and the slightly patronising tones in which he addressed the Englishman.

When at length the gentlemen entered the drawing room Mrs. Jerrold, beckoning Lord Jocelyn into a corner, approached the subject in hand in the most direct way possible.

"I understand, Lord Jocelyn," she began, "that a mutual attraction has sprung up between yourself and May."

Lord Jocelyn was too confused to find a suitable answer, but evidently Mrs. Jerrold expected none.

"We were so entranced by your dear father," she continued effusively. "He is such a peerless gentleman, Lord Richard. And before we left he begged that we would find you in New York and take you to our hearts. Yes, those were his very words."

The lady was looking at him with an expression of the utmost and most complacent benevolence.

"And I may tell you, in confidence, Lord Richard," she went on, "that May had more than friendly feelings for you. But she is shy, poor girl, and not quick at expressing herself. Take a mother's word, Lord Richard; go and find her and discover for yourself what sentiments she entertains. I believe," she ended, glancing around her, "that you will find her in the conservatory."

Lord Jocelyn rose obediently. As he left the room he felt his face grow red with shame at the ingenuousness of the trap that had been set for him.

At the bottom of the flight he heard whispers coming from among the palms in the conservatory, and passing between the two armored figures, he suddenly found himself face to face with May Jerrold and Prince von Mitfohlen. So quickly he came upon them that he could have sworn he saw the prince's right arm in peculiar proximity to the lady's waist; but as he drew near both started up with an expression of embarrassment and stood facing him nervously.

May Jerrold broke the silence.

"Have you seen father since dinner?" she asked the prince. "He was crazy to talk with you about buying some hunting dogs. You ought to find him in his library."

The prince took his dismissal with good grace. He bowed to the lady and then to Jocelyn, a slightly supercilious smile hovering upon his lips as he caught the latter's embarrassed glance. Then he was gone, and May Jerrold sat down again and made room for Jocelyn upon the seat beside her.

Jocelyn sat down nervously, mutely in humiliation and shame. How was he to begin? What was he to say? There had never been any but the most formal relations between himself and this young woman. Presently he raised his head and found Miss Jerrold looking into his eyes. There was a peculiar greenish light in hers, at once fascinating and repellent.

"Your mother said that—you would be here," he stammered, "I don't know how to begin to talk to you, Miss Jerrold—I—"

The answer was the most unexpected thing that had ever happened to Jocelyn, for, without a word, the young woman laid her head upon his shoulder and burst into tears. Then, as he began timidly to ask the cause of her distress, finding that she only sobbed more bitterly, he was tempted to place one arm around her and, with the filmy handkerchief she carried in her hand, to wipe away her tears.

Jocelyn had never noticed before how pretty May Jerrold was. Her hair, which had at first appeared to him to be of a plain red, displayed unguessed gleams of gold and bronze under the lamp light; her greenish eyes revealed wonderful depths; her red lips were not five inches from his own. And suddenly Lord Jocelyn realised that he loved her. He bent forward and kissed her lips.

"I love you, May. Do you love me?" he whispered; and, though the question had been asked many times before by many men, it possessed a novelty that positively thrilled him.

"Yes," whispered Miss Jerrold.

"Then you won't cry any more? Why are you crying, dearest?"

"O, it's so shameful," she murmured. "To be bought and sold."

"Sold?" reiterated Lord Jocelyn, his heart thumping tumultuously.

"To you," she murmured, resting comfortably in his arms that now enfolded her. "Did you think I was cold to you, dearest? It was this consciousness that it was all a matter of bargain between you and me."

"Dearest May," answered Jocelyn fervently, "if I had not loved you I should never have—"

"Never have what, Richard?"

"Asked you to be my wife, as I do now," said Jocelyn. "Will you marry me, dearest?"

"Yes," whispered Miss Jerrold, hiding her face in his coat, "But—but you really love me?"

"I loved you from the first moment I saw you," replied Jocelyn, and he meant it sincerely. For his disgust had been completely obliterated in this sudden revulsion of feeling, and he knew only that he loved this wonderful creature with the allaring eyes, and that he had always loved her, even against his own knowledge.

"May, dear, there is one thing I want to ask you about," said Jocelyn presently. "It's about that prince."

"What, Mitfohlen?" asked Miss Jerrold, laughing softly. "You're not jealous of poor Mitfohlen?"

"A little," Jocelyn confessed.

"Poor fellow, I am so sorry for him. Only a short half hour ago he asked me to become his wife. He has been desperately in love with me for months."

"And you refused him?"

"Of course. Didn't I love you?"

What answer was returned—if there was any—is not recorded. But when, half an hour later, Jocelyn conducted Miss Jerrold back to the drawing room, his heart beat loud in triumph and his head swam with his happiness. But he said nothing to Mrs. Jerrold, though he saw her eyes bent upon his own inquiringly. For, before they left the conservatory, May had said:

"Richard, one favor I beg of you. Let us keep it secret until next month. I have my reasons. Do you want to know or will you trust me?"

"I trust you—till the end of time," he answered, raising her hand to his lips.

"Then I shall tell you, Richard," answered his fiancee. "It's because of Prince von Mitfohlen. Poor fellow, I want to break the news first to him, and gently. He will be inconsolable. I fear that he may commit some rash and irreparable act."

Jocelyn was home again. He was seated in his dressing gown, puffing up clouds of smoke out of his favorite meerschaum, but his sheer happiness overwhelmed him. At last he could endure the secret no longer, and rang his bell.

"Talbot," he said, when his middle-aged valet entered, "I am engaged to be married."

"Yes, sir," answered Talbot respectfully.

"Confound you, Talbot, why don't you congratulate me?"

"Which I do, sir, from the bottom of my heart," Talbot replied, laying his hand upon the region of his stomach. "When is it to be, sir?"

"I don't know, Talbot—next month, perhaps. Then we shall return to England."

"Yes, sir. Will you wear your black boots or your tan ones tomorrow, sir?"

"Get out," cried Jocelyn, throwing a pillow at his servant's head, which Talbot dodged nimbly. "Unfeeling beggar," he muttered, as the man withdrew; "he doesn't believe me. But this time it's real. O, Dick Jocelyn, if ever you knew what love meant you know it now."

And he went to bed and dreamed all night long of May Jerrold.

In the morning he received a letter from his fiancee.

"We are to give a little impromptu dinner on Thursday week," she wrote. "Will you join us? Prince von Mitfohlen and Mr. Doane—you met him?—will be here, and I shall then try to break the news to the prince as gently as possible. So if you see us alone together you mustn't be jealous, dearest, and you must not follow us."

There was a postscript. "You must not come till then. Mother must not suspect. She cannot keep a secret, and if she even guessed the prince would learn of it and perhaps shoot himself."

That was the hardest week of self-restraint that Jocelyn had ever spent. A dozen times a day he fought against his impulse to rush around to his fiancee's house, and he could never leave his apartment but his feet bore him in her direction. But at last the night of the dinner arrived. When Jocelyn was shown into the drawing room he was surprised to find nearly as many people assembled as on the last occasion, and, notable among them, Prince von Mitfohlen, who greeted him with a calm patronage which showed only too clearly that he little anticipated the blow that was in store for him. May Jerrold was radiant, and there was the mother-in-law smile twinkling upon Mrs. Jerrold's mouth as she shook hands with him.

"Welcome, dear Lord Jocelyn," she said, beaming on him.

"Why have you not called on us this whole week? I have a dreadful punishment in store for you. Can you guess what? I am going to let you take me into dinner."

"Dinner is served, madame," announced the butler at the door. Mrs. Jerrold placed her hand upon Lord Jocelyn's sleeve and he led her down the stairs. Half way down he heard May's voice whisper behind him. He turned, to see his fiancee following upon the arm of Prince von Mitfohlen, who met his gaze with an insolent, supercilious stare. Lord Jocelyn chuckled to himself; he could not find it in his heart to harbor resentful feelings toward this young man who was to receive so staggering a blow so soon. May had certainly arranged her plans with ingenuity.

But after dinner he was disillusioned, for the party resolved itself into a series of bridge games, in which both May and the prince participated. And this diversion lasted during the entire evening, so that, when at last the guests arose to go, Jocelyn was chafing with rage. The destined interview between his fiancee and the prince had not occurred, nor had he had a chance to speak with May during the entire evening.

And he must speak with her. The thought of departing without any further understanding was intolerable to him. As the guests moved, laughing and chatting, toward the door, a daring plan flashed through his mind.

The back door of the conservatory opened upon the court-yard in the rear of the house, through which he could find his way to a side entrance and emerge upon the street. Why should he not conceal himself somewhere till all the guests were gone, waylay his fiancee and snatch a hasty parting, then leaving her in the method indicated so as not to alarm the house? And what so good a hiding place as within one of the suits of armor at the conservatory entrance?

Jocelyn lived by impulse, and no sooner had the idea come to him than he proceeded to adopt it. Bidding farewell to Mrs. Jerrold in the drawing room, he proceeded to the bottom of the flight. Then, hastily raising the breastpiece of one of the armored figures, he crept into the hollow within. The refuge served his purpose effectively. He waited till he heard the last carriage roll away, and then—

They approached the conservatory together and halted at the entrance, under one of the palms. And, staring incredulously through the lowered visor of the armor, Lord Jocelyn saw Doane's arms embracing his fiancee, saw her arms fold themselves round his neck and saw them kiss.

Every word of their conversation was distinctly audible.

"So you've definitely taken the English jay, Maisie?" asked Doane. "You've said good-bye to the Dutchman?"

May Jerrold nodded.

"Say, Maisie, is it all fixed?" asked Doane, pleadingly. "Isn't there one tiny chance for Henry? Don't you love me, dear?"

"Of course I do, Harry, but what good'll that do? We couldn't live on a dollar a day."

"Why, that guy from England hasn't much more to [illegible]"

"He has an allowance from his father, and the estates are pretty nearly fifty thousand acres, Harry. They must be worth something."

"But, listen, Maisie, you won't be happy with him, will you? You don't love him?"

"Do you think so?" May Jerrold inquired, kissing him. "Does this look like it?"

"Then what the dickens—"

"See here, Harry, we've got to be sensible. Father won't stand for you and that's all there is to it. He says I've got to get a title and a fortune both, or he'll known the reason why. First, there was the prince, and I thought he was all right until father discovered his family haven't a red cent to their names. They're just a lot of cheap skates making a splurge. So then we looked up the Jocelyns carefully. They aren't rich, Harry, but the estates are not entailed. And once I get my fingers into their money-bags—why, dear, I'll square those debts that have been worrying you. And then—"

"Well, what?"

May Jerrold burst into tears. "Don't think me horribly mercenary, Harry," she sobbed, "but don't you know, father's lost every penny in the Northwestern bank?"

"It's true, then?" cried Doane.

"Every penny, and he's got to go to work again and make another fortune. Harry, we're living on borrowed money now. And I've got to have somebody who can support me as I've been accustomed to. Harry, I must marry Jocelyn. There isn't any way out."

"And afterward?" said Doane huskily.

May Jerrold looked up at him and, though she did not speak, there was a world of meaning in her eyes, for Doane laughed and, bending down, kissed her.

Then Lord Jocelyn stepped out of the suit of armor. His face was ghastly white and there were deep furrows under his eyes, but he carried himself with a composure of his caste. May Jerrold started back and with a low cry collapsed into Doane's arms.

"I'm sorry," said Jocelyn simply. "I fear that I have made a great mistake. I do not know how I can ever forgive myself for having forced this lady into an engagement when all her inclinations were so clearly set elsewhere. Have you anything to say to me, sir?"

Henry Doane's face wrinkled with mirth.

"You're a good sport, Jocelyn," he said. "'All's fair in love and war,'—you've heard that said before, I fancy? I hope you bear no malice."

"Not the least in the world," said Jocelyn heartily. "And now, if you will permit me to pass—"

"One moment, please," said a voice between them. Both started round—to see Prince Von Mitfohlen standing at the foot of the second flight of stairs.

"I fear I, too, have involuntarily played eavesdropper," he said. "Permit me to congratulate you, Mr. Doane, upon having won a very charming and diplomatic wife. I bid you good-night, sir."

Doane moved aside and Jocelyn and the prince passed out through the conservatory together and into the street. At the entrance Jocelyn paused and held out his hand which the prince grasped warmly.

"Where were you?" Jocelyn asked.

"In the other suit of armor," answered the prince. "Goodnight, and better luck to both of us."

"Talbot," said Jocelyn, as he entered his apartment, "I have changed my mind. I am not going to be married after all."

"Yes, sir," replied his servant respectfully.

"Congratulate me, Talbot."

"Indeed I do, sir, from the bottom of my heart, sir. Which, if I might make so bold, Lord Richard, there ain't no young woman as I've seen yet as measures up to what you might expect in the way of matrimony, sir."

"Hold your tongue, Talbot. I say, Talbot, do you know what gives me the keenest satisfaction that this affair is broken off?"

"Which I do not, sir," Talbot replied.

"I'd hate to think what my father would have said when he found out that father-in-law had gone busted. That's all. Leave my slippers under the radiator. Good-night, Talbot."

IGOROTS ARE GOOD WORKERS

Native Carpenters and Stone Masons Help Build Church at Bontoc.

Bontoc in particular and the Igorot country in general will soon have its first permanent Christian church, for the building planned by the Belgian missionary fathers is nearing completion, according to advices brought by Father Sepulchre, a member of the mission.

The new church is a substantial stone structure and will cost 30,000 pesos. It is notable for the fact that Igorot mechanics have participated in the work of construction as carpenters, masons, plumbers.

Four years ago Rev. Father Jurgens began the building, since when—with the assistance of Father Sepulchre, four Belgian sisters and one brother as a teaching staff—a remarkable record has been made among the Igorots, who are described by the fathers as very industrious and docile.

Some 250 Igorot boys and girls have been instructed in the ordinary school grades and additional instruction has been given in industrial work. Thus there are in Bontoc some seventy artisans, practical shoemakers, horseshoers and the like who owe their training to the fathers.

The girls are instructed by the sisters in domestic sciences, cooking, dressmaking, lacemaking, weaving and the school today numbers thirty-eight of these students. The latest addition to the curriculum is agriculture, and this has had a very marked effect on the prosperity of the neighborhood.—Manila Times.

Bearded "Ladies."

M. Brandt, a Danish professor, comes to the conclusion that bearded ladies in time to come will be the order of the day. Ladies with beards who are now to be seen may be regarded as the precursors of the future race, and the professor comes to the conclusion that the more masculine woman becomes in her habits so much the more will she be in appearance. He does not think that bearded ladies will become general until at least two centuries have elapsed. His investigations show that the number of women with traces of mustaches, although clearly visible, increases but slowly. The Paris contemporary from which we take the foregoing suggests that the professor has missed the great point which he might have made and that is that as the number of men who shave increases daily it would follow that women would endeavor to grow beards from sheer perversity.

That Explains.

"I have a dog and a hen which are fast friends. Isn't that queer?"

"I don't think so—merely natural affinity."

"In what way?"

"I believe your hen and your dog are both setters."

PICK ODD NOOKS FOR NESTS

Swallows Are Cunning Builders But Sometimes Select Precarious Sites for Homes.

Swallows are diligent and cunning builders of nests, but they are not always wise in their choice of a locality. In proof of this a couple of birds last year chose a secluded corner among the rafters of my barn and managed to hatch and rear their young successfully.

This year a couple, probably the same, repaired the nest and laid their eggs. But one morning both birds were found lying dead on the floor, the windows having been closed and the door locked by a too careful servant. A favorite place for a swallow to build its nest is the upper corner of a window.

This situation is to say the least precarious, as an energetic housemaid has merely inadvertently or otherwise to draw down the sash and the nest is at once in ruins. I remember once quite unintentionally acting the part of the energetic housemaid. I drew down the sash and managed just in time to save the structure from falling to pieces.

Supporting it with my hands, I told one of my boys to bring his schoolbag, and having fastened it securely to the window, deposited therein the remains of the nest and the young family of birds.

The parents were shy at first, but on closer investigation, having satisfied themselves that their little ones were still alive, they accommodated themselves to the situation and brought up their family in the usual way, sending them at length into the world doubtless all the wiser for their nurture in this abode of learning. A similar misfortune happened this summer to a swallow's nest in the window of a cottage in the Cheviot hills.

This time the nest was almost totally destroyed, but help came from a probably unlooked-for quarter. The dismayed cries of the feathered builders attracted their companions, who flocked around in large number and rendered every assistance in repairing the damage.—The Spectator.

Are Fishes Mirrors?

A scientist says he always fancied little fish were protected against the mouths of the big fish chiefly by their markings looking like the stones and reeds in the water, but he now concludes that all shining, silvery fish are mirrors, reflecting the dark bottom of the pond, and it is only when such fish come to the surface that the light shines on them, and they become visible to the big fish that they prey on little fish. So long as the little, silvery fish stay close to the bottom they look like mud and stones, only showing their shining silver when they come near the top and so are soon swallowed down.

Where the Trouble Lay.

"James," said his mother, "you eat and eat, and never seem satisfied. Here is one more helping of pudding, but it must be the last."

James started on the pudding with delight.

"Once upon a time, James," went on his mother, "there was a little boy who ate and ate until one day he ate too much pudding, and he burst."

"There ain't such a thing as too much pudding!" granted Jimmy, as he finished his helping.

"There must be," said the mother, "or why did the little boy burst?"

"Not enough boy!" replied James, and handed up his plate for a fifth helping.

Her Mind Relieved.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "what is a jackpot?"

"Why—er—a jackpot is a general contribution for purposes of charitable donation."

"Oh! Do you know I was afraid it had something to do with the wicked game of politics!"

KIT'S COLUMN

(Copyrighted)

Le Galienne says Mrs. Grundy is on her deathbed. Rosa, Maeterlinck and Mr. Bernard Shaw are responsible. But I think the larger credit for this happy event should go to Nietsche. Too long has old Dame Grundy hoodwinked the world. Yet I doubt her death. That she has been evicted from many a wise community is certain, but she still rules the roost in smaller places, and in big towns that yet cling to provincialism. Broadly speaking, Mrs. Grundy means your neighbour and mine; not, of course, absolutely in the sense of those persons who live in the next house to you, or in the same street, but your neighbour in the town at large; in the store, the church, the "at-home," and the theatre, as well as across the way. It is this neighbour you are afraid of when you speak of Mrs. Grundy. The neighbour who will not permit you to live your own life; who watches from behind her window blind the comings and goings at your house; who notes that you seldom or ever appear in church, or if you do make a regular appearance who notes that your bonnet is last year's made over, or this season's, and too young for your head. It was Mrs. Grundy being so shocked at the beer-waggon driving up to the minister's front door, and delivering its goods in the very ball of the public eye, so to speak, that made that good man evolve in his simple mind, a laundry basket coming in at the back door instead. Moreover, the laundry basket held more beer. For a cleric to "lave" his thirst in a cool glass of iced lager on a hot day, is, be it known to you, a greater shock to Mrs. Grundy's feelings than if every member of his flock did the same. Mrs. G— keeps a sharpened eye on churchmen. They must take their pleasures sadly or submit to be unmasked by that vigilant dame. Next to clerics, women are the victims of her jealous eye. She will read "The Song of Solomon" (Sudermann's version, not the Bible's), in her own room, dividing her delight with a box of bon-bons, and shudder if you mention having read a review of Jennie Gerhardt. Upon the sister who has "tripped in her time," she will cheerfully cast the heaviest stone, while smiling at the same moment with indulgent sweetness on the man in the case. Fallen sister can lie in the mud, and even be kicked deeper into it. She deserves all the misery that must surely comes to her, but—if he be wealthy enough, the man is permitted to lead to the altar the young daughter of Mrs. G—, the pure, virginal little girl whose bitterest woe it will be one day to find out that she has married a blackguard.

This is the old woman that dear, romantic Mr. Le Galienne tells us lies a-dying. What wonder that he adds the very church bells would ring of themselves in joy over such an event as the decease of this shocking old character; that the birds would sing wildly and a vast sigh of relief be breathed from land to land for the lifting of this ineffable burden from the shoulders of the world. And, while we know very well that Mrs. Grundy is one of the immortals, and can never die, we agree with Mr. Le Galienne that from many a modern community the old lady has been ejected. A good many of us have learned a little sense, and no longer ask in fear "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" when we want to live our lives, after our own fashion, instead of in hypocrisy and discomfort, according to the standards of others. If my neighbour finds God nearer to him in the church than on the hills, or in the lonely woods, he is welcome to go there, and in his turn he can permit us to find our "religion" in nature without offering any comment. What would shock persons of narrow boundaries, and no horizons need not shock you. And if it did, you would be better employed minding your own business than that of your neighbour. As the writer puts it—the approval of one's neighbours has never yet paid a man's bills. And to pay our bills is the main object in the lives of most of us. The true sins of humanity are not, after all, the peccadillos cried out upon by our neighbours. To help every lame dog over the stile is to get closer to Christ's teaching than to spend hours on your knees in prayer, since such an act is one of living prayer. To keep a warm heart, a wide hand, a kindly outlook, a merry soul—this is to live as we were meant to live, not peeping behind the blind to see something our narrow souls would call a sin, not to wag a bitter tongue over the ways of our neighbour; not to let envy and jealousy bite their acid way into our souls. Each one of us can put Mrs. Grundy on the outside of the door, and believe me, if you do, you will be the happier for it.

This dog hunting business is getting to be a public brutality which in a day can undo the teaching in the schools of kindness to animals, and the work of all the Humane Societies put together. It is time that some voice be raised in disprecation of this campaign of destruction carried on in the public streets. Not long since a paper in an Ontario town referred jokingly to this matter of shooting down stray dogs. Speaking of a certain "crack shot" who is beginning to "complain about the supply not equalling the demand," it goes on to remark that the "hunters say there is not much sport in shooting a tied animal," and continuing, opines that it has been proposed as soon as warmer weather brings the dogs out again that "a rig and driver be provided for the dog hunter. Drives will be taken about the city, the hunter armed to the teeth, no stops made, and all dogs running at large will be popped off, while both occupants of the rig will enjoy the drive."

One can only hope that this was written in some spirit of mockery. However, that a lady takes it more seriously the following from a resident of the town in question will show:

"Dear Kit,—Like many others, I was shocked and surprised that a paper like the ——— ———, supposed to be educative, should allow in its columns the flippant article entitled "Shooting Goes On." Surely there are other ways of entertaining our brave policemen than to allow them to drive around the city 'armed to the teeth,' as the account cleverly remarks, after dogs which they prefer to shoot on the run.' Of what avail is the teaching of kindness to animals in our schools and the work of the Humane Society, if such articles are to be published? If for no other reason than to keep the idea of consideration for our four-footed friends before the children, would it not answer every purpose to say nothing of the shooting of a dog, or, if it must be 'written up,' couched in less objectionable terms? Thanking you for space, yours,

"A FRIEND OF ANIMALS."

This is a more serious matter than it looks to you who may be indifferent to the status of the horse, the cat, or the dog. You may, in a certain insolence of attitude which is only adopted by humanity, think such humble creatures beneath your notice one way or the other. There are multitudes of humans who never give a thought to any worlds but their own. And if you have not had the Open Sesame to such a world, if you have never known the quiet solace of a good dog's friendship it will be of little use for the writer to make a plea on behalf of what a small child of mine used to call "God's little beasts." The gravity of the question lies in its relation to humanity. We cannot afford to let cruelty exist because we were born cruel, and because it is one of the most horrible of all our evil passions. Cruelty is a natural attribute. Every child is cruel. Cruelty has to be trained out of us, or rather, kindness to animals has to be trained into us. Don't we all know how often we came to the rescue of the puppy or the kitten which was being pulled this way or that? And how many of us have caught strange boys torturing dumb creatures—frogs or turtles, or anything small that had a feeble kick in it, and cuffed them soundly for it. I know I have. The last chap I caught was in a London square where he had pushed a cat through some railings, and frightened at its screechings, was trying to extricate it by dragging its tail off. No, we are not born kind. We have to be taught decency towards our four-footed companions on the journey through life.

It is of no use to become hysterical or even emotional over this subject. People generally laugh when a woman grows what they call "sentimental" over a dumb friend. I know as well as another that kindness towards animals has been overdone by silly women who affect to put them in the place of the children, who dress and bejewel dogs until one is ashamed for the poor unprotesting animals. Women have done the dumb world untold injury in this way, but there is such a thing as decent treatment for the animals who live among us, for the horse which does our carrying, the dog who gives such wealth of gratitude in return for a pat on the head, the cat who purrs upon the hearth, and there is such a thing as danger to human beings when these animals go wrong. But to make a shambles of the streets, to shoot down indiscriminately every dog that in his short day is permitted to run loose, and do it in the presence of the children is not a decent, orderly thing to do. Far better that a general order be promulgated that every dog in Canada be destroyed by means of the lethal chamber. Were such an order sounded I would be one of the first to lead my two chaps to their fate rather than leave them to the mercy of the poisoner, and the public dog catcher. If we must put our friends away let it be decently done.

And while on the subject I would like to offer here, for the benefit of those who are only too apt to dismiss the matter of kindliness—if not of friendship between man and beast what the great writer Gilbert K. Chesterton has to say in regard to the faithful—and unfailing—Friend of Man:

He lies in front of me curled up before the fire, as so many dogs must have lain before so many fires. I sit on one side of that hearth as so many men must have sat by so many hearths. Somehow, this creature has completed my manhood; somehow, I cannot explain why, a man ought to have a dog. A man ought to have six legs; those other four legs are part of him. Our alliance is older than any of the passing and priggish explanations that are offered of either of us; before evolution was, we were. You can find it written in a book that I am a mere survival of a squabble of anthropoid apes, and perhaps I am. I am sure I have no objection. But my dog knows I am a man, and you will get find the meaning of that word written in any book as clearly as it is written in his soul.

And with this last, best word I leave the subject.

SHOE ODDITIES

When a one-legged man buys a shoe, the dealer sends to the factory for a shoe to match the one remaining. In these days the use of machinery in every process of their manufacture, shoes are made with the utmost exactness and precision, and it is easily possible to make that remaining shoe with the greatest nicety in size, material and finish.

Few people have feet exactly alike; commonly the left foot is larger than the right, so that one shoe may fit a little more snugly than the other. Generally, however, people buy shoes in regularly matched pairs, the difference in their feet, if it is noticeable to them at all, not being enough to make any other course desirable.

But there are people who buy shoes of different sizes and widths, in which case the dealer breaks two pairs for them, giving them, to fit their feet, one shoe for each. In such cases the dealer matches up the two remaining shoes, one from each of two pairs, just as he would where he had broken one pair to sell one shoe to a one-legged man.

But a man doesn't have to be one-legged or to have feet of uneven sizes or shapes to make him ask the dealer to break a pair of shoes for him. Here was a man with two perfectly good feet who came into the store where he was acustomed to buy and who wanted on this occasion one shoe. Travelling in a sleeping car, his shoes had been mixed up with others and he had got back one of his own and one of some other man's, a fact which he had not discovered until he was too far away from train and station to make return and setting things right possible; and now he came in to buy one shoe to match his own.—New York Sun.

SOUNDS AFFECT THE BLIND

The ticking of a clock seems to be a source of great comfort to all blind persons. There is an old man in this city who has been blind for many years. When asked what sound was most pleasing to his ears, he answered promptly, "The ticking of my clock. It is a large 8-day clock which hangs in the hall and I can hear it all over the house. Whenever that clock stops from any cause I feel like a child lost in the woods."

In the school for the blind in Kansas City, Kan., the majority of the pupils questioned stated that the ticking of a clock held a special fascination for them.

One teacher said she always kept a small clock going on her desk. Whenever she forgets to wind the clock, or books and papers happen to get piled up around it in such a way that the pupils cannot hear it, a feeling of general unrest is noticeable among them and they invariably ask her to start the clock. "They all like music," said the superintendent, "and some of the boys have perfect pitch."

One little boy could think of nothing that gave him greater pleasure than to hear the noise made by an approaching train, though he had never seen one. Another's favourite sound is the chirping of a cricket, while still another said that he got most fun from listening to water boiling in a teakettle.

A little girl said that the patter of rain against the window was her favourite sound, only it always made her sleepy.

From the following, however, it is evident that even the veil of eternal darkness cannot down the humourist. When the question as to what was his favourite sound was put to a serious looking boy of 14, he answered, "Why, the sound of the dinner bell, of course."

A MEAN COMPARISON

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer)

"John Henry, there is about a half bushel of dirt and ashes to take out of the cellar. I want it done right away."

"Hang it all, can't you let me alone for a minute, Mariar? That job 'll take half a day."

"John Henry. I'm surprised at you. A little job like that! Do you know that there are 30,669,715 cubic yards of dirt still to be excavated at Panama?"

"Aw, gimme the shovel."

TANNING DEER SKIN

I want to know how to tan deer skin for gloves.—M. K., Taft, Fla.

For tanning and dressing deer skins for gloves, etc., Doctor Chase's book gives the following: For each skin take a bucket of water and put into it one quart of lime; let the skin or skins lie in this from three to four days, then rinse in clear water, hair and grain (remove fat and flesh from grain side), then soak them in cold water to get out the glue. Now scour or pound in good soapsuds; after which take vitriol, alum and salt, one tablespoonful of each to a skin, these will be dissolved in sufficient water to cover the skin; let remain in this for twenty-four hours. Wring out as dry as convenient and spread on with a brush half a pint of currier's oil and hang in the sun bout two days; after which you will scour out the oil with soapsuds and hang out again until perfectly dry; then pull and work them until they are soft; and if a reasonable time does not make them soft scour out again in suds until complete. The oil may be saved by pouring or taking it from the top of the suds, if left standing a short time. The buff colour is given by spreading yellow ochre evenly over the skin, when finished, rubbing it in well with a brush.

BLASTING THE FAITH OF THE COMMON PEOPLE

Writer Shows How in the Country Districts the Higher Critic is Filling the Pulpit to the Detriment of True Faith

Some years ago the writer sat in the study of a certain Baptist minister in a large city, and during conversation he was astonished to hear this pastor avow his disbelief in the inerrancy of Christ; and further astonished to hear him state that "Paul's code of morals would not be tolerated in one day." Other portions of the Scriptures were in like manner assailed in the conversation. As this man had been one of those who sat on the council to decide the fitness of the writer to become a minister of the Gospel, our readers will enter into something of his horror at such an avowal. In concluding the interview I said, "Well, B——, do you mean to tell me that you are preaching these things in your church?" "No," he replied, "my people are not yet ripe for it, but I am educating them up to it."

A little later on a friend of ours, visiting a city not far from his place, listened to a similar declaration by a Methodist minister, who in like manner stated that he did not air his views in the pulpit. My friend questioned the honesty of such a position, when this minister replied, "If we were to tell the people what we believe to-day, they would put us out of the church. But just wait a few years; we are fast getting a majority in the ministry who share our views, and when that day comes, when we hold the balance of power, then the people will know what we believe."

WERE GOSPEL HUNGRY.

Still another case. A very dear friend of the writer, who, while a layman, is exceptionally well versed in the Scriptures, and well read in the evidences of Christianity, was visiting a certain town in the eastern part of this province on business. Finding that it was prayer meeting night, after arranging for his room at the hotel, he proceeded to the Presbyterian Church to enjoy the fellowship of kindred spirits. After opening the meeting in a perfunctory way, the minister commenced to give the address, during which he took occasion to set forth the destructive views of the higher critic regarding the life of Christ, telling of the time when His narrow Jewish views circumscribed His vision, and how gradually, under the force of circumstances, He came to take a wider view. He preached an imperfect, errant, and merely human Christ—a good man with narrow views because of His environment, etc., etc. My friend sat until the conclusion of the address, and observing that there was little likelihood of the spirit of testimony or prayer under such a ministry, immediately arose and said, "Excuse me, I am a stranger in this town. I should like to say a word. I thought I was coming to a Presbyterian Church, but I fear I must have made a great mistake. I fear it must be a Unitarian." And then simply but firmly he set forth from the Scriptures the vital doctrines of Christianity, which had been assailed in the previous address, and then sat down. The preacher closed the meeting abruptly, and came toward my friend, asking his name, which was readily given, and my friend said, "I suppose you think I have done a very bold thing in speaking so; but I think you are doing a very bold thing in coming into a church with an orthodox standard of faith, and setting forth the things which you know are contrary to those standards, while you take your salary from the people who are not able to controvert you. I think, sir, you are doing a very bold thing. If I held your views I should get outside of the church." It is to be noted that after the interview a goodly number of the members of the church flocked around my friend, thanking him for his words, stating that they deplored the conditions existing, and were hungry for the true word of the Gospel.

BECAME AN AVOWED INFIDEL.

We cite these three incidents taken from three denominations to show that in every direction the great apostasy is spreading, and these men, and others like them, have at last reached the place where their voice is being heard, and they are now boldly proclaiming the things which formerly they inculcated by stealth. It has ceased to be a matter of heresy affecting a single professor in a university. It has become at last difficult to find the Seminary that is not tainted. It used to be only a solitary preacher seeking notoriety that advocated these false views in some city church, but now alas in the country districts the higher critic is filling the pulpit, and on every hand the faith of the common people is being blasted. Last month Mr. Henderson, missionary to the lumber and construction camps, reported meeting one who was formerly a professing Christian and active in work, but who, through accepting the teaching of R. J. Campbell, the destructive critic, had become an avowed infidel. Among our own acquaintances we have those ranging from the one whose shaken faith is only manifest in the loss of love and zeal and fervency in the church which he still attends, right on through to those who are to-day Unitarians, and others openly agnostic—to those who have given up all the outward form as well as the inward life. Surely it is time that the faithful watchmen on every hand should sound the alarm! Can we be true and not raise our voices against the spread of the higher criticism that is working such destruction on every hand? Because the professors and preachers are finely garbed and cultured, and moral life circumspect, must we be silent while the whole influence of that position is being used to undermine the faith of the common people? We feel the time has come when every Christian should be emphatic in his testimony, and use his influence to stem this tide of unbelief.

MINOR COSTUME DETAILS.

For morning wear the skirt should touch all the way around and have a little dip in the back or not, as the wearer desires. If she is quite short, the dip will be an improvement.

The high neck will probably be favoured, but this does not mean that the finish at the top should not be pretty. There are many who find the transparent neck too cold, but if a small yoke or chemisette is backed with chiffon and lined with a piece of fine albatross, one may be fashionable without any discomfort. For instance, in making a chiffon yoke, if the material is first shirred in little pin tucks and backed as suggested, the result will be very soft about the face, also sufficiently warm.

In using up Spanish lace for yokes, two thicknesses of chiffon and one of thin China silk will be about the right thing, because this weave of lace gives quite a little warmth of itself.

The V shape chemisette is generally the most becoming, though when the chin is pointed the square yoke will be the better choice. Needless to say, the cushion of a chin should not be emphasized by placing a round yoke below it. The V shape should be chosen, and in this way modify the lavishness of nature. The round yoke is youthful looking to those who feel they can wear it, and should do so because it is one's duty to keep up good looks as long as possible.

These are all small details, I know, but important ones also.

Many women carry the dress material quite up to the throat and bear with the ugliness of such an arrangement because the dressmaker insisted upon a transparency there as the only alternative.

Elderly women will welcome the return to long sleeves. They are not only more comfortable for this class, but also more becoming. The flaring cuff is a pretty fashion, but if found too cold, a facing of fine flannel sewn in and then covered with a lace frill will keep the wrist warm.

A tall, slender figure should choose sleeves for her house frocks on the picturesque order, as a series of puffs or the slashed sleeve, regardless of present fashion.

The plump little woman may have pretty, becoming sleeves by shirring them lengthwise on cords or tucking.

The return of the dainty fichu is another point in favour of the pretty house frock, and as it comes in all shapes and materials the choice of something suitable is not a difficult one.

The black house dress is a mistake. Colours are far kinder to women no longer young. Soft old rose is lovely when the locks are silvery, and so are grey, old blue, wistaria, and the rich wine shades.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Miss Emma Read, Laskay, Ont., writes:—"I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"I had been given up to die by three of our best doctors,

I could not stand it to be on my feet and I was so swelled in the abdomen I could hardly breathe.

But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine I am able to be about the streets, a walking advertisement of the curative qualities of your remedies, although I am 70 years old."

JOHN R. COCHRAN,
Lewistown, Ill.

Better than any statement we could make regarding the value of

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

are these words of Mr. Cochran. He speaks from experience, the highest possible source of knowledge. If you have any of the signs of a weak heart, such as pain in left shoulder or arm, fainting and hungry spells, shortness of breath, smothering spells, fluttering or palpitation of the heart, you need which for over twenty years has been recognized as the best preparation of its kind to be had.

Sold under a guarantee assuring the return of the price of the first bottle if it fails to benefit. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

(Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Jesus the Healer.—Mark i., 29-45; Matt. iv., 23-25.

1. Verses 29-31—If this sickness of Peter's wife's mother had been that of any other woman would Jesus have been equally interested?

2. What benefit is it to us to tell God when our loved ones are sick?

3. Verses 32-39—Is there any reason to expect that God, in these days, will heal our sick in any way resembling the manner in which Jesus healed sick people?

4. How do you account for the fact that the devils all seemed to know Jesus?

5. Verse 35—Why was it necessary for Jesus to get up a great while before day and, in a solitary place, engage in protracted prayer?

6. To what extent is it duty or privilege for every Christian to follow the example of Jesus in the matter of protracted private prayer?

7. Would you say that Jesus had certain set times for prayer, or did he pray only when he felt the need, and which method ought we to adopt?

8. Verses 36-37—Did Simon and the rest of them do well to disturb Jesus in his private prayer, or should they have waited until his return? Give your reasons.

9. Verse 38—What is the difference between the mission of Jesus and that of any one of his true followers?

10. Verse 39—Should a man with a special message confine his work to one church or to one town? Give your reasons.

11. Verses 40-42—If Jesus were preaching in the flesh to-day would he pay the same attention to the cure of physical diseases as he did in that day or would he refer them to the physicians and surgeons?

12. In view of the progress of medical science and the marvellous feats of surgery would you say that God's present plan for the cure of sickness is by these scientific methods? Give your reasons.

13. If it is God's plan now to cure sickness by human methods, why did Jesus in his day cure people miraculously?

14. Christ in that day was moved with compassion by individual cases of sickness and cured them miraculously. Why does he not do the same thing when appealed to to-day?

15. Verses 43-44—Which is the greater sin, and why, to tell a thing when God tells us not to do so or not to tell what he bids us make known?

16. Matt. iv., 23-25—Is it a lack of faith on the part of preachers to-day that they cannot cure physical diseases, or is it because God wants to cure them through medical science? Why?

17. What is God's attitude toward those who teach that it is His will now to cure disease, in answer to prayer?

Lesson for Sunday, 17th March, 1912—The Paralytic Forgiven and Healed.—Mark ii., 1-12.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

If you would like to have answered any particular question each or any week from "The Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson" by Rev. Dr. Linscott, send in your request to this office, giving the date of the lesson and the number of the question you wish answered. You may select any question except the one indicated that it may be answered in writing by members of the club. Dr. Linscott will answer the questions either in these columns or by mail through this office. Don't forget to state what benefit these "Suggestive Questions" are to you. Give your full name and address. Send your letters to The Question Editor of the Examiner.

TIT-BITS

BREAKERS AHEAD

The dear old lady was chatting amiably with the innocent little elevator boy, as the elevator rattled upwards.

"Don't you find this work monotonous?," she asked.

"Oh, no, mum," came the reply, brightly. "Sometimes it's quite exciting. Only yesterday a man started to get out too soon and got his head cracked, and everybody 'cept me was nearly killed. An' now this 'ere rope looks sort o' weak. I shouldn't wonder if it broke any time. And the engineer's away sick to-day, an' a hamatoor's on his job—an' that makes things interestin'."

SAYING THE RIGHT THING

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer)

"I don't seem to be able to say the right thing to women," a bashful young man confided to us the other day, "and that's why I don't shine in society. I'll tell you an instance of it. Not long ago, I met a woman I hadn't seen for years, and I could see that she was trying to keep young. So I thought I'd say a graceful thing to her.

"'You carry your age remarkably well,' says I.

"Well, the moment I said it I could see that I was in wrong. She was looking chilly and getting red, so I said:

"'Don't mind my little jokes—I never mean what I say. As a matter of fact, you don't carry your age a bit well.'

"And then she killed me with a haughty look and sailed away without saying good-bye. Say, how should I have put it?"

TROUBLES OF AN INVALID

(From the Wasp)

The physician had taken his patient's pulse and temperature, and proceeded to the usual questions.

"It—er—seems," said he, regarding the unfortunate with scientific [illegible] "that you have [illegible] and the chills appear on alternate days. Do you think—is it your opinion—that they have, so to speak, decreased in violence, if I may use that word?"

The patient smiled feebly. "Doc," said he, "on fewer days my head's so hot I can't think, and on ague days I shake so I can't hold an opinion."

WHY HE WORRIED

From the Woman's Home Companion

Skinner—I wonder why Whistler feels so bad about the dwindling birth-rate in France.

Shadler—He's an exporter of go-carts.

PAY AS YOU ENTER

(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

A young man wearing flashy clothes walked into the Planters' Hotel, and with a flourish of the pen registered as "Ira M. Smart, Smartville, Texas." He asked to be assigned to a $5 room.

"I pay as I go," he said rather boastfully.

"I regret, Mr. Smart," retorted Chief Clerk Booneville, "that it is a rule of this house that guests without baggage must pay as they come."

A FASHIONABLE MAID

(From the Detroit Free Press)

"I had to let that new maid go. I discovered that she was neglecting the children when I was attending my club meetings?"

"That so?"

"Yes. Positively, she couldn't think less of them if they were her own."

TWISTED

From the Boston Evening Transcript)

Hicks—I hear that Brown's speech at the club dinner last night was quite funny.

Wicks—The opening sentence was—very! He rose and said: "While I was sitting on my thought a chair struck me." Everybody roared.

WORTH KNOWING

(From the Newark News)

If the oven is generally so hot as to burn a cake on the bottom, put more than a single layer of paper in the bottom of the pan.

Cream and eggs will beat much more quickly if they are very cold. A pinch of salt, too, aids the process.

A delicious stuffing for roast pig or the boned fresh ham is made of celery and apples.

When next making chicken salad try adding a little of the jellied chicken stock to the mayonnaise dressing.

A little salt added to the water in the outer utensil of the double boiler will aid materially in the cooking.

An old coverlet or blanket over the spring, underneath the mattress, will add much warmth to the bed in winter.

A woman who washes silk hosiery in cold water says that the stockings wear longer than if warm water is used for washing.

HUSH! AN IDEA

(From the Dallas News)

The teacher had the letters c-a-t on the blackboard and was trying to teach little Pansy Peavish to pronounce the word; but Pansy couldn't come it. "Think," said teacher, "what is it that has some whiskers and comes up on the porch late at night when it is cold and begs to come into the house?" "Oh, I know!" exclaimed little Pansy, a great light dawning; "it's papa!"

THE DISCOURAGING WOMAN

She's forlorn.
Her mouth droops.
She crosses bridges.
And looks for disaster.
Every pain augurs untimely death.
Her children have only half a chance. The mother belittles them and wails over their defects.
Her husband started on his day with a lump of ice down his back.
As a co-worker these women foresee failure in everything and dishonesty in everybody.
As a friend her constant state of gloom simply drenches one's spirits into indifference—and she wonders why.

BRONCHITIS,
Huskiness, Throat Catarrh

Delightful Cure Discovered That Cures Quickly.

Old-fashioned remedies were administered through the stomach only, but as it is impossible to swallow anything into the lungs, little benefit ever resulted.

Strong drugs, such as opium, chlorodyne and cocaine were resorted to, but did more harm than good.

Nowadays, when a doctor meets a case of catarrh — finds the throat filled with mucous—sore all the way down, he prescribes Catarrhozone because he knows it goes direct to the disease.

Catarrhozone cures by antiseptic balsams that are carried by the air you breathe direct to the source of the trouble.

It aids expectoration — clears away the phlegm—carries healthladen vapors to the sore, irritated tissues.

In one minute you experience decided relief with Catarrhozone and invariably it does cure every type of Catarrh, Bronchitis, irritable throat and hoarseness.

Just think of it—a sure cure without noxious drugs—one that is guaranteed and delightfully pleasant as well? Catarrhozone only, complete for (two months' use, $1.00; small (trial) size 50c, at all dealers.

CATARRHOZONE A SURE CURE.

Where Capital and Labor Agree

There's no difference of opinion about Kellogg's Corn Flakes.

Capital and Labor both agree that it's the finest cereal food in the land.

Nothing more delicious than these toasted flakes of sweet corn hearts, has yet been created. Until it is, Kellogg's will stand supreme—the breakfast cereal of the masses as well as the classes.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, backbiting and despondency disappear; the eye becomes bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. Early in indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Nerves pass in the fingers ends and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was advised to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was marvellous—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

A STUDENT'S TRIBUTE

Six Volumes in Praise of his school by an Indian Prince.

A new record for an "old boy's" tribute to his school has been made by the Maharajah of Bhavnagar in the history of Rajkumar College, Rajkot, which has been published in London.

The Maharajah was a pupil at the college, as his father was before him, and he testifies to his love and appreciation of his old school in six bulky volumes and an index. Each volume is gorgeously bound in red cloth, ornamented with gilt scroll work. The leaves are gilt-edged, and every page is decorated with an elaborate red scroll work encircling the text. Hosts of illustrations are scattered through the six volumes, the whole representing, as is stated in the preface, "enormous pains and perseverance, to say nothing of expense."

The Rajkumar College is one of two or three seminaries specially established in India under the guidance of the Government for the training and education of the sons of chiefs. One of the most interesting of the old scholars was Ranjitsinhji, famous as a cricketer, and it is interesting to learn that even in his college days he was "the best all-round player in the College."

Copies of the work have been presented by the Maharajah to King George and Queen Mary.

PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT,

son of the Governor-General of Canada, and brother of Princess Patricia, is taking part in advancing the cause of education for young men desiring to enter work in the trades. He has consented to become a patron of the Apprenticeship and Skilled Employment Association, which has its offices in Denison House, and he has made several suggestions of methods which have already been adopted by the association.

Constipation . Bad Breath Headache

When the bowels are constipated and you have stomach trouble and headache, try Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are so mild you can scarcely feel their action, yet so effective that the entire secretory apparatus is stimulated to healthy action.

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS CURE QUICKLY

Thus writes Mrs. D. P. Fowler, from Yarmouth: "I used to feel drowsy and heavy, my color was shallow, and there was usualy a bad taste in my mouth. I had vague pains all through my limbs, and an annoying headache as well.

"After one dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills there was a sudden change. I felt better, my appetite increased, and that exhaustion and depression gradually left me. Life seemed brighter and happier after I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I strongly recommend such a good medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly need; then why not get them now, and enjoy the abundant good health they are sure to bring you? Price, 25c per box, or five boxes for $1.00. At all dealers.

SKIN SUFFERERS

Do you realize that to go through life tortured and disfigured by itching, burning, scaly and crusted eczemas, or other skin and scalp humors is unnecessary? For more than a generation, warm baths with

Cuticura Soap

And gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment have proved successful in the most distressing cases, of infants, children and adults, when all else had failed.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on treatment of skin and hair, will be sent, post-free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 6M, Boston, U. S. A.

BONAR LAW, M.P.

Andrew Bonar Law, the new leader of the Unionist party in England, is a son of the Manse. His father was Rev. James Law, a Presbyterian minister in Rexton, Kent County, New Brunswick. Law, the statesman, arrived in the world in 1858. He was brought up in the atmosphere of the Kirk and public schools at Rexton and Richibucto. When he was twelve years old, his aunt took him to Glasgow, Scotland, to finish his education. Since then, Mr. Law has resided mainly in Glasgow, though he frequently comes to Canada, and has always been proud of his Canadian rearing. On his mother's side he had a number of Glasgow relatives called Kidston, who conspired with his aunt to start him in the iron business in Glasgow. He prospered at it, becoming at length Chairman of the Scottish Iron Association. Incidentally, he gained knowledge of more matters than iron. He learned to think after the Scotch mode. In the city of Adam Smith, father of political economy, Bonar Law began to be enthusiastic about theoretical questions of trade and commerce. In the year 1900, a parliamentary deputation got after him to contest Blackfriars, Glasgow. Law captured the seat. His aptitude for politics was such that, two years later, he was appointed Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade. The Conservative party ran on the rocks in 1906, and Law went down in a landslide, buried by a labor vote. Since then, he has sat for Dulwich Division of Camberwell and Bootle Division of Liverpool.

From a New Brunswick kirk manse to leader of the Opposition in the British House of Commons, with a fighting chance of being Imperial Premier some day, is a rise without record. In eleven years' parliamentary experience, this Canadian has proved his qualities for leadership among the best brains and blood in the capital of the world. Joseph Chamberlain picked him out as an impressive figure years ago. Bonar Law's personal appearance subtly suggests intense earnestness more than anything else, in the heavy brow, the bull-dog grip of the mouth and the fixed eyeglance. His speeches have the ring of responsible utterances.

HOME FOR BANKRUPTS

A curious will provides for those who have been unfortunate.

A singular foundation is to be established near St. Petersburg through the will of the wife of the jeweller Ivanoff, who left two and a half million roubles under strange conditions. A million had to be spent on a sanatorium for bankrupts, so that as a result of the anxiety their failures cause them, they can spend a few weeks under conditions which will contribute to the restoration of their shattered health. Part of the money, according to the widow's instructions, had to be spent on those daughters of bankrupts who had seen better days by preparing them for occupations. Money was also left to establish schools for manual workers. The widow's relatives are contesting the will, contending that she was not of sound mind when it was executed.

A LADY CURLER

The appearance of a lady curler in the great Scottish bonspiel at Carnebrock (says The London Globe) recalls the fact that a match between married and single women was played at Bushie, in Calloway, so long ago as February 10, 1841. Both teams were skipped by men. The game was carried out with the determination peculiar to the sex, and resulted in the defeat of the married party. They declared that there had been treachery in their camp. That they had some ground for their suspicion was proved by the fact that not long after the skip of the married ladies was united to a young widow who had played on the unmarried side, and had cast sheep's eyes over the hog-score all the time of the match.

IMPERIAL CABLES

The British and Canadian Governments May Co-Operate in a New Cable

It is only a short while since the cable lines owned by two British companies, the Anglo-American Cable Company and the Direct United States Cable Company, were absorbed by the Western Union, which leased their lines for a period of 99 years. For national purposes these two British companies were wiped out. From a commercial point of view there is no reason to suppose that the amalgamation is an evil thing, unless by removing competition it was able to strengthen its monopoly and increase rates. As a matter of fact, rates have been reduced, although the usual history of combinations begins with a reduction of price, soon to be followed by a series of increases. It is not altogether from the commercial point of view, however, that the cable business is to be considered. There is an Imperial and political significance attaching to it that is worth pondering, and this was discussed at a recent gathering of the London Chamber of Commerce.

The chief speaker was Mr. Charles Bright, who remarked:—

"There are moments when the Mother Country and her children have things to say to each other which strangers should not overhear. But if we are to be dependent for our communication with Canada and other parts of the Empire on cables under American control, we shall have to face the prospect of our messages being known all about at Washington for it would be futile to place reliance on the secrecy of codes."

The Chamber of Commerce then passed a resolution urging that licenses formerly held by British companies should not be transferred to foreign companies, but that if the transfer had already taken place it was the duty of the British Government to co-operate with the Canadian Government in the laying of an all British Atlantic cable, and the same connected with the all-British Pacific cable that was built from Canada to Australia a few years ago.

DANCER STUDIES MEDICINE.

A memory of long ago is awakened by the discovery that Lona Barrison, once a celebrated dancer and chief of the widely advertised "Barrison Girls," five in a row, to be seen on every street hoarding in London and the provinces, is studying medicine in Berlin with a view to practicing in Copenhagen, where she is married to a Mr. Fleuron. Lona Barrison writes to the papers that she is studying anatomy and physiology with a view to aesthetic-hygienic body-culture, thru which she hopes to teach her pupils to "enjoy beauty and the joy of life, but in reason."

Active Farmer at 106.

A remarkable example of longevity is to be found in the west of Ireland, in the case of Thomas Malley, a farmer, who lives within view of the Atlantic waves, at the village of Allebrack, about eight miles from Clifden, and who has just celebrated his 106th birthday. Malley has a son who is now qualified for an old age pension, and his great grandchildren are attending the local school. An early riser, Malley is still an active farmer. His only physical defect is a slight deafness.

Dear Sirs.—I am in receipt of my suit a few days ago, and I am very well pleased with the same. The tailoring is first-class in every respect, and the fit the same. Thanking you for the very nice made all the changes I asked for. The same rule here would cost, taller made, $40. So wishing you all success in your business,—I am, respectfully yours.

"Better Satisfied after Testing in Actual Wear."
Bridgetown, Nova Scotia.
Gentlemen.—Last year I got from you some clothing, and afterwards wrote for spring and summer samples. I might state that after fifteen months' experience with your clothing I am better satisfied with it than I was at the beginning, if possible. The tweed clothes have taken wonderfully well, retained their colours and shape, and after fifteen months of "strenuous life," they look almost as good as new.
I would now like samples of some steel grey worsteds and light-weight cheviots, with spring shades, and also some for trousers.—I remain, yours truly,

Merchants are mighty painstaking about their show windows. They must be neat and attractive or the window-dressers find themselves out of a job. But the blacker and coarser the ad. the more pleasing it seems to some advertisers. Don't offend the eye. It won't do in your windows, nor does it pay to try it in your announcements.

There are a thousand people who see your Ad. in THE EXAMINER to every one who looks at your window display. Put your best foot forward. Let your ad. in THE EXAMINER represent the owner of the store.

Advertising readers are shrewd and discriminating. They know what kind of a merchant you are when they see your ad.

Children as Washerwomen.

At Barry Education Committee on a discussion arose on tenders to wash cookery overalls. Councillor Fowler asked why they paid large salaries to teach laundry work and how to clean if they could not get children of thirteen or fourteen years of age to do this little work? If the teachers could not teach them to do this, then let them have a couple of practical washerwomen to do it.

RESTORES LUSTRE OF PEARLS

Strange Powers Attributed to Young Spanish Woman.

A Spanish actress has left the stage to save pearls from dying. Senorita Tortola de Valencia is said to have discovered that she has a special gift of reviving pearls. Ladies confided their necklaces to her, and, after touching her skin for a while, the pearls assumed a beautiful and unusual lustre. The Czar of Russia is said to have called upon her services to restore the lustre of some magnificent rows of pearls that had belonged to the great Catharine. The Spanish actress learned that so many pearls were losing their lustre that she decided to give up her career on the stage to save the dying pearls. She is paid handsomely by the ladies who confide their pearls to her, and the gems invariably recover their pristine brilliancy.

WILL LICENSE BROKERS.

Foreign Insurance Companies Must Have Accredited Agents.

Toronto, March 9.—In striking contrast to the lively debate on the budget speech on Thursday afternoon, was the session in the Legislature yesterday, when for over two hours Hon. J. J. Foy's bill respecting building societies and other loan corporations was discussed clause by clause.

No radical changes were made in the clauses that were discussed. Several of the more important ones were left over on the recommendation of one or two loan companies which sent deputations to Mr. Foy. Before the House rose, there were only about 15 Conservatives and four Liberal members, with Allan Studholme representing the full contingent of the Labor forces. Just before adjournment, Mr. Rowell intimated that he would like his proposed amendment to the Assessment Act considered immediately after the debate on the budget speech was concluded. Sir James Whitney said that the Opposition leader was a little too speedy, for it was necessary to allow all members who wish to introduce points relative to the act to do so. A general discussion of the proposed changes would follow.

Insurance companies not licensed in Ontario are not going to have such plain sailing here in future. In a bill introduced by Hon. J. J. Foy yesterday afternoon to amend the Insurance Act the authority to issue insurance on behalf of these companies will now be given only to licensed brokers, who must give security and pay any losses sustained as a result of the insurance company defaulting. Hitherto the act has been rather loose as regards the qualifications to issue insurance on behalf of those so-called "foreign" companies.

Among the important matters dealt with in the bill is that of straightening out those sections referring to the insurance of wives and children. Hitherto the wording of these sections has given rise to a great deal of litigation. Formerly the insurance of wives and children were under a separate act, but the year of 1892 they were included in the Insurance Act, and there has been considerable confusion [illegible] as to what limitations in the clauses they could heretofore be made out sometimes to help the creditors.

The Opposition in the Legislature has begun the fight on the bilingual school question.

L. Marshall, Liberal member for Monck, has given notice that he will call the attention of the Government to Hon. J. J. Foy's statement in North Toronto that bilingual schools are illegal, and if found to exist, should be abolished. Mr. Marshall will then proceed to ask:

"In view of the expressed opinion of the chief law officer of the crown in this province, that bilingual schools cannot lawfully exist in the Province of Ontario, and if found they must cease to exist, is it the intention of the Government to take steps to abolish the 365 English-French (bilingual) schools which according to the report of Dr. F. W. Merchant, dated Feb. 24, 1912, do exist in this province?"

HAS NEW PROPOSALS?

Premier Asquith Will Confer Again on Coal Strike.

London, March 9.—After extended talks with committees representing the coal mine owners and their striking employes yesterday, Premier Asquith extended an invitation to the representatives of both sides to the dispute to meet in a joint conference "with a view to a free discussion of the whole situation."

The official report explains that the Government considers the proposals they have placed before both parties offer the fairest means for arriving at a satisfactory settlement of the dispute, but in view of the difficulty of making any progress in that direction without a mutual discussion of the situation, the invitation for a joint conference was issued.

What the Government's proposals are has not been divulged. The miners replied to the invitation that they had undertaken to reassemble the national conference of miners at the earliest possible moment, but with the reservation that they would not recommend the acceptance of the Government's invitation except on the understanding that the principle of a minimum wage should be excluded from the discussion at the conference. As it is on this point that the whole dispute hinges, it is difficult to see how any progress towards a settlement of the strike can be made by a joint conference at which discussion of the question is barred.

The national conference of miners cannot be assembled before next Monday and meanwhile the strike must continue, and each day adds thousands of others to the vast number of persons already out of work.

Wireless System to Girdle Empire.

London, March 9.—After many delays the British Postmaster-General, acting on behalf of His Majesty's Government and the Governments of the Dominions and colonies, has formally notified the Marconi Co. of the acceptance of the terms submitted by that company for the construction of all the long-distance wireless stations which are required for the imperial wireless scheme.

Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., said yesterday:

"The Postmaster-General's notification to us marks the first step toward the establishment of a girdle of wireless stations round the British Empire. The scheme has vast and far-reaching potentialities. It has been advocated for a number of years, but it was not until last year that the scheme was adopted."

Illuminating Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 9.—A telegram received from Senator Gittins last night stated that the New York State Senate finance committee favorably reported his bill appropriating $10,000 as the state's share of the expense of the joint illumination of Niagara's cataract with Ontario. Gittins is confident the bill will be passed by the State Legislature.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Guesses on government figures on the farm reserves went wrong to-day for the grain markets all closed weak, whereas the Washington estimates which came a minute later turned out to be of a decidedly bullish sort. The totals, however, were in no case anywhere near so small as some extremists had predicted. Latest trading left wheat ½c to ⅝c down, corn ½c off to a shade higher, oats up ½c to ⅝c, and hog products at 5c to 17½c advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ½d to ¾d higher than yesterday, and corn ½d to ¾d higher. Paris wheat closed unchanged to ½c higher, Antwerp unchanged, Berlin ½c higher, Buda-Pest ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 8.—The feature of the grain trade was the demand from New York for Manitoba spring wheat for March shipment and $1.13 was bid for No. 4 and London bid 40s 3d for No. 2. Business for future shipment was dull as the bids were all out of line. There continues to be a good demand from London for all grades of oats with 37c 3d to 37s bid for No. 2 Canadian western for May-June shipment, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight to that port little business is being done.

CANADA'S REVENUE.

Dominion Will Have Surplus of About $35,000,000 This Year.

Ottawa, March 9.—When Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, brings down his budget, which will probably be next Wednesday, he will be able to announce the largest surplus in the history of Canada. It will be about thirty-five million dollars for the financial year, an increase of some fifteen million dollars over the surplus which Mr. Fielding announced a year ago.

The revenue for the eleven months was $120,645,616 and the expenditure $77,148,884 on consolidated fund. The increase in the revenue for the eleven months is $16,242,630, and of expenditure of $6,887,284.

The revenue already for the eleven months shows an increase over last year of three million dollars in excess of the total revenue last year. The revenue for the month of February shows an increase of nearly a million and a half over last year. The total for February of 1911 was $9,494,997.97, and the total for this year is $11,058,630.72.

The expenditure on capital account for the seven months has been $37,000,000, or one and a half million less than last year. The indications are that the surplus of the revenue consolidated fund will practically meet every item of expenditure on capital account, including twenty-five million for the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway.

MANY LIVES ARE LOST

Terrible Fire in Salvation Army Hotel in Chicago This Morning

FRIGHTFUL SCENES

Examiner Special.

CHICAGO, H.L., MARCH 9.—A fire attended by six deaths, four dying and many narrow escapes, destroyed the Barrett House and Salvation Army hotel on South Clark street this morning. Both these hostelries were crowded with sleeping lodgers when the fire broke out. The flames burst through scores of windows as the fire engines arrived. The firemen immediately spread life nets and several jumped from the upper storeys, two men going right through the nets and were severely injured. Others jumped to the ground and were killed. In the women's department of the building the firemen carried out several women unconscious. One of them had given birth to a baby while preparing to get out of the burning building. One man climbed out on a window sill on the fourth storey and tried to signal for assistance. He was a living torch of flame in an instant and fell back into the burning building. All the victims were poor people who had taken lodgings for the night in these places. The number dead at present is indefinite and may never be known, as the Salvation Army records were destroyed. The firemen saved many places.

TWO MEN SCALDED

Accident at the Canadian General Electric Co. This Morning

Two employees of the Canadian General Electric Company, Sylvester Sullivan, 217 Stewart street, and Fred Barrette, 75 Park street, were scalded this morning, while working near a boiler, the hot water from which in some manner escaped, and fell upon them. Sullivan was badly burned about the back, legs and arms, and is in St. Joseph's Hospital, in a serious condition. His injuries were dressed by Dr. Young. Barrette was not badly hurt and was able to go home.

AXE FALLS ON WELLAND CANAL

Special to The Examiner:

ST. CATHARINES, MARCH 9.—The political axe has at last fallen on the Welland canal and when that waterway opens this spring, it will be manned with an almost entirely new staff. There is much jubilation in some Conservative quarters as a consequence, because it was feared no changes were to be made, but in other quarters those who have been disappointed in their applications are anything but happy. Practically every employee from the lighthouse keeper at Port Dalhousie to lock sixteen, who could in any way be disturbed, will be superseded.

AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE FOR ALL LITTLE ONES

Mrs. Ovila Lamarre, Malvina, Que. writes: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an excellent medicine and would not use any other for my little one. I think all mothers should keep the tablets in the house." Thousands of other mothers have the same praise for the tablets. They are absolutely safe — being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiate or other harmful drug. They break up colds, expel worms, cure constipation and indigestion, in fact they are good for all the minor ills of little ones. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BLACKSMITHS DECREASING

Interesting Statistics Gathered by Traveller in Eastern Ontario Counties--Many Go Out of Business

NO PROFITS TO-DAY

"There are only 22 blacksmiths' apprentices in eleven of the counties in Eastern Ontario," said Mr. R. B. McGill, a former blacksmith of Peterborough, and at present with the Capewell Horse Nail Co. of Toronto, to an Examiner reporter. "Not more than five per cent. of these apprentices will ever make horseshoers that can take charge of a fire and shoe a horse correctly. The bright son of the farmer will not choose horseshoeing as an occupation. In the near future the horse-owner will be greatly inconvenienced by not having their horses properly shod.

In the counties of Ontario, Haliburton, Victoria, Durham, Peterborough, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox, Addington, and Frontenac, in 1906, there were approximately 540 blacksmiths' shops and at the present date there are about 440. Thus about 100 shops have closed indefinitely during the interval.

There are about 90 journeymen horseshoers in these counties, of whom about 25 per cent. are 50 years old, and over that. About 40 per cent. of the master horseshoers are over 50 years old, and many of them over 60 years. The number of deaths was 20.

One hundred and four stopped shoeing, and went into other occupations, except those that had to stop shoeing by reason of old age disability. Not one of them had enough money to retire from work.

The people are asking why are there no young men learning horseshoeing. The answer to the question, "Why do so many good horseshoers cease working at their trade?" is the answer to that question.

They can make a better livelihood at any other work; work that does not require as much skill as is required to shoe a horse properly.

The horseshoer that studies his work and reads along that line, is among the most skilled artisans in the world of labour. It is a professions work, owing to the fact that it deals with living organism. Very sensitive tissues are enveloped in the hoof of the horse. Then there is the 'interfering' aspect of which there are many classes, forgeing, and many other defects that the horseshoer has to deal with and worry about.

None only the careful horseshoer realizes the trouble that horseshoers have with the above defects, saying nothing of the horse that is hard to handle while being shod, and of the hard work of shoeing even the quiet horse.

One of the discouraging features the horseshoer meets with is when he takes great care in shoeing a horse and asks even 5c extra for his work and extra time on an extraordinary case. There is a complaint coming from many of the horse owners re his charge.

The proof the discouragement is found in these facts I have just mentioned, namely in the decrease in the number of horseshoers during the past five or six years.

FACTS ABOUT THE SOUTH POLE

The south pole is situated on an Antarctic continent larger than the Dominion of Canada and with an area of 5,000,000 miles.

The pole is on a tableland about 10,000 feet above sea level.

The great ice barrier is a glacier 760 miles wide and hundreds of miles broad in places; it varies from 100 to 300 feet in height.

The breaking off of portions of this ice barrier each year produces the greatest crop of icebergs in the world.

It is probable that the south pole itself is buried under ice 9,000 feet thick.

Vegetation in the Antarctic continent consists entirely of moss; the land animal life is limited to a species of wingless insect very primitive in form.

The only human beings in the Antarctic continent are explorers; no traces of native inhabitants have ever been discovered.

Penguins, great awkward birds, exist along the coast in some parts.

There is little snow on the lower plateau, necessitating explorers carrying tents; the surface is smooth ice.

Deep crevices in the Beardmore glacier render travel up it perilous.

Scientists claim that centuries ago the south pole was a tropical region filled with plant and animal life. They also maintain that the pole i s never at the same place for twoconsecutive years, that the earth wob bles around considerable each twelve months.

AMUNDSEN IS GENERALLY CREDITED WITH HAVING DISCOVERED THE POLE

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N. Y., MARCH 9.—The London papers are more inclined to credit the discovery of the South Pole to Amunsden, and admit that Scott, the British explorer has been beaten out. The New York Tribune has a cable this morning, which includes the following comment on the London Chronicle's special cable of the Amundsen discovery of the South Pole. There was no spirit apparent of distrust as to the accuracy of Amundsen's claim. He describes a journey of 900 miles, leaving his winter quarters October 20th, and making the trip in fifty-five days. A great mountain range he encountered, he named after his Queen Maud of Norway. Passing Shackleton's, farthest south, he landed at the approximate position of the Pole on Dec. 16th. He found the Pole in the midst of a great plateau, which he named after Haako, King of Norway. A hut was erected here, and the Norwegian flag hoisted with due ceremony in the name of the King of Norway. The expedition was favoured with unusually fine weather. The party at the Pole consisted of five men, four sledges, and fifty-two dogs. Amundsen, returning, arrived at his winter quarters January 31st. The Tribune says that while Amundsen's story does not leave any room for doubt that he visited the Pole on December 16th, what all the world wants to know is, when did those reach it, or did Scott reach it at all. Amundsen says not one word about Scott.

MRS. HUGH DARKE WINS APPEAL IN CASE AGAINST THE C.G.E.

At Osgoode Hall, yesterday, judgment was given in an appeal case of considerable local interest:

Darke v. Canadian General Electric Co.—An appeal by plaintiff from the judgment of Mulock, C.J., of December 8, 1911. An action by Catherine Darke, widow of Hugh Darke, who was accidentally killed by being whirled around a shaft in defendants' factory while working for them to recover $10,000 damages, on the ground that the accident was caused by the negligence of defendants. At the trial the action was dismissed without costs. Judgment: Held, that judgment should be reversed, and judgment entered for plaintiff for $1,000, with costs of trial and appeal.—D. SAVED THE SITUATION

Counsel For Defence Arrives in Time to Save His Client From a Term in Gaol

SOLD LIQUOR TO A MINOR

The familiar face of William Armstrong illuminated the prisoner's dock again this morning. This is his third appearance in the police court this week. He claims Havelock as his home and was allowed to go yesterday on suspended sentence on condition that he made himself scarce as far as this city was concerned. To this request he readily consented, but the precincts of the police cell proved too alluring for him and he sought refuge there last evening.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public place.

Detective Newhall gave evidence to the effect that he had observed Armstrong drinking in six different bars throughout the day.

Armstrong attempted to vindicate himself by saying that he was in search of his overcoat, watch and chain which he had lost a few days previous.

His Worship imposed a fine of $5, payable forthwith.

A charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public place was registered against a seventeen year old youth, who pleaded guilty to the charge.

He was put into the witness box and invited to tell the circumstances responsible for his appearance in court.

"Who were you with," asked the Chief.

"I don't think I'll tell you," replied the witness.

The question being repeated, witness admitted that Matt McMahon was one of his companions.

"Who was the other," queried the Chief.

Witness—"I won't tell you."

"Your Worship, I would ask for a remand for a week," requested the Chief.

"Just as the magistrate was about to make out the commitment papers, the counsel for the defence, Mr. V. J. McElderry came into court and saved the situation by announcing his intention of appearing the defendant's behalf.

"Well, you don't want to go to gaol for him?" queried the magistrate.

"Well, no; I hope there's nothing as serious as that pending," replied the counsel for the defence.

A little parental advice from the boy's father, augmented by the legal advice of the counsel for the defence and the threats of the court to impose a gaol sentence if the information was withheld had the desired effect.

Witness gave the name of George Foley as his other companion. He later admitted that McMahon was not with them while they were drinking in the bar.

"Now who supplied you with the liquor," queried the Chief. (Prolonged silence greeted this request for information.)

"I think the boy has shown good will in giving his evidence so far," said Mr. McElderry.

"What is the object of this statute," interposed the magistrate. "He is a compellable witness. You had better

Dr. Merchant's Report Loudly Condemns Whitney Government

Shows That Government Neglect Has Produced in 245 Bilingual Schools Only 60 With Second-class Certificates—In 109 Schools French the Language of Instruction—40 Teachers Who Can't Teach English—Large Use of Unauthorized French Text Books—Nothing But French Used in Many Schools

It takes a good deal of analysis of Dr. Merchant's report on Bilingual school to reveal the full force of his condemnation of the neglect and mismanagement of education of the Whitney government that has led to such deplorable conditions in Ontario, as the report sets forth.

For example, his bald analysis of the qualifications of the teachers in the bilingual schools of Ontario is eloquent of intolerable conditions. Out of 529 teachers reported upon no less than 469 held certificates of less than second class grade, eleven others have an interim second class, and the remainder, 49, hold second class or better. Further, no less than 271 hold only a district, temporary, or no certificate at all.

In Ottawa alone there are 24 teachers without any certificate and 19 others in Russell County.

Of the 141 teachers holding temporary certificates about half come from Quebec. Of these about half hold the model diplomas for that Province, which are "about equivalent to those for entrance to the Model School in Ontario." Most of the others hold still lower grade diplomas. Some are from the United States and some from France.

Twenty-two teachers were found who "have not sufficient command of English to speak the language with any degree of freedom." Eighteen others know so little that they are unfitted to be teachers of English."

As to the number of "bilinguals," Dr. Merchant finds that there are 345 English-French schools in the Province. The list is "compiled from the records of the Department of Education and from correspondence with the inspectors." Of these 345 schools Dr. Merchant visited 220. School No. 14, Clarence Township, Russell County, was closed on the day it was visited, November 2, 1911, "pupils at church." Five schools were found to be closed because there was no teacher. One in Essex County was closed because the trustees were permitting the teacher "to spend a few days at home." Another in Prescott was closed on the day of inspection, November 2, 1911, because the school was being cleaned up following an election. Of the 345 bilingual schools in Ontario 233 are Roman Catholic Separate schools and 122 are Public schools.

In no less than 108 schools visited French was admittedly the language used by the teacher in giving school directions to the pupils of Form IV., generally the highest in the school. In no less than 178 French was admittedly the language used in giving directions to Form III. For the lower forms the numbers are, of course, much higher.

The report classifies the amount of time given in the schools to the various subjects. In practically all much time is given to English. This in Form IV, the highest form in most of the schools, the time given to French is as follows: French reading, 60 to 100 minutes a week; French composition, 30 to 45 minutes a week. English reading and English composition get a similar allotment each. English spelling gets 30 to 75 minutes. There is no report on English grammar.

A list of the text books found in each school is given. French text books were practically universal. French readers included the course of the Brothers of the Sacred Heart, Rochon's, Montpetit's, Magnan's, Nelson's, Leroy's, and La Doctrine Cretienne de Lhomond. For French grammar the text books used are those of Larousse, Robert, and the Christian Brothers.

In other subjects variations from the authorized list of text books include the following: Arithmetic, Rochon, Christian Brothers; geography, Miller, Christian Brothers, Fraser; history, Christian Brothers, Henderson and Fraser, Congregation of Notre Dame, Grand Lignes de l'histoire du Canada, Leblond de Brumath, Touchant.

"Is English to remain the language of Ontario?" was a question asked in The Star some months ago. Perhaps the most disquieting answer is to be found in the following passage from Dr. Merchant's report: "There has been developed a type of school in which French is employed in teaching all subjects except English. In these schools English is regarded simply as one subject among others in the course of study." Approximately 80 per cent. of the Roman Catholic Separate schools of Eastern Ontario, and 90 per cent. of the Public and the rural Roman Catholic Separate schools in the districts (Upper Ontario) conform more or less completely to this type."

Another striking commentary on the efficiency of the system is found in the fact that of the 529 teachers, no less than 382 have been in their present position less than one year.

As to salaries, two teachers were found getting $150 a year. Fifty are getting $200. Seventy-seven are getting $250. Sixty-six are getting $300. Fifty-six are getting $350. Seventy are getting $400. Thirty-two are getting $450. Forty-five are getting $500. Recapitulating, 235 are getting $299 or less. Thirty are getting more than $500. The highest is $1,200.

The Edmonton Council recently granted $2,000 to the city's two bands for forty concerts during the coming summer.

The Cobourg Council has voted unanimously to request the Collegiate Institute trustees to abolish all tuition fees.

There are 350 paid-up members on the St. Catharines Board of Trade. A year ago when Mr. W. R. Burgoyne accepted the presidency there were only 35. During a three-day campaign, 200 members were added. The Board has $1,600 in the treasury.

The Kingston Board of Trade banquet a few nights ago was attended by nearly two hundred of the city's professional, mercantile and industrial men. Hon. J. D. Hazen and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux gave addresses and the Standard says the meeting was an inspiration to the city.

The city of Edmonton is to have a six-storey modern office building, 115 ft. 6 in by 73 feet, built of skeleton steel protected by concrete at a cost of $250,000.

St. Catharines factories have several hundreds employees more than a year ago. It is estimated that over 1,000 new mechanics will be required in the city during the coming year.

OFFICIAL WINKING.

Loose enforcement of the license law is not confined to Peterborough. Since October, 286 barrels and over 12,000 bottles of beer, 2250 bottles of whiskey and a great deal of other prohibited liquors have been seized by the provincial police during raids on "blind pigs" in New Ontario, a total value of $20,000. These figures show that there is something wrong with the enforcement of the liquor law in New Ontario. This deduction cannot be brushed away as a partisan opinion. Even a staunch Conservative journal, like the Ottawa Citizen, points out that with only one railway to carry illicit whiskey to the north, and that railway under government control, it should be possible to destroy the shameful illicit traffic in the new country. There may possibly be considerable "winking" among government railway officials.

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS.

During the last Provincial elections, the bilingual school conditions evolved a uniform postulate from both parties—"Every child in Ontario must have the opportunity to secure an English education."

It was urged, on both sides, that bilingual schools, as existing and maintained, did not provide this.

What was the position of the responsible head of the Government of Ontario? Sir James Whitney made the amazing statement that "there was no such thing as bilingual schools in Ontario."

In answer to that we have the recently presented report of the Commissioner appointed by Sir James Whitney to investigate the condition and working of bilingual schools, which he declared did not exist.

Dr. Merchant reports that there are in Ontario, 345 English-French—bilingual—schools, and the list was compiled from the records of the Educational Department of the Government whose head declared, on his responsibility as a Minister, that there was no such thing as bilingual schools.

On the first news page of this issue of the Examiner is found a summary of Dr. Merchant's report, setting forth some interesting facts, especially in view of the postulate that "every child in Otario must have the opportunity of securing a good English education."

The report shows that in 108 schools, French was the language of instruction used, an easily believeable statement, when it is reported that there are forty teachers that cannot teach English, together with the further fact that out of 599 teachers no fewer than 469 hold less than second-class certificates, and 271 teachers have only temporary certificates, or no certificates at all.

These conditions reveal a neglect of the interest of bilingual schools, whose counterpart is found in our public schools—neglect to provide qualified teachers, without which no good educational work can be done.

What will the Government do about it? Do Sir James Whitney's supporters, who are forever ringing the changes on the dangers of "French domination" think that things are right, in view of the report of Dr. Merchant, which confirms all that was urged in condemnation of the Whitney Government by Liberals, at the last election? Sir James Whitney takes the stand that an "overwhelming endorsation" "by the people at the polls, wipes off the slate all sins of omission and commission. Do they agree with him? Is the danger of "French domination" less because a Conservative Premier, and Conservative Government "aid and abet" and encourage by their neglect the conditions the extremists deplore? What will they do? Will they drop into line, and silently follow the party trail? Or will they continue to press the demand that every child in the province shall have the opportunity of securing an English education? Will they ignore the fact that the evils they condemn were committed to arise under a government they support, and which should naturally be called to account?

THE DEBT OF ONTARIO GROWING AT A RAPID RATE

Whitney Government Makes No Apology for Increasing Expenditure—Hon. A. G. MacKay Shows a Deficit of $289,000

"The province is travelling at a great pace, the debt increasing as much in one year under Conservative rule as it did in fourteen years of Liberal rule," were the words of Hon. A. P. MacKay in criticising the budget presented on Thursday by Hon I. B. Lucas in the stead of Hon. Mr. Matheson, who was prevented from taking this duty by illness.

Hon. Mr. Lucas, in opening his budget address, referred to the fact that the Provincial revenues were still increasing. The ordinary revenue for the year was $9,370,833.90, an increase of $479,239.22 over that in 1910, the largest in the history of the Province. The ordinary expenditure for the same period was $9,619,934.03, which showed a nominal deficit of $249,100.13. The revenue exceeded the estimates given last session by $1,154,061.82. For the year ending ocipts, including cash on hand at October 31, 1911, are $10,908,346.27, while the ordinary expenditure for the same period is $8,645,065.84. Excluding the bank balance of last October of $1,508,916.99, Mr. Lucas could see a surplus of current revenue over current expenditure of $759,-363.44.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS.

Dealing with the different sources of revenue, Mr. Lucas pointed out that the revenue from the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines was $2,710,242.68, although the woods and forests branch did not realize the $1,900,000 expected, the income from that source being $1,711,438.87. Crown lands brought in $178,671, October 31, 1912, the estimated re-ropalties $268,261.99, supplementary revenue $209,461. For the third time in the history of the province the income from succession duties was around the million mark. Last year the amount was $1,050,633.26.

The increase in the Federal subsidy provided Mr. Lucas with a further opportunity for party laudation. Until 1906 the subsidy had been paid on the basis of the census of 1861. After the conference of Provincial Premiers in November of that year the subsidy was based on the census of 1901. The Federal subsidy last year, including $133,000 on account of the 1911 census and $240,000 for administration, amounted to $2,261,-758.

A BOOKKEEPING PROPOSITION.

"The whole thing is a bookkeeping proposition," continued Mr. Lucas, as he proceeded to make a surplus out of deferred payments on account of 1911. The total net earnings of the T. & N. O. for the year were $568,-999, of which $515,000 had been turned over to the Provincial Treasurer. Including the balance of $78,000, which did not come in until after the 31st October, and some $373,648, which was received during the eighteen days that are allowed for the payment of 1911 accounts, Mr. Lucas claimed a surplus of $102,548.

It was remarkable, Mr. Lucas declared, that much criticism had been heard regarding the T. & N. O. during the campaign, but little of it had reached the House. There had been some demand for a reduction of passenger rates to a two-cent basis, also a reduction of freight charges. There could be no hope for a reduction of the rates. The Railway Commission would have to apply the principle that no corporation could reduce its rates below a figure that would not pay a dividend on the capital investment, and in the case of the T. & N. O. the railway had barely reached that point.

"Does the statement of total net revenue include receipts from the sale of land?" asked Mr. N. W. Rowell.

"I believe it does," replied Mr. Lucas.

Defending the volume of increased expenditure, Mr. Lucas said the total grant for educational purposes was $2,374,314. "If we live up to our responsibility this large expenditure for education will continue," he said.

NEW ONTARIO OPTIMISM.

"We are on the eve of a great development of New Ontario," he continued. "I would like to say one word of warning to the enthusiastic and optimistic men who represent New Ontario—and they are all on this side of the House——"

"There is one good man on this side," interrupted Mr. Rowell, referring to Mr. Mageau, of Sturgeon Falls.

"He is the exception that proves the rule," Mr. Lucas replied. "Let there be no mad rush for settlers in that new country. Quality rather than quantity should be the motto for the development of New Ontario. You want settlers in New Ontario; we want to see New Ontario develop, but we want you to be careful of the class of citizens that you take there."

In conclusion Mr. Lucas claimed that the balance sheet of the Province showed assets of $26,936,-060.30, of which nearly $25,000,000 were interest-bearing. The total direct liabilities were $24,765,923. Every dollar of the direct liabilities was represented by tangible assets of equal value.

HON. A. G. MACKAY REPLIES.

In his reply to the budget, Hon. Mr. MacKay pointed out that although Mr. Lucas had congratulated the Provincial Treasurer on finishing the year with a balance of $1,508,916, he had made no reference to the fact that they had begun the past year with a balance of $3,177,589. Mr. MacKay dealt first with the direct liability of the province, which, after deducting the bank balance, was shown to be $23,362,005. In 1904, the last year of the old Liberal Government, the net direct liability was $8,995,855. In other words, the average annual increase in the debt of the province during the fourteen years previous to 1905 was $836,746. The average annual increase in the net debt during the seven years of Conservative rule since 1905 had been $3,306,715.

CAPITAL CHARGES.

The financial statement showed that current receipts for the year had been $9,370,833. Mr. MacKay quoted from the budget speech of Hon. A. J. Matheson of 1906, in which the latter had excluded revenue arising from sale of Crown lands, sale of common school and University lands, bonus on timber limits, timber dues, from the statement of receipts. These items had all been included in the statement of receipts of the past year. Deducting these items, which should be charged to capital account, from the statement presented by Mr. Lucas, there was left an actual deficit of $2,-035,914.

Mr. MacKay pointed out in connection with the revenue from these sources, that so long as the province was doing nothing in the way of re-forestation the sales of these assets were sales on capital account. The province would soon be in the same position as was the United States, and would be facing a timber famine.

AN ANNUAL DEFICIT.

The government had resorted to the old law of averages in order that it might make it appear that there was a surplus for the past year. As a matter of fact there was a deficit in 1909 of $250,000, a deficit in 1910 of $550,000, and a deficit this year of $800,000. The speaker pointed out that neither the Liberal nor the Conservative Government in recent years had so run the affairs of the province that it could pay the current expenditures out of current receipts.

CREDIT DUE LIBERALS.

Taking up the increase in revenue of the province since the Conservative Government had come into power, Mr. MacKay showed that the whole of it was due to the fact that the Government had been making use of laws introduced under the Liberal rule. The increase in revenue since 1904 was about three million dollars; from the corporation tax was $522,949, from succession duties $663,401, from mining $490,443, from the Dominion subsidy $1,127,098, and from the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway $515,000, making a total of $3,325,931.

Mr. MacKay laid particular emphasis on the fact that if Ontario had received the same treatment as was given the Province of Manitoba in the recent readjustment of financial terms with the Dominion the province would be entitled to an increase of subsidy of at least $500,000.

Dealing with the revenue from the T. & N. O. Railway, Mr. MacKay declared that the object of this road was not so much to be a paying concern as a colonization road for the purpose of bringing people into the country and building up New Ontario.

ESTIMATED RECEIPTS FOR 1912.

An appendix to the financial statement presented to the Legislature gives the total estimated receipts for 1912 at $9,404,439.28, with a cash balance of $1,503,916.99 at the beginning of the current fiscal year, making a total estimated revenue of $10,908,346.27. The principal items in the revenue are: Federal subsidy, $2,396,000; Lands, Forests and Mines Department, $2,800,000; public institutions, $298,000; Provincial Secretary's Department, $251,000; succession duties, $700,000; liquor licenses, $775,000; supplementary revenue, $875,000; T. & N. O., $500,000; Hydro-electric Power Commission interest, $173,000.

Rev. Prof. Wallace Does Not Think Germany Is "Spoiling For A Fight"

The following synopsis of an address given before the Toronto Ministerial Association, by Rev. Prof. F. Wallace, of Victoria University Toronto, should be read with interest, both from the authority behind the address and as the speaker was formerly pastor of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. He is also a cousin of Mr. J. W. Bennet, city.

"The danger of conflict between Germany and Great Britain arises out of a misunderstanding, and this is due to an ignorance of the facts of history," said Rev. Prof. F. H. Wallace, of Victoria College, in an address to the Methodist Ministerial Association on Thursday morning on the Anglo-German situation. Prof. Wallace spent last winter in Germany and was afforded unusual opportunities to secure reliable information concerning the Kaiser and the sentiment in higher diplomatic circles in Berlin.

"Modern Germany," said Professor Wallace, "has been thoroughly made by the noble devotion to duty of the Hohenzollern family, and of the German people, by their heroic and stern military prowess. The stern virtues and military prowess of the Prussians have restored Germany from disintegration and made her once more one of the greatest powers in Europe. They naturally feel that what they have thus gained by force of arms they must maintain in the same way.

DISARMAMENT NOT IN SIGHT.

"It is too soon, therefore, for us to expect the Germans to be prepared for anything approaching disarmament, and the course of constitutional development is made the slower by the very virtues of the Hohenzollern family. They have never been constitutional rulers. They have always believed in their divine call and divine right as rulers, and they have so nobly responded to that call and so nobly done its duties that men the more readily accept or at least tolerate their claims. The National Liberals are working toward more constitutional government. The Social Democrats are not properly Communists and are asking for little more than the Chartists asked for eighty years ago in England, just such rights and liberties as are enjoyed throughout the English world to-day. The hope of internal progress in Germany lies in the triumph of the principle of constitutional evolution. Only this can prevent ultimate revolution. It is too much to expect that the present success of the Social Democrats should make much immediate difference in the relations between Germany and Great Britain or any other foreign nation, for, although the influence of social democracy is on the whole specific, nevertheless the Social Democrats have given ample assurance that in the event of war they will stand by the fatherland.

HOW GERMANY HAS GROWN.

"Germany has grown with enormous rapidity since 1870. While the population of France has remained almost unchanged that of Germany has grown now to the total of 64,-000,000. It is natural that so great a people, so well trained, so skilled and successful in manufacturing and in commerce should seek for expansion in all parts of the world. Unfortunately the Germans have come too late to get what might be counted their fair share in the partition of the world. Wherever the Germans have pushed out or would have been glad to do so they have found England in their way. While England is hardly to be blamed for her own successes, on the other hand the Germans not unnaturally feel irritated. They have a strong feeling of resentment at what they call suspicion and hostility with reference to their commercial, industrial and colonial development. They believe English diplomacy throughout the world is honeycombed with hostility to German interests. Every German with whom I spoke, and I spoke with many, declared that the idea of the German invasion of England was mere dummheit (folly). The Kaiser a universally regarded by Germans and by foreigners who know the situation as our best friend. His failure to receive the emissaries of the Boers made him intensely unpopular in his own capital, and during this last summer, when not only military classes, but the men on the street were clamoring for war with England, the Kaiser was the restraining influence.

NOT HOSTILITY TO ENGLAND.

"My reading of the situation in general is this: The Kaiser has built a great fleet, not through any special hostility to England, but that he and his people may be ready for all contingencies, may defend themselves from any possible invasion by sea, may protect and encourage German commerce in every part of the world, may be prepared for all chances for the acquisition of territory that may hereafter offer themselves; in a word, may have their shares, henceforth, in the settlement of all great problems of world politics. Henceforth, England and all other countries must take Germany into account, must be content with their fair share and let Germany have the same. Our wisdom is to make it evident to Germany that she is mistaken in suspecting us of hostility to her legitimate interests, and by all reasonable concessions throughout the world to insure a revival of the old-time friendship based on a community of race and ethical and religious ideals, which will be a guarantee of peace throughout the world."

To Prevent Chapped Skin

—use warm water and Baby's Own Soap.

The warm water opens the pores of the skin and the minute particles of pure refined vegetable oils which form the creamy, fragrant lather of Baby's Own Soap are absorbed into the skin, keeping it soft, healthy, and preventing cracks and chaps.

A perfect rinsing, then almost rubbing when drying guarantees a fine smooth skin in any weather.

TWO FINGERS WERE AMPUTATED

Employee of C. G. E. Meets With a Serious Injury

An employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, named Christopher Jay, met with a painful accident yesterday, at 5 o'clock, while operating a punch press, at the Works. In some manner he allowed his right hand to come between the hammer and the head of the press, with the result that it was badly crushed.

Dr. Young was summoned and first aid treatment applied. The unfortunate victim was later removed to Nicholls Hospital in the Dan Spence Ambulance, where it was found necessary to amputate the first two fingers.

Later reports give the patient's condition as favourable.

DON'T BE UNREASONABLE

If You Neglect the Care of the Scalp You Should Not Expect Beautiful Hair.

The hair is more exposed and hence more liable to accumulate dust and dirt than any other portion of the body.

In spite of this the hair receives as a rule, the least attention and no real effort is made to keep it healthy.

If the dandruff germ is allowed to work unmolested and the scalp becomes crusted with dirt accumulations, one may expect the hair to die and fall out. There is no cause for surprise in this phenomenon; it is natural and happens in every instance where the care of the hair and scalp is overlooked.

The one sure remedy which prevents the loss of hair and permits a healthy, luxuriant growth is found in Newbro's Herpicide.

The dandruff germ cannot live on a head to which Herpicide is regularly applied. The germ dies. The hair ceases to fall. The terrible itching stops almost instantly.

That is what Newbro's Herpicide does.

Applications at the good barber shops.

MUSICAL RECITAL.

Under Auspices of the Normal School Literary Society.

The Normal School Literary Society met last evening, a very choice programme was rendered. The event took the form of a musical recital, and was under the direction of Dr. Park, who gave several violin selections, in his usual good form. The solos by Miss Steinhoff were a strong feature of the programme, and her work was heartily applauded.

Bodie Not To Open Their Meetings With Prayer

Toronto Trades and Labour Council Throw Out Motion—Clergy Regret Tone of Debate

TORONTO, March 8.—At the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council last night, Leon Worthall introduced a motion to open and close the meetings with the Lord's Prayer. He said that inasmuch as the Council had for its object the moral uplift of humanity, a fundamental basis should be recognized. The Council could not have a better basis than the Lord's Prayer.

Delegate Paulin: "What's that you move? To pray. Why the workers have been praying for thousands of years, and what have they got out of it? Sweatshops, and the conditions you see around you. Strike and fight is what you mean, isn't it?"

Not the Place for It.

Delegate R. J. Stevenson: "I protest against that resolution being brought in here as a delegate to the printers, and don't believe we should be asked to vote on such a proposition."

Delegate Simpson: "That motion should never have been brought in here. It's the most foolish motion ever introduced. This is not the place for it."

Delegate Bancroft: "I suppose, Mr. President, that as the declaration of the A. F of L., whose charter we hold, doesn't recognize race, creed or colour, in the Labour movement—all workers are welcome to the ranks of labour—this motion is out of order."

President McCann: "On these grounds I declare the whole thing out of order."

Clergymen's Opinions.

Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Dale Presbyterian Church, said: "The great Master of all men was a carpenter, and it is His prayer that they refuse to utter. I think they are making a mistake. It is a manly thing to pray. That is no sentimentalism, nor old woman's expression. Prayer never did anybody any harm, and I fancy it might do the Trades and Labour Council some good. Suppose that some of those labour men don't say a prayer for themselves all week long, wouldn't it be a good thing for them to hear a prayer at the opening of their weekly meeting? Suppose it is a business meeting—isn't all business, in a sense, His business? Men never make a mistake to pray."

Rev. Dr. Taylor, of Cook's Presbyterian Church: "Labour men are slowly coming to a better understanding of both church and religion. The most thoughtful are making a distinction between the church and some poor material that is in it. They are also making a distinction between religion, which is the birthright of every man, and religiosity, which is the counterfeit of the real thing. The discussion of last night simply indicates that there are still some labour men who have not made these distinctions. We should not regard such discussions as reactionary at all, but simply as remnants of an unhappy understanding that was, I think, much more general formerly than now."

Prayer is used to open Board of Education meetings, and the City Council has a prayer at its inaugural meeting every year.

LADIES' LITERARY SOCIETY MEET

And a Lecture is Given by Father Fitzpatrick on Constitutional History of Canada

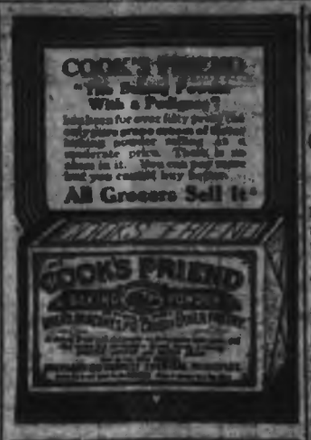
There was an exceptionally large attendance at the semi-monthly meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of the St. Peter's T. A. S., held in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum, last evening. Indicative of considerable interest being taken in the early history of this fair Dominion, for such was the topic of the lecturer, the Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore. Miss Aileen Sullivan presided.

Prior to the lecture a splendid pianoforte solo was rendered by Miss Bernice Giroux, and Miss Margaret Merrill rendered ably a recitation, while the Misses Mamie Theobald and Kathleen McCarthy were responsible for a delightful violin duet.

During the course of his lecture, the Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick said:

There has been a desperate fight in this country to achieve the present state of Government. Years ago the Governor-General ruled the whole of Canada, and took no advice from his advisors. Now we have representation controlled by the people. From 1764 to 1774 we had a Governor-General, with an Executive Council, controlled by himself, and who would do just exactly what he said. Now, this was a bad state of affairs. During all this time we had no French representation among the advisors, notwithstanding the fact that the administration was conceded to the English by the French. The French naturally complained of this. In order to retain loyalty, the Quebec Act was passed. By this Quebec Act the boundary of this country was made. Two years later, in 1776, the Executive Council, ultimately the Treaty of Paris, came into effect, wherein the civil law of France would be maintained by her people.

At the end of the American Revolution a number of those who were faithful to England, and who were called the U. E. Loyalists, emigrated to Canada, and settled in Quebec. This also caused trouble, for they did not like the French law. In 1791, England changed the laws, and the Province was divided into two parts. Of course there was a Parliament for each division. There were to be two houses, a house of assembly, elected by the people, and a legislative council, appointed by the Crown. The Governor-General governed Lower Canada and the Lieutenant-Governor-General, Upper Canada.



QUEBEC FARMER TELLS GOOD NEWS

FOUND COMPLETE CURE FOR CRAMPS AND KIDNEY DISEASE.

Suffered For Six Years, But Found Health and New Life in Dodd's Kidney Pills—Warm Praise For Old Reliable Remedy.

Marie East, Bonaventure Co., Quebec, March 8.—(Special.)—Mr. Peter Bernard, a prosperous young farmer living near here, is spreading the good news that he has found a complete cure for his kidney troubles.

"I suffered for six years from cramps in the muscles and kidney disease," Mr. Bernard says, "but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely. Yes, I am feeling so well that I want other sufferers to know just how easy it is to be cured."

It is a good old saying that it is easy to do anything if you just know how. And Mr. Bernard and hundreds of others are telling you just how to cure kidney disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it. And as kidney disease is the direct cause of rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, heart disease, pain in the back and urinary troubles Dodd's Kidney Pills cure them by removing the cause. If you haven't used Dodd's Kidney Pills yourself ask your neighbours about them.

FACTS FOR THE CURIOUS

There are palm trees growing on the banks of the Amazon whose leaves are from 10 to 12 feet broad and from 30 to 50 feet long.

A Kansas City tailor who has taken the trouble to count the number of stitches in the last coat he made, says he counted 32,937—23,800 machine stitches and 9,137 hand stitches. The coat was a four-button sack coat, 32 inches long and single stitched.

DOES AVERAGE MAN WANT LEARNED WIFE?

Clever Women Are Admired, What About the Other Kind?

An able woman writer has recently been lamenting man's dislike of feminine intellectuality and his predilection for the ordinary woman.

I wonder if this is true of men collectively.

It is undoubtedly correct as regards a large number of men. The average man is "an ordinary person" and he is consequently attracted by the average woman who is also "an ordinary person." On the other hand, men who are out of the ordinary are often attracted by women of exceptional mental equipments. George Sands may be cited as an instance of a woman who, though not possessed of any remarkable beauty, yet exercised an extraordinary fascination over the men of her day and generation.

The majority of women who reigned over the French salons were women of brains and to their gatherings flocked most of the celebrated men of the period. Even, Shelley, the wild and wayward, justifies his flight from poor frivolous Harriet, saying, "Everyone who knows me must know that the partner of my life should be one who can feel poetry and understand philosophy."

The fact of the matter is that learned women are often confused with clever women, and it is the former who usually meet with masculine disapproval—and feminine, too, for that matter.

Learning and cleverness may often go together, but the terms are by no means synonymous. A woman's brain may be a storehouse or lumber-room of borrowed facts packed close together, but she may, nevertheless, have no power of original thinking. She cannot receive an idea, think over it and give it back in new and illuminated form. She has no power of abstract thought.

A woman of this type is usually pompously heavy in conversation, anxious to display her own laboriously acquired knowledge and eager, whenever possible, to expose others' lack of it. In fact, she is a dreadful bore to everyone.—Chicago Tribune.

John A. Smith and His Remarkable Rheumatic Remedy ---Cured Himself First and Now Proposes to Cure the World.

Cured Many Cases of 30 and 40 Years Standing

On the theory "that seeing is believing," John A. Smith of Milwaukee wants every one to try his remedy for the cure of rheumatism at his expense. For that reason he proposes to send a 50c box FREE to every one who will enclose this advertisement and send name and address. Mr. Smith has suffered all the agony and torture from rheumatism, tried all the remedies known, and yet utterly failed to find relief.

JOHN A. SMITH

At times he was so helpless that he had to take morphine and after considerable doctoring he gave up in despair. He began studying into the causes of rheumatism, and after much experimenting, finally found a combination of drugs which completely cured him. The result was so beneficial to his entire system that he called his new found remedy "Gloria Tonic." Those of his friends, relatives and neighbours suffering from rheumatism were next cured and Mr. Smith concluded to offer his remedy to the world. But he found the task a difficult one as nearly everybody had tried a hundred or more remedies and they couldn't be made to believe that there was such a thing as a cure for rheumatism. But an old gentleman from Regina, Sask., U. C. 44 years, him saying if Mr. Smith would send him a sample he would try it, but as he had suffered over thirty years and wasted a fortune with doctors and advertised remedies, he wouldn't buy anything more, until he knew it was worth something. The sample was sent, he purchased more and the result was astonishing. He was completely cured. This gave Mr. Smith a new idea and ever since that time he has been sending out free sample boxes to all who apply.

At the U. C. College, Toronto, 44 cured Mrs. J. Whitley, who had suffered excruciatingly. Fred K. McDonald writes from Sunny Brae, N.S., that "Gloria Tonic" has cured him of a case of rheumatism of many years' standing. From Ambrose M. Melanson, Meteghan River, Digby County, N.S., comes a letter that he has been cured of a severe case.

Even the first sample box cured Mrs. B. Brett, at 12 Powell St., Guelph, Ont. Two boxes left Mrs. Geo. Wright, of Cookcook, Que., well and happy.

Mrs. T. Dolina, West Plain, Ont., writes that she could scarcely dress herself because of rheumatism, but that "Gloria Tonic" has completely cured her. Mr. George Lobb, of Dundas, Ont., says that he tried many different remedies, but found no relief until he tried "Gloria Tonic," while Clarence A. Scott writes from Tonkin, N.B., that he feels that he owes his life to this great remedy.

A case of 25 years' suffering is reported by James McFarlan, of L'Amable, Ont., but "Gloria Tonic" cured it quickly. Even prominent physicians have to admit that "Gloria Tonic" is a positive success, among them Doctor Quintelo of the University of Venezuela, to whom it was recommended by the United States Consul. In hundreds of other instances the result has been the same. It cured many cases which defied Hospitals, Drugs and Electricity, among them persons of upwards eighty years of age.

Mr. Smith will send a 50c box FREE also his illustrated book on rheumatism, absolutely free of charge, to any reader of The Examiner, for he is anxious that everybody should profit by his good fortune. Simply tear out this advertisement and send it together with your name and address, to

THE NEW SPRING WASH FABRICS

THIS INITIAL EXHIBITION embodies the very life and spirit of Spring. The crisp newness of the materials, the light and airy daintiness of the patterns, the delicate, Spring-like hues and colourings, all combine to make this display irresistibly attractive and worthy of the deep interest it is certain to excite.

As a forecast of the coming fashions this showing is of much importance to you. It is not limited in scope as are most Spring displays held at this period, but is splendidly broad and comprehensive.

One point that we wish to emphasize is the fact that our prices are quite moderate, and are based on the same straight-forward system in force throughout our store at all times, even though this merchandise is now and not attainable elsewhere.

This exhibition is now ready for your critical inspection. We urge you to inspect it to-day.

SPECIAL ARTICLES ON FANNY CROSBY'S LIFE

Written for The Examiner by Ray Gilray, Who Met Her a Few Years Ago

Sunday schools everywhere will set aside the 24th of March as a special "Fanny Crosby Sunday." On that day she will, if spared be 92 years old, and, despite her age, she continues to add to her already large contribution of over 7,000 sacred songs.

There are to-day used in religious meetings more of her inspired lines than any other poet living or dead. She is easily the greatest writer of hymns the world has produced.

As a result of her blindness she has always lived a comparatively retired life, and few have had the opportunity of knowing her personally.

In order that readers of the Examiner may have an opportunity of studying her remarkable life, arrangements have been made with "Ray Gilray," who met her in New York a few years ago, to furnish two articles on her life next week, which should prove invaluable to the Sunday school workers of Peterborough.

BUGLE BAND MINSTREL SHOW WAS AN UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

A Varied Repertoire, Strong Chorus and Well Balanced Olio Took the House by Storm—Soloists Made a Hit

One of the finest amateur productions that has been seen in this city for some time, was presented to a capacity audience at the Armouries, last evening, in the form of the Bugle Band minstrel show. The event was a distinct triumph, and judging by the frequent and hearty applause, the large audience found the entertainment thoroughly to their liking. Well rendered solos, rapid-fire dialogue, and a well handled olio made up a programme that never wavered in interest. The performers demonstrated to a marked degree, individually and collectively, their ability in this particular evet. The programme, which was carried out smoothly, was full of pleasant surprises that drew rounds of applause from the gathering.

Probably one of the strongest features on the bill was the choruses. These, when as well produced as they were last evening, never fail to arouse the musical interest of an audience. The chorus was under the able direction of Conductor Beech, who has himself to congratulate upon the successful issue of this performance.

The programme, in part, was as follows:

First Part.

"I'd Love to Live in Loveland" ..... W. Allen.
"Just an Old Friend of the Family" ..... A. Spenceley.
"When Cupid Comes A-tapping" ..... Percy Neill.
"Alexander's Rag-Time Band" ..... W. Fitzgerald
"Down by the Old Mill Stream" ..... Asa Huycks
"If I'm Going to Die" ..... M. Drysdale.
"I Want a Girl" ..... T. Sarginson.
B. B. B. B. Boys—
"My Name is Morgan" ..... W. Sharpe.
"All Alone" ..... E. Lebarr.
"The Mysterious Rag" ..... P. Stock.
"Silver Threads Among the Gold" ..... W. Edwards.
Art Quartette—Mr. Walton, Mr. Miller, Mr. Zepp, Mr. Cunningham—
"Sleep Contentedly, Babe" .....
"Honey, I will Long for You." .....
Grant Rightmyre.
"The Colville Coon Cadets" .....
W. Spenceley.

Second Part.

In Actual Use No Tea Is Cheaper Than The 40¢

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Butter And Eggs Lower

Eggs Went Down to 24c and Butter to 31c—Oranges Plentiful and Cheap

POTATOES STILL $2.00

On the market this morning hundreds of the women of Peterborough paid twenty-five and twenty-four cents a dozen for eggs and dealers who buy in this district would offer farmers nothing better than twenty cents. The dealers buy large quantities for shipment to the city markets and of course expect a profit. The farmers know by this time where the best prices are usually to be found and look for a better price on the market.

This morning the showing of eggs was large ,and although the price opened at 25 and most of the sales until eleven o'clock were made at that figure, there were some who accepted 24 cents. A retail grocer stated to an Examiner reporter that retailers are not buying heavily in order to protect themselves against a declining market.

Butter at 35c. to 32c.

Butter opened at 35c. and a large quantity was sold before some of those who probably fancied they were not selling their goods quickly enough reduced the price to 33 cents, and then to 32 cents. The offering of butter was liberal.

Potatoes Still Firm.

Potatoes held firmly at from $1.80 to $2.00. It is a coincidence that familiar faces are seen from week to week offering potatoes, although they make the statement that spuds are scarce. No doubt it is a fact but some of the individual farmers appear to have good supplies. One farmer said: "I've sold all my load but three bags at $2.00." He had about 20 bags or more and his receipts for the day totalled at that rate over $40. Verily, potatoes are worth drawing to market these days.

Oranges Are Cheap.

"Here you are ladies, two dozen oranges for a quarter. Don't go home without them at this price." So sang a dealer who spoke somewhat above a whisper. Oranges at that figure are cheaper than some of the best apples according to dealers for Northern Spies are certainly worth more than a cent a piece just now.

Mr. W J. Oke when asked as to the reason for the low price of oranges, stated that there has been a heavy crop of Navels and Mexicans which must be disposed of quickly. The shipments from California have been unusually large and lovers of this fruit can buy them at particularly favourable prices just now. Oranges for marmalade are selling fine.

Wood Was High.

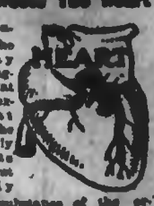
Apparently those farmers who bring wood into the city have received an inkling that there is a scarcity of wood as has been reported in some papers. One load of maple was ticketed at $7.00 and another at $8. Dickering appeared to be out of the question. It was a case of take it or leave it. Quite a few left it.

There was not much change in the quotations on fowl and meat. Poultry was not very plentiful, neither were purchasers of it. Prices quoted were as follows:

Butter, per lb., 32 to 35 cents.
Eggs, per doz., 24 to 25c.
Chickens, per pair, 75c. to $1.20.
Chickens, each, 40c. to 75 cents.
Turkeys, each $2.50 to $3.00.
Potatoes per bag, $1.90 to $2.00.
Pork, per lb., fresh 11 cents; hinds 12 cents.
Beef, chuck 8 to 9 1-2c.; hinds 9 to 9 1-2c.
Lamb, fronts 10c.; hinds 14c.
Mutton, 12c. to 13c.
Dressed hogs, $8.75.
Live hogs, $6.75.
Loose hay, $14 to $16.
Baled hay, $17.50.
Farmers' hides, 9c.
Butchers' hides, 7½c.
Hardwood, per load, $7 to $8.

DANGERS OF FAT

How Fat Affects The Heart



Fatty Degeneration of the Heart may well be a bugbear to all fat people. An excess of fat around the heart not only impedes its movements, but gradually changes the substance of the organ. The pulse becomes weaker; excitement or extra exertion causes throbbing in throat and temples; the breath is short and gaspy. When these symptoms come to the man or woman who is too fat, steps should be taken to remove the excess fat, not only from the suffocated heart, but from other parts of the body where it makes its unwelcome appearance. Many so-called fat reducers are dangerous to the fatty heart, placing upon it an added burden by stimulating its action. There is but one sure, harmless fat reducer known, the new famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit physician, and its more convenient form, Marmola Prescription Tablets. By means of these harmless little tablets, thousands of overfat people have surely and safely reduced their weight at the rate of 10 to 15 oz. a day without exercise or dieting.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists, or the Marmola Company, 853 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., at $1.00 for a large case.

First Clue To Whereabouts Of Man Who Disappeared In 1854

Examiner Goes to a Home in Cornwall, England, and Suggests a Place Where Investigation May Afford Some News—Never Returned to Old Home

POSSIBLY CALIFORNIA

Across a span of nearly sixty years, a copy of The Examiner brought the first ray of hope to members of the Deason family, in Cornwall, England, that they might obtain some information of two relatives who went to sea in the early fifties, and failed to return to their old home.

This copy of The Examiner links two generations, after all hope had long since been abandoned of picking up a clue that would offer any information as to how fortune had dealt with the two brothers who went out into the world from their native Cornwall.

THE NEWSPAPER CLIPPING

In the issue of The Examiner on December 22nd, 1910, an article appeared from Cassell's Saturday Journal, describing some of the largest gold nuggets that miners had found and the manner in which they had been discovered. The following was part of the article:

"Among the thousands who flocked to the Victorian gold fields in the early fifties were two Cornish miners, John Deason and Richard Oates, who staked a claim near the village of Moliaque. Many years passed, and found them still as far removed from fortune as at the beginning, and by 1869, fifteen years after they began a search for gold, they were reduced to the last straits.

"In despair the miner (supposedly Deason) seized his pick, and wandered away to the outskirts of the gold field and as he wandered downcast and downhearted, he noticed a gleam of yellow in a rut made by a peddler's cart. Lifting his pick, with a few frantic blows he brought to light an enormous nugget which with all his strength, he could barely raise an inch from the ground. The nugget which was soon known to the world as 'The Welcome Stranger,' actually weighed two hundredweight, and was sold for nearly $60,000."

Mr. Thomas Deason of McClennan Street, Peterborough, read the article in The Examiner, and sent a copy to a relative in Cornwall, W. H. Deason, who is a grandson of a brother of the member of the family that left Cornwall on a sailing ship.

LETTER FROM CORNWALL

The following extracts from a letter received in reply explain themselves: "My grandfather on whose behalf I am writing informs me that he had two brothers who left here many years ago, and have not been heard from since. The eldest of the two was the first to go and was apprenticed on a ship. He made one voyage abroad and back again. Then he went away again for a foreign port, at which he ran away, and it is more than likely that he went to the gold fields (California) and by the date in the cutting from the Examiner about the one who found the nugget, he landed in the year 1854. It would be in the fifties his brother landed on deserting his ship, so I cannot but think this has to do with my grandfather who is the eldest Deason in these parts. Will you kindly give me all the information you have and tell me if you can where I might make further enquiries. Yours truly, W. H. Deason."

The Deason family lives at the Strand, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, Cornwall.

Since the time this letter was written (nearly a year ago) enquiries have been made but so far nothing definite has been found to tell the story of the Deason, apparently the man who made the family name famous by finding "The Welcome Stranger."

The clipping from The Examiner has stirred up a faint hope that the story that appeared is that of the after life of one or other of the brothers who disappeared and also to find out whether any fortune was left by them. It is a long span back to the fifties and sixties, and the intervening decades and in the newly opened Californian gold fields many things occurred of which no records remain. Still facts are sometimes stranger than fiction and it may be the present members of the family will be able to trace the wanderings of the son who sought the land in the distant west for his fortune, and never returned to his Cornish home.

Perfect Fitting Corsets
are Absolutely Necessary

To be stylishly dressed one's corsets must fit perfectly. Not every woman realizes the importance of the corset but on the corset depends everything.

If the corset is not right in every detail and if it does not fit perfectly, the foundation of one's appearance cannot be correct. Therefore it is necessary to choose carefully the corset and to select the type best suited to the individual figure. The new models found in our showing reflect the latest dictate of fashion, conform to the lines of the natural figure and produce the graceful, straight silhouette of the present vogue.

We specialize on "American Lady" the leading American Corsets. "D. & A." the foremost Canadian product and "Oemo" Form Reducing for the woman inclined towards embonpoint.

Choose your corsets before having your new spring gowns fitted. You will find us splendidly prepared to supply you with "Perfect Fitting Corsets" in which you can live in comfort and still comply with fashion's demands.

go to Mr. Whitney and have him change the law."

After a pause of about a minute's duration the witness admitted having procured the liquor at the Grand Hotel, conducted by Mr. Chas. Nixon.

Chief—"Is that correct."

"That's correct," asserted the witness.

Chief—"Were you supplied over the bar?"

Witness—"Yes."

Chief—"At what time?"

Witness — Shortly after seven o'clock"

Chief — "How many drinks had you?"

Witness—"About ten lagers."

Chief—"Were you served by more than one bartender?"

Witness—"Yes; two."

Chief—"Were any questions asked as to how old you were?"

Witness—"Yes. One of the bartenders asked me if I were 21."

Chief—"What did you say?"

Witness—"Certainly."

Witness described one of the bartenders as being a short, stout fellow. He also admitted having been served lagers by one of the bartenders without any questions being asked as to his age. It was not until he called for a whiskey from another bartender that he was questioned as to his age. He alsoadmitted having secured liquor in the Grand Hotel on several occasions before.

The defendant, who possesses a youthful appearance, was fined $2 and costs, amounting in all to $4.60.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR AT SMALL COST

A Simple Remedy Beautifies the Hair, Cures Dandruff, Stops Falling Hair.

What a pity it is to see so many people with thin, wispy hair, faded or streaked with gray, and realize that most of these people might have soft, glossy, abundant hair of beautiful colour and lustre if they would but use the proper treatment. There is no necessity for gray hair under sixty-five years of age, and there is no excuse for anyone, young or old, having thin, straggling hair, either full of dandruff or heavy and rank and smelling with excessive oil.

You can bring back the natural colour of your hair in a few days and forever rid yourself of any dandruff and loose hairs, and make your hair grow strong and beautiful by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. For generations common garden Sage has been used for restoring and preserving the colour of hair; and Sulphur is recognized by Scalp Specialists as being excellent for treatment of hair and scalp troubles.

If you are troubled with dandruff or itching scalp, or if your hair is losing its colour or coming out, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and notice the improvement in the appearance of your hair after a few days' treatment. Special agent, Warne Drug Co.

UNDERWRITERS HOLD REGULAR MEETING

The Life Insurance Underwriters Association of Central Ontario held their regular monthly meeting at Hooper's restaurant last evening.

After dinner, which was served at six o'clock, Mr. D. H. Moore gave a very interesting talk, dealing with the relative values of real estate as an investment. Many people in New York he said, only make one and a half per cent. on their real estate investments. He went on to explain that in the long run insurance was a better investment and yielded larger returns in many cases.

Mr. J. F. Weston, a prominent insurance man of Toronto, was also a speaker.

WEDDING BELLS

ORCHARD—NOYES.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Central Baptist church, Rochester, on Thursday evening last, when Miss Carrie Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noyes of East City, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Orchard, of Rochester. The Rev. Mr. Russ performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony the bride and bridegroom repaired to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John Cole, of 275 Field Street, Rochester, where a sumptuous repast was participated in. The happy couple arrived in Peterborough this morning on a visit to the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orchard were the recipients of many costly and beautiful presents. The bride received from the employees of the Armstrong Boot and Shoe factory (at which establishment she was formerly employed) a magnificent silver jardinier, and the fellow employees of the bridegroom presented him with a half-dozen handsome dining-room chairs and a set of silver knives and forks.

Mr. and Mrs. Orchard were also presented with a number of showers prior to their departure for Peterborough.

FINE OF $20 IMPOSED.

Illicit Fishing Case Settled To-day.

The fish case, in which the proprietor of the Oriental Hotel was charged with having several pounds of fish unlawfully in his possession, was settled to-day. Fisheries Inspector Watt imposed a fine of $20, thereby settling a case which has been pending for one week.

STILL FORGING AHEAD.

The indications are that the end of the fiscal year, March 31st, will show a Canadian surplus of revenue of thirty-five million dollars, within one million dollars of the total revenue of the Dominion fifteen years ago. In eleven months of this year the revenue has increased more than 16 million dollars. Canada is still forging ahead under the momentum of the forward impulse given by fourteen years of live Liberal government.

A REQUEST FROM THE DIRECTORS

The Directors of the Peterborough Protestant Home would be much obliged if all those who have so kindly promised donations to the Building Fund of the new Home, would send in their cheques at their earliest possible convenience. The building is nearing completion and heavy payments will have to be made in the near future.

All cheques may be sent to Mrs. Robert Neill, or Canon Davidson, 280 Hunter street.

A MOTHER'S DUTY TO HER DAUGHTER

Her Health Must Be Carefully Guarded as She Comes to Womanhood

Every mother who calls to mind her own girlhood knows how urgently her daughter is likely to need help and strength during the years between early school days and womanhood. Then it is that growing girls droop, become fragile, bloodless and nervous. Nature is calling for more nourishment than the blood can supply, and signs of distress are plainly evident in dull eyes, pallid cheeks, weak and aching backs, a languid step, fits of depression, nervousness and a dislike for proper food. These signs mean anaemia—thin bloodlessness.

Th. watchful mother takes prompt steps to give her girl the new, rich blood her weak system is thirsting for by giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because so many thousands of feeble, anaemic, unhappy girls have been transformed into robust women through the rich, red blood these pills actually make. No other medicine has ever succeeded like them, and thousands of mothers have proved their worth. The case of Miss Marguerite Boisclair, St. Jerome, Que., proves the truth of these statements. Miss Boisclair is sixteen years of age, and says that since the age of thirteen or fourteen she had been afflicted with extreme weakness, and seemed to be going into a decline. The least effort left her weak and breathless, so that she was unable to do any household work. She had no appetite, suffered from terrible headaches, dizziness and sometimes fainting spells. She was under medical treatment, but made absolutely no improvement, in fact seemed to be steadily growing weaker. When her case seemed most hopeless a lady friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few boxes she began to gain new strength, and after the continued use of the pills for about two months she was again as well and strong as ever she had been, and has since enjoyed the best of health.

Sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MR. LINCOLN BRACE'S CONDITION IMPROVED

The friends of Mr. Lincoln Brace, formerly of Peterborough and now of Winnipeg, will be much relieved to know that his condition is improved and there is hope held out for his recovery. He has been very ill of late and several rumours were heard in regard to his condition. Mr. Brace has been general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in Winnipeg. Mr. W. J. Henry received a telegram this morning that assured his friends.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered but now I am entirely cured."

REMEMBERED BY THE BUGLE BAND MEMBERS

At the conclusion of the Bugle Band's Minstrel Show last night, the members presented Miss Lavinia Beach with a handsome bracelet. Miss Beach has very acceptably performed the duties of musical directoress for the minstrel production. Mr. Walter Fitzgerald made the presentation and neatly expressed the appreciation felt by the members of the Bugle Band for the interest Miss Beach had taken in the preparation and presentation. Miss Beach gracefully acknowledged the remembrance.

OBITUARY

EDA HORSFIELD.

The death occurred in Nichols Hospital at 7 o'clock this morning of Eda, daughter of Mr. George Horsfield, of 468 Donegal street.

The deceased lady, who was thirty-three years of age, was born in Oldham, England, and came to Canada with her parents when only three years of age. She has been a resident of the city for twenty-one years. Her long and painful illness was born with patience and fortitude and those who lament her demise are not few.

In addition to her sorrowing parents, she is survived by four sisters and two brothers, namely, Alice, Agnes, Jane, Emily, Charles and Arthur.

The funeral will take place at two o'clock on Monday afternoon at the Little Lake cemetery.

MR. ALEXANDER DAWSON.

No further particulars have been received here concerning the death of Mr. Alexander Dawson, in Vancouver, as chronicled in the Examiner yesterday.

The late Mr. Dawson was well-known in the city, having resided here for many years prior to his departure for the coast. He formerly resided in East City, where for years Dawson emigrated to this country Dowson emigrated to this country from Scotland, when but a young man, first settling with his father, near Cobourg. Later, he removed to Peterborough, where he resided up to the time of his departure for the Coast, two years ago. In 1897 he was united in marriage to Miss Lucy Barber, of Cobourg, who predeceased him three years ago. Seven children (six sons and one daughter) are left to bless the union. They are: Edward, Albert, Herbert, Henry, James and George. They are all located in the West, with the exception of George, who resides in Montreal. Miss Alice Dawson, the only daughter, lived with her father. Two sisters also survive. They are Mrs. James Russell of 418 Sheridan street, Peterborough, and Mrs. Wm. Russell of Brandon.

The late Mr. Dawson was in his 62nd year, and during his residence here, was a promient and influential member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

INDIAN WAS INTOXICATED.

Was Placed Under Arrest While Performing on George Street.

An Indian was apprehended this afternoon by P. C. Meagher on George street. He was under the influence of liquor, which in the case of an Indian is a direct contravention of the Liquor Act. In all probability he will be asked to divulge the names of the parties who supplied him with the fire water, on Monday.

MR. HENRY STRICKLAND APPOINTED

By Hydro Electric Commission in Charge of Electric Installation

The Toronto Saturday Night says: The Hydro Electric Commission has undertaken to put electric installation on a sound basis. In doing so they have chosen the most experienced man in Ontario and placed him in charge. We believe this was a case of the job seeking the man and finding the right one in Mr. Henry Strickland, formerly in charge of electrical inspection for the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association.

Mr. Strickland was born in Peterborough in the year 1870. For seven years he has been connected with the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, and he has always been known as a very thorough and strict disciplinarian so far as carrying out the requirements of the Association went, but I have never heard that he was either oppressive or unreasonable in his conduct. When Mr. Strickland started to make a specialty of his line of business, electric wiring in Toronto was in a very bad condition, while to-day the standard has been brought up to equal almost anywhere. The many friends and business associates of Mr. Strickland regard him as a real authority on the underwriters' requirements, and he has been the recipient of many congratulations on his well-deserved promotion.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 6K1610 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

LAST DAY FOR BALLOTING ON CHURCH UNION.

MARMORA WIN TRENT VALLEY TITLE BEAT LAKEFIELD BY 5 GOALS TO 2

Northerners Gave Ultimate Winners the Hardest Kind of a Battle and the Game Was a Good Exhibition

HALF TIME SCORE 4 TO 2

The Marmora - Lakefield sudden death game at Brock Street Rink last night for the Trent Valley championship resulted as expected—that is, Marmora won the game and the silverware. What was not on the calendar, however, was the fact that the Lakefield team gave the much-heralded aggregation from down the line the hardest kind of a battle, and the score of 5 to 2 in favour of the Easterners does not represent the play by a long shot. The Cementville bunch had every bit as much of the doings as had the ultimate winners and had they had any breaks at all might have upset the calculations of the wise ones.

Peterborough fans, and there was a big bunch of them there, too, along with two hundred bugs from Marmora and half that number from Lakefield, were, to put it mildly, disappointed in the showing of the Marmora squad. From the despatches from the East, the impression was gathered that the Marmora team was the real thing in speed and general hockey ability. They showed a good Trent Valley team—that was all. There was speed and good stick-handling in evidence in their work, but they did not impress one as an effective hockey machine. There was no combination—the forwards while good individuals, roamed all over the ice, their shooting was indifferent, and their defence methods somewhat haphazard, with the point man a second goal keeper, and the cover an assistant rover. It seemed to be the general impression before the game that they would outclass Lakefield but they utterly failed to do so. In everything but scoring there was nothing to choose between the two teams and had the Cementville boys showed more generalship in the attack the result might have been reversed as they had opportunities enough to pull the game out of the fire. The Simpson gang checked vigorously and effectively, coming back on every occasion to help out their defence, and they were effective individually on the attack but there was no system. On too many occasions the other forwards lagged back and watched the man with the puck tear in alone and there was no one in front to take care of the rebounds. Neither team as a matter of fact was particularly aggressive in working in and there was too much long range shooting to please the students of hockey who insist that the game is not being played right unless the puck is carried in on top of the nets.

At that it was one great little game of hockey. Both teams gave all they had and the pace was fast and hard with no let-up from start to finish. Both outfits were pretty well all in when the final gong sounded and they were not helped much by the fact that the ice, good at first, soon grew sticky. The checking was close and the evenness of the play kept the eight hundred spectators on their feet all the way. It was easily the best Trent Valley game of the season on local ice. The supporters of the two teams proved lusty rooters. Peterborough people who went to the rink indifferent to the result, soon became aroused by the plucky work of the Lakefield bunch and cheered vigorously for the seven from the shores of Lake Katchewanooka.

Great interest was taken in the work of Reg Bloomfield, who played right wing for Marmora, and the Lakefield team paid special attention to the ex-Lakefield-Argonaut-Lindsay veteran. While he showed his old time speed, especially in checking back, he was looked after so closely that his rushes were rarely effective, although marked by the cunning stick-handling which made him famous. He was a marked man all evening, and when he succeeded in getting away from the Lakefield forwards, the defence generally chased him into the corners before he could do any harm. Naylor on the other wing was perhaps more effective and Jones and McWilliams in the centre had lots of speed at.d tore off some dodging runs. Tommy Deforge, the old T.A.S. player, was effective on the defence, and Gladney at point distinguished himself by picking up a host of shots, getting as many as goal keeper Crosby. The latter handled a number of heaves from close in in spectacular fashion, saving several times when goals seemed certain.

Every man on the Lakefield line-up worked heroically to hold the Easterners, and their checking was a treat. Blewett at rover and Simpson at centre, were the pick of the line, and both did some pretty rushing, although Simpson tired badly on end. Blewitt had some of the prettiest dashes of the night to his credit. Crawford and Rowe played an effective game and both rushed well, Crawford in particular showing speed and cleverness when he broke away. Hill in goal covered himself with glory by a brilliant exhibition, his work winning rounds of applause.

Harvey Sproule of Cobourg and Toronto, refereed the battle. He had an easy task as neither team showed any signs of wanting to adopt foul tactics.

The teams lined up as follows:

Each team rushed in from the face-off and the pace was dightning fast. Bloomfield was the first to break away and came down the side with a speedy rush, only to be shunted to the corner by Crawford and Rowe. Then Blewitt came back with a pretty rush down the centre, but his shot was wide. Hill got in close but Crosby stopped the shot. Finally, after three minutes' playing, Simpson passed back to Blewitt, from a face-off in front of the Marmora nets, and the rover beat Crosby with a nice shot, putting the Cementville bunch in front.

Marmora evened up in jig-time. Right from the face-off Jones tore down and through the Lakefield defence, fooling Hill with a shot from close in. Lakefield were not daunted and came back strong, outplaying Marmora for the next few minutes. Crawford got clean through on top of the nets, but Crosby picked off the shot in spectacular fashion. A moment later he made another splendid save when Simpson eluded his defence and went in on top of him. Naylor, of the Marmora team, was benched for tripping, but playing six to seven Marmora scored. some loose work in front of their nets by the Lakefield team, giving McWilliams an opening which he made good use of, putting the Easterners in front.

Back came Lakefield again, and only the hardest kind of luck prevented a score on several occasions. Crawford had another golden opportunity on one of his speedy rushes. but Clancy nailed his heave and then Crosby kicked out a close range shot from Simpson. Bloomfield rushed nicely several times, but Lakefield succeed in tying him up before he could get into scoring range. Hill was waved to the side-lines for tripping and Marmora made it 3 to 1. once more slowness in getting the rubber away from the Lakefield nets giving Jones possession close in and he succeeded in beating Hill. A few minutes after Bloomfield went in alone and going to the mouth of the st, slipped the rubber past Hill for Marmora's fourth goal. Lakefield had not given up by any means, and shortly after Simpson, by a pretty exhibition of stock-handling, carried the puck through four or five Marmora players and slipped it into the corner of the nets, leaving the score 4 to 2, which remained the figures at half-time.

Although the ice had become sticky there was no let-up in the pace after the rest. Lakefield had looked pretty tired when the half-time whistle sounded ad it was feared that they would "blow" in the second half, but they came back fresh as paint, and were all over the Bloomfield aggregation for the greater part of the half. The first few minutes saw Marmora bottled up with the Lakefield forwards humming around their nets. but they could not score. Finally Naylor broke away from this series of scrimmages and tore off a lightning rush, which, with a pass to Jones, at the right moment, ended in a couter. Marmora 5, Lakefield 2.

Once more Lakefield resumed the attack. They were tearing down on the Marmora nets all the time, but there was always something wrong in the attack. Crawford and Simpson were right in o a combination rush once, but Crosby saved, and Gladney took care of a host of shots from well out. Then Blewitt and Simpson were off for tripping, and with two men to the good, Marmora had all they could do to hold Lakefield out. Then the Easterners had their turn at being penalized, when Jones and Bloomfield were both chased to the side for trippig. It was a golden chance for Lakefield, but they failed to take advantage of the situation. The defence men, instead of chasing up on the attack, remained back, and Marmora had little trouble in holding out the forwards. until the sides were even again. Both teams had little left when the final gong sounded.

The summary:

1—Lakefield, Blewitt, 3 mins.
2—Marmora, Jone s,30 secs.
3—Marmora, McWilliams, 7 mins.
4—Marmora, Jones, 13 mins.
5—Lakefield, Simpson, 5 mins.

A Thousand Miles Through Snowdrifts

A Trip of Three HUPMOBILE Cars From Detroit to New York in the Dead of Winter.

None in the party was familiar with the road, but had this not been true, it would have been impossible to recognize landmarks, as the deep and driven snow had quite altered the aspect of the landscape.

So, after a night of hard driving—several times the wrong road was followed for considerable distances—Blenheim, an Ontario village, was reached as the first timid streaks of dawn crept shyly up the clouded sky.

The proprietor of the single hotel was roused after much thumping of the door and—though somewhat embarrassed to find extra sleeping quarters for six men—took the party in.

A nap of an hour and a half, or some such matter, and a hearty breakfast, and the cars were headed East again, having placed 72 miles behind them between 8:45 p. m. and 5:30 a. m.

The clouds of the morning made their promise good, and the wind drove the snow merrily and bitingly before it for the greater part of the day. The going was fairly good, however, and London was reached by nightfall.

No halt was made for supper, which was had later at the little town of Thamesford.

Between Thamesford and Ingersoll, the next town of considerable size, and where it was decided to spend the night, the distance is three miles and a half.

ALLAN CUP BATTLE WILL BE WON OR LOST ON THE WINGS

Eatons Went to Bed Confident Last Night—They Are Pleased to Get the Last Game Under Their Own Rules and Will Not Worry If They Are Behind To-night.

Special to The Examiner.

(By Lou Marsh, Toronto Star Sporting Editor).

WINNIPEG, MAN., MARCH 9.—Though they face the Allan Cup defenders under adverse conditions, the Ontario Champions will have no excuses if they are beaten to-night unless indeed something unsoward in treatment by officials or crowd, occurs, and that, of course, is something no one anticipates.

Every man Jack on the crew is in fine fettle. I never saw a bunch of athletes go to bed so confident of victory as the Eaton seven did, last night. Ever since Capt. Frank Rankin was taken ill there has been an undercurrent of unrest in the team, and this was not negatived until yesterday, when Rankin went on the ice and showed them that he is back in his old form. I haven't altered my opinion a fraction. I have looked them both over and still think that all down the centre, from goal to goal, the Eatons are the Vics. equal in speed, trickiness, courage, and everything else that goes to make up hockey players and that on the wings is where the battle will be won and lost. Bawlf and Baker have the "legs" of Richardson or Foyston. but what they will do under the close checking of this pair of hornets from the east is problematical. If they can both outpace and outlast the sturdy Torontonians that will tell the tale. The Eaton team are tickled that they get the last game under their own rules. They feel that under their own rules they will be three or four goals better than under western rules, and will not worry much if they are a goal or two behind to-night.

Mr. Eaton dined both the Vics and the Toronto team last night. It was noticeable that the Easterners were more at ease than western players. The Eatons' total weight is 973. Eatons' average weight is 139 6-7 lbs. Vics. total weight, 990; Vics. average weight 142 6-7. These are the weights given to me to-day and should disprove the general fallacy that the Eatons are a heavier club.

Walter Andrews, the Canadian Cycling champion, who will represent the Dominion in the bicycle events at the Olympic games in Stockholm.

THE LEADERS WILL MEET

Big Game in the Mercantile League To-night

There is great interest in to-night's important game in the Mercantile League, and there promises to be a big crowd on hand when the Bell Telephone and Tool Room teams clash. A win for the Hello people gives them the championship. On the other hand the C. G. E. bunch can tie up the race by beating the leaders to-night, in which case there will have to be a play-off. Both teams will have their strongest line-up to-night. The game is called at 7 o'clock with W. McClavey as referee.

RAPID GROWTH

For a city only three or four years old, Prince Rupert, the Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific can show private residences which might well be the envy of larger and more venerable communities. Three years ago the site of the first dwelling was rock and muskeg, to-day, there are well kept grounds, while lawns have been made where but a few seasons ago there was only bog and brush. It has been shown that grass, flowers and vines will flourish there to a most gratifying degree. As a matter of fact Prince Rupert in addition to becoming a great commercial centre, will be one of the most desirable residental cities of Canada in the near future. Not only does Kaien Island abound in sites of rare outlook but the long ridges, the hills and spacious heights that characterize the city from Seal Cove to Fairview yields unrivalled opportunities ofr the home beautiful. Finally its environment is admirably adapted to outing and wholesome recreation.

If we tailored this Suit to your order—

SUPPOSE you asked us to make you a Suit, incorporating your ideas of what a Suit should be?—

Would you say "This is just what I wanted" if we delivered you a Semi-ready Suit like this—

A Suit with the tailor-made, stylish appearance in a modern and modest pattern.

A Suit that fits your figure, harmonizes with your height in the correct length from shoulder to waist.

In all, a Suit that you know is your ideal the minute you see it on you.

That is Semi-ready Tailoring as we present it to you to-day. Ready to try-on; finished to your exact fit in an hour.

Wholesale tailoring, specializing tailors, and a great business organization keep the price of a good Suit down to a reasonable price. $15, $20, $25—these prices will still buy Semi-ready real Tailored Suits in these days of high prices.

Semi Ready

"The Suit that is Real."

Without this mark and the price in the pocket the Suit is only a cheap imitation. Real Semi-ready tailoring has the silk label, and the price in the pocket—the same price at which the same pattern sells everywhere in Canada.

EXPLOSION KILLED 7

At Winnipeg Fire on Saturday Night—Firemen And Spectators Caught in a Shower of Bricks

WORK OF FIREBUG

Winnipeg, March 11.—Seven persons are dead, one or more are possibly fatally injured, and a number suffered more or less serious injuries as the result of an explosion which followed an outbreak of fire in the rear of the Radford Wright Co., Limited, wholesale sash and door factory, 776 Main street, shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Captain Dewitt and six of his men of fire hall No. 3 were training hose on the back of the building, where the fire, supposed to be the work of an incendiary, had started in a lean-to annex, when, without warning, the back wall and the great doors opening on a spur track, were blown out, the little party going down in the wreck and ruin, which caught and overwhelmed several spectators and passersby.

The dead: E. Molyneux, fireman, No. 8 fire hall, caught by explosion, back broken, and died in St. Boniface Hospital shortly after midnight; Chas. McPherson, fireman, No. 3 hall caught by explosion and instantly killed; Walter Rowley, teamster, caught by explosion; L. J. Bluett, bartender at Manor Hotel, caught by explosion while passing; Charles Chapman, aged 12, caught by explosion; Clarence Winker, employe C.P.R. dining car department, fell through glass roof of passenger terminal; — Connolly, C.P.R. employe, killed by explosion or a live wire.

The injured: R. G. McDonald, fireman, No. 3 hall, fractured thigh and internally injured; condition serious; Chas. Schram, fireman, No. 3 hall, hand injured; J. McCannon, fireman, No. 3 hall, injured, but not seriously; F. Grant, spectator, injured by flying glass; Tony Schilosky, scalp wound, not serious; Antonio Naranto, spectator, fracture of skull, internal injuries, may die.

McPherson, whose father lives in Edinburgh, Scotland, was aged 20, and had been three years in the department. Molyneux, who had but recently joined, was aged 24 and a native of Listowell, County Kerry, Ireland. Of the other fatalities, Bluett, aged 28, of Napanee, Ont., and engaged to a Winnipeg girl, was passing when caught by the explosion. Rowley was assisting the firemen. Winker, aged 21, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Winker, 577 Strathcona street, this city, having been born in North Dakota, and for three years past had been in the employ of the C.P.R. dining car department, recently being promoted to the secretaryship of the head of the department.

Standing on the nine platform on top of the steel and glass roof covering the train shed to watch the blaze, which lay just below him just north of the subway on Main street, he stepped forward through the glass to his death on the pavement below.

Connolly, a C.P.R. employe, appears to have been struck by a falling wire on top of the subway. A boy, Clarence Chapman, whose parents live at 220 Patrick street, was found yesterday afternoon after the smoke had cleared away, dead, among the ruins.

"I was standing on a plank directing operations," said Capt. Dewitt, "and had a miraculous escape. McPherson and Molyneux being killed at my feet, while not a man else of our squad escaped uninjured. Tons of bricks and doors fell around us. The men were caught without a chance to escape."

A big crowd gathered when the alarm went in, but were for the most part massed about the entrance to the subway in front of the building, which is situated between the International Harvester Co.'s big warehouse on the southwest corner of Main and Sutherland, and the Stuart Machinery Co.

Smoke was issuing from the lean-to at the back, but until the explosion came the firemen appeared to have the situation under control.

For a time it was a question whether the adjoining buildings could be saved, but the stout fire walls proved sufficient and with the help of the high pressure plant the brigade had the situation under control shortly after midnight, though neighboring buildings suffered considerable loss from water and smoke.

A firebug undoubtedly was the cause, according to those who should know. Manager Radford claims that the furnace was out until Monday, while Building Inspector Rodgers says an incendiary had been working some days in that district. Seven alarms were rung in Saturday night, all bearing the mark of the firebug.

Manager Radford says that less than two barrels of naphtha were stored in open tanks, by permission, 28 feet away from the rear wall. Capt. Dewitt thinks the smoke and heat engendered in the tight building, together with the stock of varnishes and shellac, sufficient cause. The building, four years old, is a total loss, the owner being W. Johnston, now in California, and is fully insured.

Loss to the Radford Wright Co. is $50,000, fully insured. Loss to adjoining buildings is not yet estimated

BOURASSA PROTESTS

Against Manner in Which School Question in Keewatin Has Been Handled by Government

MR. CAHAN SUPPORTS HIM

Montreal, March 11.—The inalienable rights of minorities in all parts of Canada to have separate schools was the message sent forth in the form of a resolution unanimously adopted at a mass meeting of French-Canadians held Saturday night at the Monument National.

Although the opening speakers declared that the gathering was not to be one of protest and that there were to be no diatribes, Henri Bourassa, the chief orator of the evening, took strong exception to the attitude of Hon. Messrs. Monk, Pelletier and Nantel.

It was not sufficient, he declared, for these gentlemen or their followers to point to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Manitoba incident of 1896 to justify themselves. Two wrongs did not make a right, and even granting that Sir Wilfrid had betrayed his compatriots in the Manitoba matter, this could not be urged as an excuse to cover the members of the present Government in the betrayal of the rights of a French-Canadian minority.

There was a huge crowd present and attacks upon the Government "which was about to betray the rights of the French-Catholic minority" caused constant roars of applause. The mention of the name of Monk, Pelletier or Nantel brought storms of hooting until finally Mr. Bourassa arose and stated that it would perhaps be well to withhold such violent denunciation until the bill had passed its third reading and the final attitude of the Ministers in question had been more fully debated and explained.

Mr. Armand Laverge also spoke.

Somewhat of a sensation was caused by C. H. Cahan, who declared that, if the rights of the minority were about to be violated, the French-Canadians had only themselves to blame for it, as Laurier, by the Greeway precedent, had inserted the thin edge of the wedge, yet they had ever since continued to give him magnificent support at the polls.

The resolution adopted reads:

"The Northwest Territories have been acquired, administered and developed with public funds taken from the federal exchequer and contributed by Canadian ratepayers of all races and creeds.

"In 1875 the principle was laid down, by the Parliament of Canada, that throughout the length and breadth of those territories, the minorities, either Catholic or Protestant, would be entitled forever and as a matter of right, to separate denominational schools.

"That principle was acknowledged and confirmed either in whole or in part, in the Yukon Act and in the laws creating the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

"Consequently this meeting, composed of Canadian citizens, loyal subjects of His Britannic Majesty, declare and affirm:

"That in annexing a part of those territories to the Province of Manitoba, or to any other province, the Parliament of Canada is in duty bound to keep the pledge solemnly given in 1875 to all the citizens of Canada and safeguard in their integrity the rights of such minorities as exist or may in the future exist in the annexed country;

"That any violation of that pledge and betrayal of that duty, would constitute a grave breach of the federal pact and deserve the condemnation of all Canadians, willing to stand by national honor, equity and justice."

French Need Not Worry.

Montreal, March 11.—Mr. G. Langlois, M.P.P., is still endeavoring to show his compatriots that they need not bother themselves about Keewatin schools.

"For our part," says Mr. Langlois, "we have always repudiated the campaign against the old chieftain because of the Laurier-Greenway arrangement, and we do not regret the present situation.

"The ten French-Canadians in Keewatin will be under the same law as Manitoba, and will have much better schools than those of St. Andre de Kamouraska. Our compatriots in the French parishes of Manitoba have had first-class primary schools since 1894, and although the situation of the French-Canadians in Winnipeg is a good deal less satisfactory, yet tact and good-will and an absence of hotheads will bring about in time an absolutely acceptable situation.

"If our people are really desirous of improving the school situation let them begin at home."

Will Do No Good.

Montreal, March 11.—La Patrie, in a leading article on Saturday, warns Bourassa and his co-agitators that their talk will do no good to the minorities in the other provinces.

"What is there remaining to-day of the Riel movement?" asks La Patrie. "The campaign in this province over the Manitoba schools, the Transvaal war, the school question in Alberta and Saskatchewan, the naval bill and the rest. Who can say with their hand on their heart that the French groups in the other provinces have profited by all this agitation?

"As a matter of fact, their position has become more difficult and more precarious from year to year. Are we stronger or more respected for all this agitation? Has French influence made any gains? We put these questions in all sincerity to those who reflect and who love their country."

Break in Water Main.

Toronto, March 11.—As a result of the broken water main at the corner of Bathurst and London streets at 11.40 Saturday morning torrents of water flooded the cellars of the houses in that neighborhood and ran down Bathurst street, stopping all traffic until about 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon, when the tide was stemmed. When the main burst the pressure of water tore up the pavement above and gushed out with a tremendous roar which startled the people in the neighborhood. It poured down the slight incline of Bathurst street, running into cellar windows and doing damage the extent of which has not yet been ascertained.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

A new cure for cancer is reported from Russia, which is said to have attained a measure of success.

Capt. Amundsen in an interview at Hobart states he saw no trace of Captain Scott during the time he was at the South Pole.

Homer Wilson of Windsor caught his foot in the railway track while working in the C.P.R. yard and was run down and killed.

Fire at the Cecil Hotel, Hamilton, caused a little excitement last night about 9.45. The blaze is said to have been caused by rats gnawing matches.

The London Electric Co. offers to light the streets of that city for three thousand dollars less than the rates charged under the Hydro-electric system.

The Catholics of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will send delegates to a Winnipeg meeting to oppose the boundary bill on the separate school issue.

A strike throughout the Ruhr region of Prussia yesterday, was overwhelmingly voted at a meeting of the delegates representing three coal miners' organisations.

J. B. McNamara, serving a life sentence in San Quentin, Cal., Penitentiary, is dying from tuberculosis, and J. J. McNamara, his brother, serving a fifteen-year term, is in poor health.

Damage amounting to about $6,000 was caused by a fire which broke out in the basement of the building occupied by the Canadian Carpet & Comforter Co., 369-375 Dufferin street, Toronto.

Three bylaws carried at Owen Sound—one to bonus the drydock and shipbuilding company, another to provide a site for a new rubber factory, and the third to exempt the cement company from taxation.

The Governor-General, chief scout of the Canadian boy scouts, has appointed Mr. Gerald H. Brown, to succeed Capt. R. J. Birdwhistle, as honorary Dominion secretary of the scouts movement in Canada.

A women aviator, Suzanne Bernard, was killed yesterday at Etampes, France, while undergoing examination for a pilot's license. She was only 19 years of age and had successfully passed most of the tests.

The death occurred at Brockville of James D. McDonnell, a well-known customs broker, in his 79th year. Deceased was a son of Col. John McDonnell, who commanded a regiment of the Dundas militia in the war of 1812.

Niagara's great ice mountain was forbidden to tourists on Sunday because a mammoth crack split it fairly through the centre. A half mountain of solid ice threatens to fall into the river in front of the American falls.

Power Plans Filed.

Ottawa, March 11.—New plans were filed Saturday at the Carleton County registry office in connection with the expropriation of the Chats Falls by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

To these plans are attached a description in full of the land which will be expropriated by the Ontario Government. This includes the Government slide reserve on Victoria Island. To the plans there is also attached a copy of the order-in-council, signed by Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Foul Play Suspected

Battered Corpse Found in a Hamilton Shed—Drunk on Saturday Afternoon

INQUEST ORDERED

Hamilton, March 11.—In the death of John Quigley, a laborer, aged 37 years, whose bruised body was found in an outhouse at the rear of 231 Wellington street north, at 9.30 yesterday morning, the police suspect foul play. According to physicians, the man, when found by John Costen, had been dead for many hours. When Costen tried to open the door it was locked on the outside, and, when it was smashed in Quigley was found squeezed on the floor, lifeless.

An inquest, which was opened Saturday afternoon, disclosed the fact that there was a large bruise on his arm and the skin was scraped, and the left knee was also badly bruised. Other parts of the body were in normal condition.

It has been learned that Quigley left the Norton Manufacturing Co., where he was employed, early Saturday afternoon. He met two men, Alex. Clark and David Gillinnan. They were all indulging in intoxicants. They left the Quigley flats in the afternoon. No one could be found who saw Quigley on Saturday night.

The enquiry into the peculiar circumstances in connection with the man's death will be resumed some time during this week. Quigley was unmarried and roomed at 353 Wellington street north.

Two Russians Wounded.

North Bay, March 11.—A row in the Italian quarter Saturday night between Russians and Italians, resulted in a stabbing affray in which two Russians were seriously wounded. One of the injured men is in the hospital with a gash sixteen inches long in his back. He will recover if no complications occur. The other Russian was stabbed near the heart, but the knife struck a rib and did not penetrate far enough to be fatal.

The Rusians claim they went into an Italian house looking for lodgings and were immediately attacked without cause. Two Italians were identified and arrested.

The prisoners arrived here recently from Toronto, and are looked upon as dangerous characters.

Deserted by Guides.

New York, March 11.—Harry V. Radford, Arctic explorer, Fellow of the American Geographical Society and member of the Arctic Club, who left this city on Feb. 12, 1909, to engage in four years of exploration and hunting in Northern Canada, is reported to have been forsaken by his guides in the heart of the barren lands between Chesterfield Inlet on the northern end of Hudson Bay and Great Bear Lake, about 600 miles inland. He is believed to have been left without provisions and fear is expressed for his welfare.

A letter written by A. J. Bell, Canadian agent at Fort Smith, Northwest Territory, telling of Radford's plight, reached the Arctic Club here Saturday night. The letter, dated January 15 last, said Bell had received word that two Indians hired by Radford last summer to accompany him for one year to the barren lands had visited Fort Resolution last month and stated that they had deserted Radford last fall owing to a disagreement.

Yuan Is Inaugurated.

Pekin, March 11.—In the new Foreign Office yesterday Yuan Shi Kai was formally inaugurated Provisional President of the Republic of China in the presence of a great gathering of delegates, provincial envoys, military and naval officers and other prominent personages. Many foreigners attended the ceremony, but the legations were not represented.

Yuan Shi Kai, who was in military uniform, read a declaration promising faithfully to develop the republic, observe the constitutional laws and retire when the National Assembly appointed a permanent President. The ceremony was solemn—almost pathetic—typical of China's transition.

Most of those assembled were attired in uniform or European dress. The only touch of Orientalism was the presentation of the scarfs to Yuan by two yellow-robed Llamas.

When The Lungs Are Weak

To every person with weak lungs or who has a family history with records of consumption, a cough or cold is a serious matter.

Coughs have a tendency to hang on. They irritate the weakened membranes and prevent healing. There is always the danger that a cold may get a firm foothold and settle on the lungs. It is so easy under these conditions for pneumonia or consumption to develop.

About the surest means of controlling coughs and colds is by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This treatment loosens the cough, allays the irritation and inflammation and thoroughly overcomes the disagreeable symptoms. The success of this medicine has given rise to many imitations. It is only natural to suppose that the original possesses merit of an unusual degree.

Saskatchewan Ministers Ask Definite Right-of-Way Granted.

Regina, Sask., March 11.—Communications between the Provincial Government and the Ottawa Government continue to pass relative to Saskatchewan's claims to access to Hudson Bay, and on Saturday Acting Premier Calder despatched the following telegram to Premier Borden in reply to Premier Borden's wire of last Thursday, setting forth the position taken by his Cabinet towards the claims put forth by the Scott Government:

"To Hon. R. L. Borden, Prime Minister, Ottawa:

"Your telegram of 8th inst. received. The Government of Saskatchewan does not now and never did consider the resolution of 1908 and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statement referred to in your telegram as a final disposition of claims for partition of Hudson Bay territory. In point of fact, notwithstanding said resolution, conferences have been going on since your Government assumed office with other provinces concerned, thus showing the proposed settlement of 1908 was not considered final by you.

"Again urge justice of Saskatchewan's claims upon your consideration as sent out in our memorial and my telegrams. As to access given Ontario to Port Nelson, I note that press despatches state that your Government has declared its intention to transfer to western provinces the public domain within their respective limits. In that case if your Government has finally decided not to give effect to our claims, set out in our memorial at the very least the question of right of way should be settled now. Owing to increase in our population and in our grain production our people have a direct interest in Hudson Bay ports. Before long it is likely that several railways will be built to the bay, one or more of which may be state owned.

(Signed) "J. C. Calder."

Child Fatally Scalded.

Hamilton, March 11.—As a result of a scalding which she received on Saturday night by falling into a pail of boiling water, little Elizabeth Gibson, the four-year-old daughter of William Gibson, engineer at the east end mountain incline, died early yesterday morning. Mr. Gibson had carried a pail of scalding water into the room for the childs bath, which he placed near a rocking chair upon which the baby was sitting. A moment later he left the room. It appears that the child had got down from the chair, and walking backwards, had stumbled and fallen into the water.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an accident in going up and down stairs. To modify this the segment must be not low, no low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Panoso Invisible Segment. Ask for booklet describing them.

SAFE FROM TYPHOID

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE BEST PREVENTATIVE

There is practically no danger of Typhoid Fever as long as you keep the bowels regular with "Fruit-a-tives."

Typhoid is an inflammation of the bowels, due to a germ. This germ enters the body in milk, water or food. If the bowels are constipated, the germ remains in the body long enough to attack the delicate lining and thus Typhoid begins.

"Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver, kidneys and skin, and cleans the system of all impurities. "Fruit-a-tives" will not cure Typhoid — but it will cure Constipation, assist Digestion and tone up the system — thus preventing Typhoid.

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Three men were standing flat against the fence leading from the shed directly to the porch. The fourth was crouching within the latter, and in another moment they heard his feet descend upon the floor inside in a way to rouse the echoes. Meantime, the voice in the audience hall above had ceased, and there could be heard instead the scramble of hurrying feet and the noise of overturning benches. Then a window flew up and a voice called down:

"Who's that? What do you want down there?"

But before an answer could be shouted back, this man was drawn fiercely inside, and the scramble was renewed, amid which George heard Sweetwater's whisper at his ear:

"It's the police. The chief has got ahead of me. Was that the man we're after—the one who shouted down?"

"No. Neither was he the speaker. The voices are very different."

"We want the speaker. If the boys get him, we're all right; but if they don't—wait, I must make the matter sure."

And with a bound he vaulted through the window, whistling in a peculiar way. George, thus left quite alone, had the pleasure of seeing his sole protector mix with the boys, as he called them, and ultimately crowd in with them through the door which had finally been opened for their admittance. Then came a wait, and then the quiet re-appearance of the detective alone, and in no very amiable mood.

"Well?" inquired George, somewhat breathlessly. "Do you want me? They don't seem to be coming out."

"No; they've gone the other way. It was a red hot anarchist meeting, and no mistake. They have arrested one of the speakers, but the other escaped. How, we have not yet found out; but I think there's a way out somewhere by which he got the start of us. He was the man I wanted you to see. Bad luck, Mr. Anderson, but I'm not at the end of my resources. If you'll have patience with me and accompany me a little further, I promise you that I'll only risk one more failure. Will you be so good, sir?"

IX.

THE INCIDENT OF THE PARTLY LIFTED SHADE.

The fellow had a way with him, hard to resist. Cold as George was and exhausted by an excitement of a kind to which he was wholly unaccustomed, he found himself acceding to the detective's request; and after a quick lunch and a huge cup of coffee in a restaurant which I wish I had time to describe, the two took a car which eventually brought them into one of the oldest quarters of the Borough of Brooklyn.

The sleet which had stung their faces in the streets of New York had been left behind them somewhere on the bridge, but the chill was not gone from the air, and George felt greatly relieved when Sweetwater paused in the middle of a long block before a lofty tenement house of mean appearance and signified that here they were to stop, and that from now on, mum was to be their watchword.

George was relieved I say, but he was also more astonished than ever. What kind of haunts were these for the cultured gentleman who spent his evenings at the Clermont? It was easy enough in these days of extravagant sympathies, to understand such a man addressing the uneasy spirits of lower New York—he had been called an enthusiast, and an enthusiast is very often a social agitator—but to trace him afterwards to a place like this was certainly a surprise. A tenement — such a tenement as this — meant home—home for himself or for those he counted his friends, and such a supposition seemed inconceivable to my poor husband, with the memory of the gorgeous parlours of the Clermont in his mind. Indeed, he hinted something of the kind to his affable but strangely reticent companion, but all the answer he got was a peculiar smile whose humorous twist he could barely discern in the semi-darkness of the open doorway into which they had just plunged.

"An adventure! certainly an adventure!" flashed through poor George's mind, as he peered, in great curiosity, down the long hall before him, into a dismal rear, opening into a still more dismal court. It was truly a novel experience for a business man whose philanthropy was carried on entirely by proxy—that is, by his wife. Should he be expected to penetrate into those dark, ill-smelling recesses, or would he be led up the long flights of naked stairs, so feebly illuminated that they gave the impression of extending indefinitely into dimmer and dimer heights of decay and desolation?

Sweetwater seemed to decide for the rear, for leaving George, he stepped down the hall into the court beyond, where George could see him casting inquiring glances up at the walls above him. Another tenement, similar to the one whose rear end he was contemplating, towered behind but he paid no attention to that. He was satisfied with the look he had given and came quickly back, joining George at the foot of the staircase, up which he silently led the way.

It was a rude, none-too-well-cared-for building, but it seemed respectable enough and very quiet, considering the mass of people it accommodated. There were marks of poverty everywhere, but no squalor. One flight—two flights—three—and then George's guide stopped, and, looking back at him, made a gesture. It appeared to be one of caution, but when the two came together at the top of the staircase, Sweetwater spoke quite naturally as he pointed out a door in their rear:

"That's the room. We'll keep a sharp watch and when any man, no matter what his dress or appearance, comes up these stairs and turns that way, give him a sharp look. You understand?"

"Yes; but—"

"Oh, he hasn't come in yet. I took pains to find that out. You saw me go into the court and look up. That was to see if his window was lighted. Well, it wasn't."

George felt non-plussed.

"But surely," said he, "the gentleman named Brotherson doesn't live here."

"The inventor does."

"Oh!"

"And—but I will explain later."

The suppressed excitement contained in these words made George stare. Indeed, he had been wondering for some time at the manner of the detective which showed a curious mixture of several opposing emotions. Now, the fellow was actually in a tremble of hope or impatience;—and, not content with listening, he peered every few minutes down the well of the staircase, and when he was not doing that, tramped from end to end of the narrow passage-way separating the head of the stairs from the door he had pointed out, like one to whom minutes were hours. All this time he seemed to forget George, who certainly had as much reason as himself for finding the time long. But when, after some half hour of this tedium and suspense, there rose from below the faint clatter of ascending footsteps, he remembered his meek companion and, beckoning him to one side, began a studied conversation with him, showing him a note-book in which he had written such phrases as these:

Don't look up till he is fairly in range with the light.

There's nothing to fear; he doesn't know either of us.

If it is a face you have seen before;—if it is the one we are expecting to see, pull your necktie straight. It's a little on one side.

These rather startling injunctions were read by George, with no very perceptible diminution of the uneasiness which it was only natural for him to feel at the oddity of his position. But only the demand last made produced any impression on him. The man they were waiting for was no further up than the second floor, but instinctively George's hand had flown to his necktie, and he was only stopped from its premature re-arrangement by a warning look from Sweetwater.

"Not unless you know him," whispered the detective; and immediately launched out into an easy talk about some totally different business which George neither understood, nor was expected to, I daresay.

Suddenly the steps below paused, and George heard Sweetwater draw in his breath in irrepressible dismay. But they were immediately resumed, and presently the head and shoulders of a workingman of uncommon proportions appeared in sight on the stairway.

George cast him a keen look, and his hand rose doubtfully to his neck and then fell back again. The approaching man was tall, very well-proportioned and easy of carriage; but the face—such of it as could be seen between his cap and the high collar he had pulled up about his ears, conveyed no exact impression to George's mind, and he did not dare to give the signal Sweetwater expected from him. Yet as the man went by with a dark and sidelong glance at them both, he felt his hand rise again, though he did not complete the action, much to his own disgust and to the evident disappointment of the watchful detective.

"You're not sure?" he now heard, oddly interpolated in the stream of half-whispered talk with which the [illegible] to carry off the situation.

George shook his head. He could not rid himself of the old impression he had formed of the man in the snow.

"Mr. Dunn, a word with you," suddenly spoke up Sweetwater, to the man who had just passed them. "That's your name, isn't it?"

Yes, that is my name," was the quiet response, in a voice which was at once rich and resonant; a voice which George knew—the voice of the impassioned speaker he had heard resounding through the sleet as he cowered within hearing in the shed behind the Avenue A tenement. "Who are you who wish to speak to me at so late an hour?"

He was returning to them from the door he had unlocked and left slightly ajar.

"Well, we are—You know what," smiled the ready detective, advancing half-way to greet him. "We're not members of the Associated Brotherhood, but possibly have hopes of being so. At all events, we should like to talk the matter over, if, as you say, it's not too late."

"I have nothing to do with the club—"

"But you spoke before it.

"Yes."

"Then you can give us some sort of an idea how we are to apply for membership."

Mr. Dunn met the concentrated gaze of his two evidently unwelcome visitors with a frankness which dashed George's confidence in himself, but made little visible impression upon his daring companion.

"I should rather see you at another time," said he. "But—" his hesitation was inappreciable save to the nicest ear—"if you will allow me to be brief, I will tell you what I know—which is very little."

Sweetwater was greatly taken aback. All he had looked for, as he was careful to tell my husband later, was a sufficiently prolonged conversation to enable George to mark and study the workings of the face he was not yet sure of. Nor did the detective feel quite easy at the readiness of his reception; nor any too well pleased to accept the invitation which this man now gave them to enter his room.

But he suffered no betrayal of his misgivings to escape him, though he was careful to intimate to George, as they waited in the doorway for the other to light up, that he should not be displeased at his refusal to accompany him further in this adventure, and even advised him to remain in the hall till he received his summons to enter.

But George had not come as far as this to back out now, and as soon as he saw Sweetwater advance into the now well-lighted interior, he advanced too and began to look around him.

The room, like many others in these old-fashioned tenements, had a jog just where the door was, so that on entering they had to take several steps before they could get a full glimpse of its four walls. When they did, both showed surprise. Comfort, if not elegance, confronted them, which impression, however, was immediately lost in the evidences of work, manual, as well as intellectual, which were everywhere scattered about.

The man who lived here was not only a student, as was evinced by a long wall full of books, but he was an art-lover, a musician, an inventor and an athlete. So much could be learned from the most cursory glance. A more careful one picked up other facts fully as startling and impressive. The books were choice; the invention to all appearance a practical one; the art of a high order and the music, such as was in view, of a character of which the nicest taste need not be ashamed.

George began to feel quite conscious of the intrusion of which they had been guilty, and was amazed at the ease with which the detective carried himself in the presence of such manifestations of culture and good, hard work. He was trying to recall the exact appearance of the figure he had seen stooping in the snowy street two nights before, when he found himself staring at the occupant of the room, who had taken up his stand before them and was regarding them while they were regarding the room.

He had thrown aside his hat and rid himself of his overcoat, and the fearlessness of his aspect seemed to daunt the hitherto dauntless Sweetwater, who, for the first time in his life, perhaps, hunted in vain for words with which to start conversation.

Had he made an awful mistake? Was this Mr. Dunn what he seemed, an unknown and careful genius, battling with great odds in his honest struggle to give the world something of value in return for what it had given him? The quick, almost deprecatory glance he darted at George betrayed his dismay; a dismay which George had begun to share, notwithstanding his growing belief that the man's face was not wholly unknown to him even if he could not recognise it as the one he had seen outside the Clermont.

"You seem to have forgotten your errand," came in quiet, if not good-natured, sarcasm from their patiently waiting host.

"It's the room," muttered Sweetwater, with an attempt at his old-time ease which was not as fully successful as usual. "What an all-fired genius you must be. I never saw the like. And in a tenement house too! You ought to be in one of those big new studio buildings in New York where artists be and everything you see is beautiful. You'd appreciate it, you would."

The detective started, George started, at the gleam which answered him from a very uncommon eye. It was a temporary flash, however, and quickly veiled, and the tone in which this Dunn now spoke was anything but an encouraging one.

"I thought you were desirous of joining a socialistic fraternity," said he; "a true aspirant for such honours don't care for beautiful things unless all can have them. I prefer my tenement. How is it with you, friends?"

Sweetwater found some sort of a reply, though the thing which this man now did must have startled him, as it certainly did George. They were so grouped, that a table quite full of anomalous objects stood at the back of their host, and consequently quite beyond their own reach. As Sweetwater began to speak, he whom he had addressed by the name of Dunn, drew a pistol from his breast pocket and laid it down barrel towards them on this table top. Then he looked up courteously enough, and listened till Sweetwater was done. A very handsome man, but one not to be trifled with in the slightest degree. Both recognised this fact, and George, for one, began to edge towards the door.

"Now I feel easier," remarked the giant, swelling out his chest. He was unusually tall, as well as unusually muscular. "I never like to carry arms; but sometimes it is unavoidable. Damn it, what hands!" He was looking at his own, which certainly showed soil. "Will you pardon me?" he pleasantly apologised, stepping towards a wash-stand and plunging his hands into the basin. "I cannot think with dirt on me like that. Humph, hey! did you speak?"

He turned quickly on George, who had certainly uttered an ejaculation, but receiving no reply, went on with his task, completing it with a care and a disregard of their presence which showed him up in still another light.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE
FOR MAN OR BEAST

The taste tells— the taste sells

THE power of advertising is wonderful in the selling of merchandise; but did you ever think that advertising could only sell you, for instance, one package of Tillson's Rolled Oats?

If you bought any more Tillson's after you used the first package it would be due not to the advertising but to the excellence of the oats. If the first package did not please you, you would not buy any more, no matter if you saw Tillson's advertising at every turn.

The constant increase in the use of Tillson's Rolled Oats is due to the oats themselves.

The first taste of Tillson's will tell you that they are the most delicious oats you ever ate. It's the taste that tells and the taste that sells.

Housewives like Tillson's for another reason—they are so convenient to prepare. It is a relief to be able to make tasty, digestible porridge with only 15 minutes' cooking.

Raised Oatmeal Muffins

Add one-fourth cupful of brown sugar to one cupful hot cooked porridge made with Tillson's Rolled Oats. Add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter and one-fourth of a yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup of lukewarm water. Mix well, add gradually enough flour so that the dough may be kneaded. It should be moist but capable of kneading. Cover rise over night. In the morning, mould into small biscuits, put in hot greased muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven. This same mixture may be baked in one loaf as bread

"SALT RHEUM"

Had It On Hands For Two Years.

ITCHED SO DID NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Tried Three Doctors and Went to Hospital.

All skin diseases are more or less occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and no one can expect to be free from some form or other of skin trouble unless the blood is kept in good shape. All skin diseases can be very easily cured by the wonderful blood cleansing properties of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This is due to the unrivalled purifying action of Burdock Blood Bitters on the blood, coupled with the thorough manner in which it cleanses and expels the impurities from the body.

Mrs. Richard Coutlee, White Head, Que., writes:—"I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for two years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried three doctors, and even went to Montreal to the hospital without getting any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got three bottles, and before I had the second used I found a big change, and now to-day I am cured."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about 35 years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE PROPER WAY TO PREVENT CONSUMPTION IS TO KEEP FIT

Written for the Examiner by Roy Gilroy

"Better to hunt in fields for health unbought,
Than fee the doctor for nauseous draught;
The wise for cure on exercise depend;
God never made His work for man to mend."

Health is the first wealth.

Life is not mere living, but the enjoyment of health.

As a rule physical vigour is the condition of a great career. The weak, chestless, calfless, forceless, languid, hesitating, vacillating young man may manage to live a respectable life, but he seldom climbs, is not a leader, rarely gets at the head of anything important.

The great prizes of life ever fall to the robust, the stalwart, the strong.

The body has its claims—it is a good servant; treat it well, and it will do your work; attend to its wants and requirements, listen kindly and patiently to its hints, occasionally forestall its necessities by a little indulgence, and your consideration will be repaid with interest. But task it, and pine it, and suffocate it, make it a slave instead of a servant; it may not complain much,, but, like the weary camel in the desert, it will lie down and die.

When one stops to think about his own life and that of his neighbours, the fact is brought home with crushing emphasis that very few people, even under the conditions that prevail in our boasted civilization, actually appreciate the full joy of living to their maximum capacity. This is true of the average life of individuals whether in town or country. Most people waste countless hours every year of their lives, and the pity of it is that they do not realize how many hours they are wasting or how much might be accomplished if they turned those golden moments to better use.

On the other hand, there are thousands of people who do not know how to waste a few hours daily, and they burn out their lives in an all-consuming fire long before they have had the opportunity to attain to their maximum of capacity for enjoyment or usefulness for work.

The ideal is the happy medium which but few of us attain.

* * *

It is to our habit of shunning fresh air that the terrible spread of tuberculosis is due; to our incorrect or insufficient breathing of fresh air that so much pulmonary disease exists; contracted chests and stooping shoulders are directly traceable to improper breathing, while the whole range of "colds" and "chills" and "grippe" could be wiped out if we would only breathe into our lungs and take into them properly a sufficient amount of fresh air.

It has been said by eminent authorities that if a single generation would learn to breathe correctly it would completely regenerate the race in a physical sense ,and disease ,especially of the pulmonary order, would be so rare as to be looked upon as a curiosity.

It sounds easy enough to say: Breathe correctly; and, curiously enough, it is as easy as it sounds. But, like many another vital help to health, it is passed by because of its simplicity. The result is that not one in a hundred, it is said, breathes correctly.

Generally speaking, we do not breathe deeply enough to let a sufficient amount of air into the lungs: the lungs do not get enough exercise. And yet upon the act of breathing our very life depends. We can go without food much longer and more easily, and exist even without drinking, but without breathing our existence is measured by a very few moments.

When man began as a savage he breathed properly, but as civilization progressed and he changed his form of walking, and living more in houses than in the open,he became more and more a victim of careless breathing, or really a lack of breath.

This is just what ails the average person to-day; he does not take breath enough into his lungs. He breathes, of course, but he breathes incorrectly, and thus does not get a sufficient quantity of fresh air into his lungs. It is upon the quantity of fresh air that he does get into his lungs that his health depends.

The more air, the more health;
The less air, the less health.

The gospel of fresh air — what it means to us poor frail beings. It means more than any of us appreciate.

If it is such an important factor in restoring us to health, as indicated by the practice of some of the cleverest doctors who hold it so intensely vital to people who are ill, should it not be equally important in retaining our health?

O, the wonderful exhilaration of the air filling our lungs with new life! It is our birthright, this fresh air. It is about the only thing we can get for nothing, yet we are so sparing in its use. Sunlight is another free gift from the great Giver, yet how grudgingly we let it into our homes. The great excuse is that it will fade our carpets. Oh! rubbish! I suppose you would sooner see the rose fade from the cheek of your beautiful daughter than the dirty dye from your germ-catching carpet.

For shame!

Open the windows, throw up the blinds and let the pure air and sunshine into your homes. If you cannot get enough into your home then get out and pursue it.

Even walking, with some, is well nigh a lost art. If it were practised more, people would fall heir to that which is far more to be desired than many dollars—good health, fresh complexions, bright eyes and happy healthy minds.

It all makes such a difference in our point of view—this oxygen which we get into our system. We see things in a clearer light, our minds are unclouded, our thoughts are healthier. Won't you—if you are one of those who don't indulge already—won't you make the experiment of getting more fresh air into your system every day—fresh air, coupled with healthy, pleasant exercise?

Consumption is a problem with which all the civilised communities of the world are struggling to-day. It has at all times attracted attention because of its malignant influence upon the lives and well-being of the people.

Consumption is a peculiar disease. It is as secret as it is deadly, and gives no definite sign until, too often, it has taken firm hold and got, to more or less extent, beyond control. It has, moreover, the assistance of the prevailing public ignorance, prejudice and superstition as to its nature. So much so, that even at this day the true knowledge as to its cause and effect still remain obscured by the old-fashioned fictions of former years.

In late years it has forced itself upon the notice of the authorities for the reason that we now know what its cause is and how it spreads; how it may be cured and how it can be prevented. This knowledge places power in our hands, and the responsibility is ours if we neglect to use it.

CONSUMPTION NOT HEREDITARY

In the year 1882 Dr. Koch discovered the cause of consumption to be the bacillus tuberculosis. Heretofore we were led to believe it was hereditary; we now know that predisposition may come from our parents but not the disease. Many a poor girl has lost her precious life by consumption because she was brought up with the conviction perpetually thrust upon her mind that she must die of that disease because her parents did. There could not be a more pernicious falsehood. We were also told that it came from the hand of Providence and was inevitable. What an insult to our Creator when we so frequently see indifference, ignorance and neglect of the common ordinary laws of cleanliness and sanitary reform contributing so largely to the spread of consumption!

Koch has proved, and it is now accepted as an absolute fact, that the one and only cause of consumption is a germ—that is, that the germ has to enter and live and multiply in the body to start consumption.

If the body into which the germ has gained entrance is not debilitated by hereditary weakness, by sickness or worry, by overwork of body or mind, by sleeping in rooms or working in places overcrowded, and in which the air is not sufficiently changed and purified by the entry of fresh air and sunlight, by unreasonable excesses, there is small likelihood, unless the exposure is continued, that the germ will live or become active in such a body, while on the other hand, the presence of any of the above conditions, together with the presence of the germ, may lead to the development of the disease.

Sunlight is its greatest enemy, for a few moments' exposure to direct rays will kill the germ. When it is deposited in clean, dry and well lighted quarters, it will soon fade and die, whereas, dark, moist and ill-ventilated places will hold the germ alive and active for lengthened periods.

If there is one thing more than another, that I would like to impress upon your minds is the value of sleeping with windows open as a means of strengthening the system against consumption, and at the same time raise the general health of those who follow this advice and consequently their powers of resistance against all forms of infection.

DYSPEPTIC
Food Does You No Good

Half the time you're afraid to eat; your tongue is coated, mouth tastes sad, stomach is bloated. If you want to get well, stop using dyspepsia tablets, and go to the source of the trouble before it is too late. Strengthen your stomach, cast out the bile, regulate the bowels—do this, and dyspepsia will be no more.

For your condition the best prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made specially for the stomach, kidneys and liver. No better remedy will be devised, for Dr. Hamilton's Pills are perfect.

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS A SURE CURE

"No one could realize my sufferings from stomach trouble and indigestion. For five years I have not been well. My food did me no good, because I couldn't digest or assimilate. My doctor said constipation was at the root of my trouble, so I got Dr. Hamilton's Pills. My appetite improved, pain after eating ceased, and my food digested quickly. I am delighted with the thorough cure I derived from Dr. Hamilton's Pills.
"(Signed) MARTIN E. WALKER.

Inspector Kincaid, Arch Enemy of the Get-Rich-Quick Schemers, Says That in Nearly Every Case He Investigated a Woman Was the Brains of the Concern—Tells of His Experiences with Lowly Yeggs and "High Brow" Crooks

EVER since the authorities at Washington determined to place Post Office Inspector E. H. Kincaid in charge of the fraud cases under investigation in New York city and vicinity there has been something doing in the camp of that brand of swindlers who use the mails to defraud the unwary. That was six years ago, and as a result of his activities nearly a thousand of these concerns have been investigated and upward of seven hundred put out of existence. There are others still thriving, but the net is fast closing about them and their existence, according to the federal sleuths, is only a question of weeks, or months at most.

But from now on this work will be in other hands. For after twenty years of active service, in which have been crowded adventures of every possible description, Kincaid has tired of tracking criminals and resigned his post on February 1 last, to associate himself with his old cronies, T. M. Reddy and William M. Ketcham, both tried and seasoned Post Office inspectors, who are now members of the Federal Advisory Commission.

Kincaid has tracked and captured every class of violator of the postal laws from the lowly and vicious yegg to the fur coated and diamond bedecked Wallingford who lures millions from an unsuspecting and confiding public. Every big raid that has been made here on these get-rich-quick artists in the last six years has been engineered and personally conducted by Kincaid. No man ever left the postal service with more successful or brilliant record behind him. His work has taken him into every State in the Union, and he has taken his life in his hands on a number of occasions when he went where duty called. From tracking down petty postal thieves in the New England district his scenes have shifted to the mountains of Tennessee and adjacent States, culminating in his appointment to the most important office in the entire country, and there becoming the active head of its most important department.

Some of his experiences read like dime novels of the Old Cap Collier type, but he has facts and figures to substantiate every one of them, and his scrap book is a curiosity in itself. Referring to this scrap book Inspector Kincaid said:—

"Before I came to New York I used to get all the papers that contained references to the cases I worked up. All were neatly clipped and pasted in an orderly and consecutive fashion in my scrap book. After I got busy here, however, on these get-rich-quick cases I found I didn't have time to read the papers, let alone clip them. And if I had I would have gone broke buying scrap books to paste my clippings in."

Scanning some clippings found in an old scrap book Inspector Kincaid broke into a hearty laugh, saying:—

"Here's a queer case. Way back in 1902 I was working in New England.

"One of the points in my district was Sherman, Vt., a veritable deserted village. There were only three families living in the town, a hundred or more having moved away. The department's records showed that an unusually heavy number of stamp cancellations were reported from this office, so many in fact that it entitled the postmaster, Drury A. Sherman, to an annual salary of $1,000. I made a quiet investigation and ascertained that large quantities of stamps were ordered each month by Sherman, and that all were accounted for. That is, his accounts were straight, but the stamps were reported cancelled as well as sold.

"He conducted a general store, which was patronized by residents of an adjacent village. There weren't enough residents in his hamlet to justify his opening a shop. By hustling around I found that Sherman bought and paid for all his groceries with postage stamps. He would order a big bill of goods from a wholesale grocer and pay in stamps. These he would report cancelled. His actual outgoing mail didn't average two letters a day. In fact, by closely checking up, I learned that the total business done by his office for the year was a shade under seven dollars. Yet that old scamp was drawing a thousand dollars a year salary. It didn't take long to put him where he belonged, and that office was wiped off the map until more business came its way. I neglected to add that I arrested the old man, and when I reached the lockup with him, where he was searched, three fully loaded revolvers and a box of cartridges were found in his pockets. What he could have done to me would have been a shame. He looked so meek and mild it never occurred to me to search him when I placed him under arrest."

"Just prior to coming to New York," said the one time inspector, "I was engaged in running down a number of post office frauds in New England. At that time there was seemingly an epidemic among small town post offices to swindle Uncle Sam. As in the case at Sherman, Vt., these postmasters, by making a showing of a big stamp sale and cancellation, not only had themselves advanced a grade in the postmaster class, but in some instances succeeded in procuring free delivery for their respective towns. The maximum salary for a third class postmaster is $2,000, that for second class is $3,000 and those of the first class go up the scale until they receive sums as high as that paid the Postmaster of New York.

"I learned in Boston that a number of merchants were buying stamps in large quantities from the postmasters of surrounding towns, and in many instances at a good discount. In one case I recall the stamps were sold at ninety-two per cent of their face value. A girl telephone operator whom I had pressed into service informed me one day that the postmaster of a nearby town had been called up by a big merchant of Boston that night and told to come to the city the next day with stamps to the value of $600. He was to pay $580 for the bunch.

"When the postmaster stepped off the train in Boston I was the first to greet him. I took him at once to the post office and there questioned him. He was amazed when I told him just how many stamps he had in his valise, and even more so when I told him the name of the firm he intended to sell them to. I made him go through with the deal, and when the transaction was consummated I arrested him and the merchant too. The postmaster was run out of the service, but the merchant escaped conviction.

Unearthing Stamp Frauds.

"That led to a sweeping investigation, and before we were through with the Massachusetts postmasters we had reduced thirty or forty to lower grades, and, furthermore, the government recovered nearly half a million dollars which it had paid out in excess salaries due to the stamp frauds."

Kincaid recalled another peculiar case in New England. He had been sent to check up the office at Gloucester, Mass. An aged widow was the general delivery and stamp clerk, and she was noted for her painstaking care and general devotion to business. Once every month, when the office's affairs were checked, she always remained until the last to assist the postmaster and his auditor with the work. This usually kept them there until the early hours of the morning.

"I dropped in to superintend the work this month," said Kincaid, "and soon found there was a shortage of $175. We went over the books, cash and stock time and again, but couldn't get the accounts to balance. In one of the compartments was stored the office's stock of postal cards. They were done up in packages of 100 each, and all told there were a million on hand—that is, the books showed that many.

"We counted the pile up and down and all around many times, and apparently it was all right. Then an idea seized me. I began to sort out the pile, and I hadn't proceeded very far when I found that instead of being solid the pile was hollow, and no one had had the foresight to unpack it and count the individual packages.

"The total shortage amounted to $1,500, and the elderly widow confessed after sweating her for three days. She had juggled her accounts from month to month for two years, and that is why she always remained on hand to help the audit. She told me she had used the money to permit her son, a worthless ne'er-do-well, poor old soul, that didn't save her."

This case recalled still another in which a woman figured.

"Complaints reached the Boston office," Kincaid continued, "from the publishers of a magazine at Salem, Mass. They declared that letters, containing money for subscriptions, daily failed to materialize, and they were certain it was a post office, or inside job.

"I soon had decoy letters deposited at Boston, and then I watched the Salem office. None of the test letters reached their destination. The postmaster's sister was in charge of the delivery department. She was a beautiful girl, one of the belles of the town, and her brother reposed the most explicit confidence in her. It wasn't long before I knew the little sister was the thief. Then came the showdown, and I arrested her.

"I couldn't search her, so I sent out for two women. I wanted to ascertain what had become of the test letters abstracted from the mail that day. One by one she produced the letters—five in all—which she drew from various hiding places about her person. Then she confessed. I went to her rooms, and found upwards of five hundred letters she had rifled. She hadn't even taken the trouble to destroy them.

"In the course of her confession she told me her father was old and ill, and in order to provide him with the little delicacies and luxuries he craved she evolved the scheme of rifling the magazine publisher's mail, well knowing that the majority of letters addressed to them contained currency."

"Were you ever under fire?" the reporter asked the former inspector.

"Many times," was the reply. "The first experience of that kind occurred in Tennessee. A post office had been robbed. It was back in the mountains, about fifty miles from Oblon, and Jeff Lovell, Oblon's postmaster, and I started out on horseback to investigate. It was a hard trip, and we didn't reach our destination until late that night.

"The next day we learned that three boys who lived like savages in a hut on the mountainside were suspected. Their parents had deserted them and they were eking out a bare existence as best they could. The eldest was less than nineteen years old.

"Jeff and I determined to pay them a visit. We approached the hut, and pushing open a door found a boy lying on a bundle of rags in a corner. He told us he was suffering from typhoid fever, and he looked it. He was the most pitiable and emaciated object I had ever seen.

"As we left the hut to look about the premises another of the brothers came from behind a barn. He darted into the house, and in a flash was outside again, levelling an old sawed down single barrelled gun at us. He was the eldest of the trio, and a more determined looking little rascal I never saw. Neither Jeff nor I had had time to draw our guns, so he had us dead to rights.

"From a safe distance we questioned him, but he disclaimed all knowledge of the robbery. Meanwhile he kept edging toward us, and finally, when within three feet of us, I managed to get my pistol out.

"As I covered him he drew a bead on Jeff and coolly remarked:—'You can shoot me as quick as you damn please, but if you raise that gun I'll blow the top of Jeff's head off.' He had Jeff covered all the time.

"Finally he made the proposition that if I threw my gun down to the ground he would do likewise, and then we could talk matters over. I fell for it and, tossing my pistol aside, he did likewise. We chatted for about five minutes when a weakened little voice piped up and said:—

"'I reckon you all has been here about long enough, and it's time you gets started on your way. Now, git, while you got a chance.'

"It was the third brother who spoke. He was perched on the limb of a tree under which we were standing. He had a murderous looking rifle trained on us, and his command was given in such an imperative tone of voice that we stuck away as ignominiously as possible.

"The second boy gathered up his gun and my pistol, while his brother in the tree kept us covered. Then he got his sick brother out of the house, and the way the three of them scuttled away up the mountainside would have made a jack rabbit turn green with envy.

"We had to drive ten miles before we could renew our stock of firearms and ammunition, and by the time we returned and took up the search not a trace of the boys could be found. They got away all right, and they made me look like a veritable amateur, the way they whipsawed me."

Kincaid, by this time, concluded that he had talked enough about his adventures outside of New York, but he consented to tell something of the get-rich-quick raids he conducted here.

"When I came to New York," said Kincaid, "I knew I had my work cut out for me. Of course, like all other inspectors transferred to the 'Big Town,' I felt that my big opportunity had come, and I determined to make the best of it. New York, as we all know, is honeycombed with graft and grafters, and it lies within the province of the Post Office Department to root them out neck and crop. For the first few months I did little else but familiarize myself with conditions here, and what I learned amazed me.

"There were many concerns under fire at that time. While no specified complaint had been lodged against many of them, it was known within the department that the majority of them were conducting their affairs along lines that smacked of fraud and swindling. In nearly every case I ascertained that in each concern there was a woman who, in reality, was the brains of the outfit. The men associated with her were but tools and they were the buffers—the ones who must meet and fleece the public—while the woman in the case remained in the background and directed operations. Right then and there I made it a rule when looking over a get-rich-quick concern to ascertain the name of the woman in the case, and this done the rest came easy.

ELMER H. KINCAID.

A Woman's Revenge.

"One of the first cases I was called on to investigate was on a tip that came to me in a peculiar manner. The Mutual Grain Company opened a sumptuous suite of offices in Wall street, and from the day it opened its doors its mail was abnormally heavy. This in itself aroused suspicion, inasmuch as it isn't customary for a new concern to daily receive a batch of mail double in volume that of competitors who have been established in business for years. One of the principals of this outfit came originally from Cincinnati, but, try as I might, I couldn't lay my hands on any circulars or other literature they were sending out that warranted summary action on my part. Suddenly it occurred to me that there was a woman in Cincinnati who knew all the ins and outs of grain concerns whose transactions were more or less shady, so I got in touch with her.

"My lead proved a good one. In a few days she wrote me telling me all about the principals in the concern I was shadowing, adding that the scheme was originally hers, but that one of the members of the firm had stolen her idea, put her out of the business and opened the New York branch. In addition to this information she sent quantities of the firm's circulars and other literature.

"The next day I visited the Wall street offices and saw the three members of the concern in one of the private offices. All were in their shirt sleeves. I sent my card in by the office boy, who at the command of one of the firm closed the door to the private office. I waited a few minutes, and as the boy didn't return I made my way into the private office. All three had 'flown the coop,' escaping by another exit, not one of the three tarrying long enough to get his hat and coat. They left town the next day, I afterward learned, and were not heard of again until the ship they embarked on touched at Liverpool. But that ended their operations in New York, for I seized the books and papers and everything else of value in the office, and that's about all the creditors had to divide among themselves. One of the members of this concern committed suicide in Cleveland a few months later.

"I expect the raid on the Burr Brothers' outfit was as important and sensational as any I pulled off," he said. "Our department had been flooded with complaints against this firm, and it didn't take me long to learn that money was simply pouring in on them. I tried in many ways to get hold of their literature and at last succeeded. Their prospectuses were as glowing as anything you ever saw, but, of course, cheat and fraud were written between every line.

"It was a case of getting busy at once, and it took me some time to learn the names of all the principals. I was also handicapped by the fact that the partners spent most of their time travelling, and it was essential for our purposes to arrest all of them at one and the same time. Finally I found a likely young chap who knew the confidential secretary of one of the partners. She was a pretty girl and was fond of little dinners, the theatre and late suppers. It was while supping with this chap that she told him where the partners were. Both Sheldon C. and E. H. Burr were in New York. Preston Burr was somewhere on the Pacific slope, supposedly in Spokane, while C. H. Tobey, another partner, was in Michigan visiting relatives at their farm.

We got the wires busy. We tipped off the Spokane inspectors and ordered others from Portland to start toward Spokane in the event of our bird flying away. Inspectors also started out from Nevada, and as it turned out our precautions were wisely taken, for Preston did jump from Spokane and was caught in Portland. Tobey was caught at the farm and E. H. Burr we gathered in at his office, together with his books and all the records in the case. Sheldon we found in the parlors of a Christian Science reader, where he was engaged in a very earnest discussion with her. So we got them all and at virtually the same time.

"That firm cleaned up more than five million dollars in their scheme and sold upward of $50,000,000 of stock. Their victims came from all parts of the country, and for a time they had a bonanza. As their clerks told us, the victims simply clamored for the stock, so alluring was the literature which coaxed their savings from the banks."

The biggest and most glaring steal ever perpetrated in New York, according to Mr. Kincaid, was that of Dos Estrellos Mining and Development Company. This outfit was composed of Louis Prince, long known as the bucket shop king; J. Walter Labaree, who once failed for half a million dollars when he was running a chain of bucket shops, and George W. Emmanuel. Prince jumped his $6,000 bail and is now living in Paris, getting rich from his moving picture concessions in Spain. Labaree got two years in the Atlanta Prison and Emmanuel was sentenced to a year and three months in the "pen," but is out pending an appeal.

"Our attention was first directed to this concern by the avalanche of mail that poured in on it each day. It was a concern new to us and the big mail it was receiving sent me scurrying about to get hold of inside information. Some of the incoming mail we intercepted, but, try as we might, none who wrote subscribing to the stock would heed our warning or send us the prospectus they had received.

Salted Mine Scheme.

"In about a week I ran across a man who had once been in Prince's employ and who was later turned down by the bucket shop king. I knew he had a grudge against his old employer, so I asked him if he knew anything about the concern.

"'It's a salted mine scheme and even worse than that,' he said. 'That bunch dug a little hole in the ground about eighteen feet square near a stamping mill at Taxco, Mexico. They had photographs taken of the hole and from these enlargements were made which gave the impression of a mine of fair proportions. They also made photographs of a flourishing stamping mill which was in full blast not far away, and this they represented as being their own. On top of this, the Mutual Trust Company of Mexico was incorporated, which concern, the prospectus said, had guaranteed the stock of the mining company, on which the promoters claimed to pay two per cent a month dividends. The stock was further guaranteed, according to the circulars, by Speyer & Co., of Mexico. This name was so similar to that of the New York bankers that the unsuspecting public fell for it without a quibble and stock is selling like hot cakes.'

"This information came so pat and was so startling that I was stunned. We immediately sent Inspector Hamilton to Mexico, while I camped on the trail of the promoters here. Meanwhile I procured a set of their literature and learned that all my informant had told me was true. All the time letters were pouring in on the promoters, and from a clerk on the inside, whom I had won over, I found that they were getting money and checks in every mail and that already their receipts ran close to a million.

"Within a week Hamilton reported. It was even worse than my informant had represented things. The little hole in the ground hadn't a semblance of ore in it, and the photograph of the stamping mill was of one belonging to another concern. The trust company had no assets, and its headquarters consisted of a tiny room in an obscure building in a back street.

"With this information at hand we knew it was time to proceed, so we got busy. We hadn't the faintest idea that Labaree was in any way connected with the concern, as we had thought he was employed by the Quidbo Gold Dredging Company. We made our raid late one Saturday afternoon, and as we swooped down on the offices, taking Prince and Emmanuel into custody, Labaree came strolling in. We thought it best to take him along, too, although he declared he was a customer of the concern. Later we found out he was as deep in the mire as the rest, so he was held for trial and convicted with the others.

"An amusing feature of the raid was the number of young women who came to Post Office headquarters later, sending letters they had written Prince. They had learned that all the mail, together with the private papers, had been seized, and they were anxious to get their letters back, if they were still in existence. From the number of callers and the number of letters of that character we found it was easy to assume that Prince kept up an interesting and animated correspondence with a score or more of mighty pretty young women."

Just about two years ago the post office at Richmond, Va., was robbed of cash and stamps to the value of $80,000. The inspectors got busy and ascertained that three yeggmen had opened three safes in the office by what is known as the "plunge and squeeze" method. They further learned the stopping place of the three crackmen while in Richmond and that three trunks had been shipped from their hotel the morning after the robbery. Of course inspectors all over the country were instructed to be on the lookout for the yeggs and their baggage, and Kincaid and O'Brien, the latter recently transferred from New York to Chicago, were detailed to take care of the New York end.

In telling about this case Kincaid said:—"O'Brien and I got the first tangible clew that the yeggs either were in New York or expected to arrive when we found two of the trunks, which had been shipped by a circuitous route from Richmond, here. By impersonating baggagemen at the Pennsylvania Station we kept constant watch over the trunks, and as one was transferred on an order to the Grand Central Station I followed it, while O'Brien mounted guard over the other one. Late the same afternoon the second trunk came to the Grand Central, followed by O'Brien, and then we laid around for the owners or whoever should call for them. We had searched both and they were filled with stamps.

Have Varied Experiences.

"Well, to make a long story short, we located two of the yeggs at a hotel in Lexington avenue and Thirtieth street, where they had registered as Frank Chester and Ferd Cunningham. Chester was better known as Charles J. Adams. Later that evening Chester called at the Grand Central Station for his trunks. He sent a boy in with the checks while he waited outside in an automobile. Detective Joe Dailey, disguised as a baggage smasher, followed the trunks out and seized Chester. Just then Cunningham, who was approaching from a side street, saw the scrap and took to his heels. O'Brien and I were after him and soon overhauled him. The third man and the third trunk we got later, and that solved one of the biggest post office robberies in recent years."

The experiences of a post office inspector are quite as varied as those of Secret Service men and their investigations cover a wide range of crimes and offences. Kincaid relates an experience he had shortly after coming to New York, and by a strange coincidence some of those concerned in the case were daughters of old friends at his boyhood home at Corry, Pa.

"It seems that a newspaper at Wheeling, W. Va.," said the inspector, "started a correspondence chain among its young girl readers. The idea proved very popular, and scores of young girls began corresponding with other girls they had never heard of until they became acquainted through the columns of this newspaper. At about this time a man by the name of Frederick L. Stockford, who was travelling through that country for a New York firm, got into this correspondence game, assuming a girl's name, and before long was in correspondence with a dozen or more young girls. As the correspondence ripened this supposed girl told each of her girl friends about a nice uncle she had in New York who often visited that part of the country and that she wanted her new found friends to meet him when he next came South. She added that she would give him letters of introduction to her new friends.

"The scheme worked out according to schedule, and the "uncle," Stockford, arrived upon the scene in due course of time, presented his letters of introduction and met the young girls. Some were more confiding and guileless than others, and several of them left their homes and came to New York. Others who remained at home had reason to regret to their dying day ever having met the New York "uncle."

"The Postmaster at Corry, Pa., wrote me about the case and I started an investigation. It wasn't long before I had Stockford in the toils and the names of about a dozen young girls, none more than sixteen years old, whom he had duped. There was so much indignation over the case that we knew if we took him South for trial he would, in all probability, have been lynched within forty-eight hours after his arrival in the midst of the outraged set of fathers. He was tried here in New York and is now rounding out his seven years' term in the penitentiary. He was one of the most depraved and unblushing scoundrels it ever fell to my lot to run to earth."

Before concluding his interview Kincaid remarked that the greatest handicap post office inspectors labor under in New York is the political pull so many criminals enjoy here.

"There have been numbers of cases I worked on," he said "where I had my evidence all set and I was all ready to land my man, when a stop order would come and I would be assigned to some other case. After a lapse of a week or so I would resume work on my original case to find that my bird had flown or else he had quietly shut up shop and started in some other business. The average get rich quick artist starts out with pockets well lined and he spends his money judiciously. Result is he has made powerful friends, and when we get him safely in the goods on him some of those friends manifest themselves and our suspects are allowed to fade away from sight."

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

PASTOR RUSSELL ON MARS HILL

Preaches Message of St. Paul to the Athenians and Corinthians.

Corinth, Greece, March 10.—The I.B.S.A. Missions Investigation Committee is here. Pastor Russell, its Chairman, delivered an address in our largest Auditorium. Rev. Bodayannes served as interpreter. His text was: "God hath appointed a Day in the which He will judge the world." (Acts xvii, 31.) He said:

En route to your city, I visited Athens. As I stood upon Mars Hill and made a short address, my mind reverted to the account of Saint Paul's preaching there, and I have chosen some of His words on that occasion as my text. As St. Paul made no impression there it is quite improbable that I made any. Indeed, the city to-day might well be described in the language of eighteen centuries ago, as wholly given up to idolatry.

True, it is not to-day fashionable in civilised communities to worship images; and yet in another sense it is still fashionable. There is still a great worship of man throughout the civilized world, but in a different form from that of old. No longer do we bow before wooden images, but before inward images—the images of our minds, our mental aspirations—with some, wealth and fame; with others, ease and pleasure, and with still others, the creed idols of our forefathers, miserable misrepresentations of the true God.

Saint Paul on Mars Hill preached Jesus and the resurrection—Jesus as the Redeemer from the death sentence, making possible the resurrection of the dead by satisfying the demands of Divine Law against the sinner—the resurrection as the means or agency through which the blessing of the Saviour's death will reach Adam and all the families of the earth. As we follow Saint Paul's thought we will surely be blessed by his view of the Gospel.

Addressing the Gentiles, the Apostle explains that for a long time God had "winked" at Polytheism and image worship, "but now," he says, God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Let us note the meaning of these words. How did God "wink" at sin and idolatry? And does He still "wink" at it? And why did He change and when did He begin to command all men to repent?

The answer is that for four thousand years idolatry prevailed and God "winked" at or took no notice of it. He did not "wink" at the idolaters dying in their ignorance and say to the devils "Take these poor creatures who know no better! Roast them to all eternity!" Nothing of the kind. Our forefathers merely imagined that and by false reasoning convinced themselves, and twisted some texts of Scripture which they did not properly understand in support of this theory; and then they handed it down to us to our perplexity and to the testing of our faith in God.

God "winked" at idolatry and sin for four thousand years in the sense of not noticing it, making no comment on it, sending no reproofs, leaving the heathen in their ignorance. The only exception to this was God's dealings with the little nation of Israel. To the Jews He gave a Law Covenant which offered eternal life on the condition of their thorough obedience to the Divine law, the measure of a perfect man's ability, which they were unable to comply with; and hence they died the same as did the heathen. All went to the Bible hell—to the tomb—to sheol, to hades, the state or condition of death—an unconscious state, a "sleep."

God was in no haste to send the Redeemer: 4,128 years elapsed before Jesus was born, and thirty years more before He began His ministry. Had it been true, as some aver, that millions, for all those centuries were blindly stumbling into eternal torture for lack of a Divine revelation, we may be sure that our gracious God would not have left them without it. Who can think of a just and loving God as winking at the going of millions of His creatures to eternal torture? But since they merely "fell asleep" in death, He could very well "wink" at the matter in view of His future plans, which we will consider shortly.

The fact is that no real offer from death could possibly be made until the Redemption price had been provided for the original sin under which they were condemned to death. This is the Apostle's argument, viz., that "now God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." The now implies that He did not command men previously to repent; and the reason why He did not do so is manifest, for all the repenting they could do and all the righteous living possible to them would not have saved them—they would have died anyway. Hence there could have been no message sent to them, for if the messenger had come and had said, "Repent, and live contrary to your fallen tastes and appetites," the people might properly enough have said, "Why, for what reason should we practice self-denial, self-restraint? Would it bring us any blessing of everlasting life or harmony with God?" The truthful answer would have been, "No, because you are already under a death sentence and alienated from God as sinners."

Hence, God merely overlooked or "winked" at the ignorance and superstition of the period from Adam to the close of the 4,161 years. But as soon as Jesus had died, "the Just for the unjust," to make reconciliation for iniquity—immediately the message went forth—God offered forgiveness and reconciliation to those who would believe in Jesus and would accept the Divine terms. Such have their sins forgiven. Such may come back to fellowship with God. And, in the next Age, such may eventually attain full human perfection by restitution processes, up, up to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed at Calvary.

Let us note carefully what the Apostle says respecting God's appointed Day for the judging of the world. He says that the command to repent now goes forth to all men everywhere, "because God hath appointed a [future] Day, in which He will judge the world." The Apostle does not refer to that Day as already begun, but as merely appointed or arranged for in advance. He means that in arranging that "Jesus, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man," God was arranging that every man might have a judgment or a trial, to determine whether or not he will be worthy of this blessing which Jesus' death provides him an opportunity to secure. The Day was future in Saint Paul's time, and it is still future, because God has other work which He proposes shall be accomplished first, before the world's Day of Judgment or trial shall begin.

The world's trial Day or period of judgment, or testing as to worthiness or unworthiness for everlasting life, will be one of the thousand-year days mentioned by Saint Peter, who said, "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." The same period is called elsewhere the "Day of Christ," the Day or period of Messiah's glorious reign. By the righteous ruling of His Kingdom, by the suppression of Satan and sin and the scattering of darkness, ignorance and superstition, by the shining forth of the Sun of Righteousness with healing in its beams, that glorious Day will bring blessing to the world in general—opportunity for each individual to come into judgment or trial, the result of which will be either the reward of life everlasting or the punishment of death everlasting—"everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power."

That great thousand-year Day is still future; and, meantime, the Apostle's words respecting mankind are still true: "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together"—"waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Romans viii, 22, 19.) If the nineteen centuries' delay in the introduction of this great Day seems long, let us not forget that it is less than half as long as the period which preceded—the period prior to the coming of Jesus and His dying, "the Just for the unjust." Nor is the entire period long from the Divine standpoint. For as the Prophet declares: "A thousand years in God's sight are but as yesterday," or even shorter, "as a watch in the night." The six great Days of a thousand years each, in which sin and death have reigned, are to be followed by a great Sabbath of rest from evil—a thousand years of refreshment, reinvigoration, upbuilding, restitution. —Acts iii, 19-23.

The purpose of the nineteen centuries between the time when Jesus died as man's Redeemer and the time when He will take His Throne as the Restorer of Adam and his race is spoken of as a Mystery, because the great work of grace herein accomplished is measurably hidden from the world. The Jews do not understand it; they expected that Messiah's Kingdom and their own national exaltation would have come long ago. They cannot tell now why they have been for eighteen centuries outcast from the Divine favor. It is a mystery to them.

The Scriptures tell us who may know or understand this Mystery and when it will be finished. They say, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His Covenant." They tell us that in the days of the voice of the Seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished," which He hath kept secret from the foundation of the world. Saint Paul refers to this mystery, saying that it was "hidden from past Ages and Dispensations," and that it "is now revealed to the saints." He explains what it is, namely, that we should be fellow-heirs and of the same Body with our Redeemer—Ephesians iii, 6.

This clearly means that the entire Church class, sometimes called "the Body of Christ, which is the Church," and sometimes styled "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," is to be sharer with the Redeemer in the sufferings of the present life and in the glories of the future. The nearly nineteen centuries of this Age, therefore, according to the Scriptures, have been for the purpose, not of giving the world its trial for everlasting life or death, but for the trying, testing, the electing or selecting of the Church, and her perfecting with her Lord as sharers in "His resurrection," "the first Resurrection."—Philippians, iii, 10; Revelation xx, 6.

We have in the past made two serious mistakes respecting the Divine purposes. One was that we assumed without Scriptural authority that the whole world is now on trial for eternal life, failing to see that it is merely the elect Church, the consecrated class. The other mistake is that we reasoned as though the Church were part of the world and, therefore, that the trial of the Church meant the trial of the world. But hearken to the Scriptures respecting the Church: "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world"; "I have chosen you out of the world"; and again, "Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in heaven" "in the day of their visitation."—I. Peter ii, 12

We should notice also the wide difference between the reward promised the Church and that proffered the world. In both cases the reward will be everlasting life. In both cases this will mean full harmony with God, because "All the wicked will God destroy." And again we read that "Whosoever hath the Son hath life, and whosoever hath not the Son shall not see life." So, then, the attainment of everlasting life, either by the Church class or by the world, will mean coming into full harmony with the heavenly Father and with the Lord Jesus, by the merit of Christ's sacrifice. It will mean a full turning away from sin and a full devotion to God and to righteousness.

The difference will be as to nature. The reward for the world will be earthly nature, human nature, with everlasting life in an earthly Paradise or Eden—world-wide. Mankind never lost a spiritual or heavenly condition through Adam's disobedience, nor in any other manner. He never had such a condition or nature, or a right to it, that he could lose it. He was made man, "a little lower than the angels." His crown of glory and honor was an earthly crown. His dominion was over the birds of the air, over cattle and over the fish of the sea. This which he lost Jesus paid the redemption price for at Calvary; and these things lost are the very things which Jesus and His elect Bride will restore to mankind during the thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom. Thus we read: "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

The reward of the Church, eternal life, perfection and harmony with God, will be on the spirit plane—wholly different from the human. Man in perfection will again be a little lower than the angels; but the Church, as the Body of Christ, will share with her Lord in His exaltation, "far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named"—the divine nature. This reward comes to the Church under a special covenant or sacrifice, which the Bible specifies.

This Church class, like her Lord, must sacrifice the earthly nature, earthly interests, hopes and aims, and must be begotten of the Father to a heavenly, spiritual nature, in order to be a sharer in the First Resurrection; and she must enter into her reward before the Messianic Kingdom can be established for the blessing of mankind in general—the saving of the world from sin and from death.

Thus the Apostle wrote that the groaning creation "waits for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Romans viii, 19.) "Now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be (how glorious, how great), but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him." Our resurrection change will make us like the Saviour; as is written, "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in a twinkling," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of heaven."

Come back again to Saint Paul's words. He does not say that God commanded the Church to sacrifice, for if sacrifice were a command it would cease to be a sacrifice. Nowhere are God's people commanded to present their bodies living sacrifices, nor to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, nor to take up the cross and follow Him. To the saintly these sacrificing features are set forth as a privilege—as an opportunity. If they do these things the Divine arrangement is that through the imputation of Christ's merit their sacrifice will be holy and acceptable unto God, and they will be granted a share with the Redeemer in His high exaltation—the reward of sacrifice, of self-denial, of loving, voluntary service to God, the truth and the brethren.

But to the world in general the Lord issues a command, viz., Repent; turn from your sins; come back to Me; seek My face; seek to know and do My will. The basis of this command is the Divine declaration that God's grace has provided redemption in the blood of Jesus, a reconciliation through His blood, and that by and by the whole world will be on trial for life or death everlasting, in a great Day of trial, which God has ordained and over which Christ and the Church will supervise, as Judges.

Whoever comes to a knowledge of this great Divine arrangement through Christ has an incentive to live righteously, soberly and godly in this present time. Whoever hears and heeds this command is laying up for himself a good treasure of character and preparation for his life or death trial in the great Judgment Day of the Messianic Kingdom. Whoever ignores this knowledge and "sows to the flesh" will find himself reaping to the flesh further weakness, further degradation and severer stripes or punishments in that great thousand-year Judgment Day.

ANENT THE SOCIETY SCOFFERS

So many people scoff at society and its foibles. One really cannot afford to indulge in that foolishness. Granted that there are many charming, talented and well-informed women who live most delightfully in a whirl of gay doings—teas, dinners, receptions, and theatre parties.

'Tis well for them. But for those of us who prefer solitude and a book, study and a nibble of crackers and cheese, all that is well for us. Let us thank heaven that we are not all of the same mind, for the various likes and dislikes make us of varied moulds.

If you are greatly bored by the airy, fairy, fluttering ladies of fashion, no doubt the same ladies are exceedingly bored by you. Thus an even exchange of agony is brought about.—Chicago Tribune.

A MAN AND HIS WIFE.

It has been said that no man gets well enough acquainted with his wife to tell what she will say to him after company goes. He never knows what he has done and what he has left undone until he is brought before the judgment bar of her mirror.

Both have been playing a part, have been trying to put on company manners, and, manlike, he, of course, is the one who has been awkward and clumsy, and, manlike too he is so stupid that he must be told a few things that are good for him to know and be given a new lesson as to what he should do next time.

If there were more of the real and less of the put-on in all of us, if men sought to be honest as well as polite, if women tried to be genuine as well as suave, if "thank you" and "please" were heard about the house when there were "just the folk" there, if there were the same kind of practising as there is preaching, there wouldn't be so many inconsistencies in life and not nearly so much awkwardness and laboured attempts to be on good behavior when there is company.—Chicago Tribune.

ANOTHER STAND.

Nationalists Will Fight Third Reading of Boundaries Bill.

Ottawa, March 11.—The Manitoba Boundaries bill will be up for its third and final reading on Tuesday. The debate has from the start been dramatic and exciting, and the third reading promises to be no exception. With ordinary measures the third reading is purely formal, but the Liberals have shown such hostility to this measure that it is understood they will put up a last kick on Tuesday. It is possible also that the Nationalist bolters may stir up some excitement.

It is said that the amendment which was defeated in committee on Friday in regard to the protection of minority rights may be brought up again.

Outside of the boundary question it promises to be a lively week. To-day the bill to nationalise Queen's University will be before the House. Strong protests against the measure have been received at Ottawa from the Hebrews of Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg. There is likely to be an all-day fight on the bill.

Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has been confined to his house with a severe cold, but hopes to be sufficiently recovered by Wednesday not to delay the presentation of the first budget of the new Government.

Thursday the House will start morning sittings and even Saturdays will be appropriated. With the boundary bill out of the way all the contentious measures will be disposed of.

Both sides are anxious to complete the session by the end of the month and with morning and Saturday sittings there should be no trouble finishing in three weeks.

LE PAYS FEELS SAD.

Dr. Merchant's Report a Sharp Arraignment of French Schools.

Montreal, March 11.—Le Pays says that, after all, the brutal campaign of Mgr. Fallon of London against the bilingual schools of Ontario is justified by the report just presented by Dr. Merchant, and in Mr. Langlois' sarcastic vein he says the "first people in the world," have received another black eye.

Le Pays says the report is made in a very impartial manner, yet the brutal fact is there that the French-Canadian schools of Ontario are much inferior to the English schools.

"How is it that we cannot have better schools? Here in Quebec the inferiority of our schools is most patent. We are always claiming separate schools, yet we are their worst enemies.

"If, for instance, they were abolished in Manitoba, and are being attacked in Ontario, it is because they are greatly inferior to the others.

"When Mgr. Fallon began his campaign against the bilingual schools, and against the French language, our compatriots of Ontario protested against the assertions of the Bishop of London, yet to-day they are obliged to admit that Mgr. Fallon was right in more than one point," says Le Pays.

The above is all the most significant as Le Pays condemned very severely Mgr. Fallon at the time.

No Tenure Case To-day.

Ottawa, March 11.—There will be presented to the Supreme Court to-day the stated questions on the subject of the marriage law which have been drawn up by the Government. E. L. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, will present the case before the court.

It is not expected that there will be any argument at present. The judges will simply fix a date when the questions can be heard. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., and Eugene Lafleur, K.C., will represent the Dominion side of the case, and I. F. Hellmuth and P. Mignault, K.C., the provincial side.

It is expected that Quebec will be the only province which will be represented by counsel. Most of the other provinces have been heard from to the effect that they will not appoint counsel.

Indians Want Concessions.

Brantford, March 11.—The Six Nation Indians have decided to make another effort to secure from the Dominion Government principal and interest of $800,000, which they invested in Grand River Navigation Co.

The chiefs in council will also visit the Government to protest against the expropriation of reserve land on the ground that the Indians were allies of the British crown.

A petition is also in circulation in the reserve asking that the Ontario Government grant the franchise to them again.

Telegrapher Across the Border.

Ottawa, March 11.—Harvey Boal, the telegraph operator upon whom the C.P.R. placed the blame for the fatal train wreck at Hull, has got away to the States. Trace has been lost of him at the upper lake, New York.

The missing man sent a letter to his mother by the man who drove him to Russell from Hull, stating he was responsible for a wreck which had killed three people and he feared punishment for this.

Peary Congratulates Amundsen.

New York, March 11.—The New York Times yesterday published the following tribute from the discoverer of the North Pole to Capt Amundsen:

"To the Editor of The New York Times: I have read Amundsen's terse story in The New York Times with the greatest interest. Reading his experiences has carried me back to my days on the Greenland ice cap. There seems little room for comment on Amundsen's account. Shackleton, who is fully acquainted by hard-earned experience with every detail of that particular region, has covered the ground fully.

"I am glad that Amundsen developed for himself a new and independent route for the entire distance to the South Pole. His determination of the head or the limit of the Ross Sea ice barrier is particularly interesting in its bearing on the theory which has been advanced that the Ross Sea and Weddell Sea indentations were connected by a trough of low elevation filled with barrier ice cutting Antarctica into two main portions. The story has been transmitted from the antipodes with wonderful effectiveness, and The New York Times and The London Chronicle deserve great credit for their enterprise. (Signed) Robt. E. Peary."

Increase For German Navy.

Cologne, Germany, March 11.—The text of the proposed new naval law is published in The Volks Zeitung that, under its provisions, the German navy is to be expanded from 58 to 61 big ships, and there are also to be 40 protected cruisers instead of 38.

The new law provides that the navy shall be formed as follows:

A battle fleet consisting of a flagship and five squadrons of eight battleships each, ten first-class cruisers and 30 protected cruisers.

The fleet for service in foreign waters is to be composed of ten first-class cruisers and ten protected cruisers.

Three active squadrons and one reserve squadron, together with a flagship, making in all 33 battleships, are to be kept constantly in commission.

The chief feature of the law, aside from the increase in the number of battleships, is the stationing of two armored cruisers abroad.

Panama Canal Tolls.

Washington, March 11.—The bill for the government of the Panama Canal Zone and the operations of the canal was agreed Saturday by the House committee on interstate commerce. It would give to the President authority to fix tolls within certain limitations, a maximum of $1.25 per ton being prescribed, with a minimum not below an amount sufficient to maintain and operate the canal. No preference would be given to American ships.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch is in charge of the plans for the big parade which the suffragists of New York state are aiming to give in New York city early next spring.

Miss Ethlyn Swan is the only girl in the engineering department of Highland Park college, Des Moines, Ia. She is eighteen years old and is enthusiastic about engineering as a profession for women.

Miss Helen M. Gould, daughter of Jay Gould, runs one of the finest poultry farms in New York state at her Tarrytown estate. She keeps about 2,000 chickens, and the eggs command a premium.

Mrs. George A. Hibbard, widow of a former mayor of Boston, who became an actress to support her children, left the stage after thirty-three weeks of professional experience, saying that the work is too depressing and that she needs a long rest.

Miss Adelaide Utter of Kansas City, who has the distinction of being the first woman to hold a federal court clerkship, was retired from the government service Jan. 1 because the office she holds has been abolished. Miss Utter was clerk in Kansas City for the Eighth circuit for nearly a score of years.

Sporting Notes.

Counting odd distance events, nearly seventy-five world's records in all lines of sport were established during 1911.

It has been definitely decided that no British polo team will be sent to America during 1912 to attempt to recover the international cup. It is understood that the reason for not challenging is due to difficulty in procuring capable ponies.

George Moriarty, third baseman of the Tigers, is a great booster of "Ossie" Caldwell, the tall Yankee Colt. Moriarty declares that Caldwell has more stuff than Russell Ford and that he should prove one of the most sensational pitchers in the American league the coming season.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.
IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.
It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Women medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures.
If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

THE MARRIAGE LAW REFERENCE WILL BE HEARD ON MAY 7

Deputy Minister of Justice Submitted Application For The Hearing to The Chief Justice To-day

MANY COUNSEL THERE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, MARCH 11.—The marriage law reference by the Dominion Government, arising out of the Lancaster Bill and the operation of the Ne Temere decree, will be heard by the Supreme Court on the first day of the May term, namely, Tuesday, May 7th. This was the decision of the Chief Justice, when Deputy Minister of Justice E. L. Newcombe, K. C., this morning submitted the application for hearing to the Court. There was a full attendance of judges, namely the Chief Justice Sir Chas. Fitzpatrick, Sir Louis Davies, Hon. Justice Idlington, Hon. Justice Duff and Hon. Justice Belcourt.

The seats within the bar were filled with an array of counsel. In addition to Mr. Newcombe were Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., I. P. Hellmuth, K. C., Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and P. B. Mignault, K.C. Messrs. Nesbitt and Mignault will be retained by the Dominion to argue in support of the right of the Dominion Parliament to legislate, and Messrs. Helmuth and Lafleur to argue on behalf of the other side of the argument. The Province of Quebec was represented by E. C. Smith, K.C., and Aime Geoffryon, K.C., with Auguste Lemieux, K. C., of Ottawa, as agent. E. A. Lancaster was an interested spectator.

TYPHOID OUTBREAK AT PORT HOPE

Examiner Special:

PORT HOPE, MARCH 9.—At the present time there is considerable consternation in the town of Port Hope, by reason of a typhoid epidemic. There are at present twenty-seven cases in the city, but it is not possible yet to form an opinion as to their cause. At the request of a number of citizens, D. Amyot, Provincial Analyst, was sent from Toronto and conferred with the Board of Health. The Doctor expects to arrive at the cause of the epidemic shortly, and in the meantime, he says that all food should be cooked, as typhoid infection can only be taken through the mouth.

PEKIN, MARCH 4.— Pres. Yuan Shi Kai who took the oath of office yesterday, pardoned all prisoners today except murderers and robbers and proclaimed that the old Chinese criminal laws would prevail for the present except where they clashed with the spirit of Republicanism.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

THE BARTENDER HAD RED HAIR

So Testified Hanlon Howard, a Reserve Indian, in the Police Court This Morning

VIOLATED LIQUOR ACT

Hanlon Howard, a reserve Indian from Hiawatha, pleaded guilty in the Police Court this morning to a charge of being intoxicated in the city on Saturday afternoon.

In the witness box he pleaded guilty and testified to having been served with whiskey at the Palace Hotel, conducted by Mr. Frederick Blastorah, and also the Grand Hotel, operated by Mr. Charles Nixon. In the former place he was served with one whiskey, which he paid for. His description of the bartender who supplied him was confined to one observation, and that was the bartender had red hair.

Howard was supplied several times throughout the day at the Grand Hotel.

No questions were asked as to his racial origin at either places.

The Magistrate reserved judgment until Thursday.

Mr. Miller, the newly appointed Indian agent, appeared in court for the first time in his official capacity.

BUGLE BAND MINSTRELS AT THE GRAND

Will Repeat Their Performance To-morrow Night, Following Success at Armories.

The success of the Bugle Band Minstrel Show, at the Armouries on Friday night, and the fact that a large number were unable to secure admission has influenced the Committee of directors to repeat the performance in the Grand Opera House to-morrow night, Tuesday, March 12. Those who saw the production speak very highly of it and there should be a large attendance. The Conductor, Mr. R. Beach, has prepared a very enjoyable programme and the larger stage at the Opera House should enable the Bugle Band boys to improve their presentation, if that is possible. The songs and choruses are good, and the rest of the programme is of the same standard.

STEAMER CRUSHED BETWEEN ICE FLOES HER CREW HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Twenty People Including One Woman Have a Perilous And Uncomfortable Passage Over The Ice

VESSEL IS SINKING

Examiner Special:

CHICAGO, MARCH 11. — The steamer "Flora" of the Northern Michigan Transportation Co., is thought to be sinking, after being crushed between two immense ice floes, three miles out in the Lake, north of here. The crew of twenty-four persons, including one woman, escaped by walking over the ice to the piers here, suffering considerable from exposure. They say their vessel was wedged fast when they left it.

THE STRIKE SITUATION

Situation in England is Becoming Desperate—Three Million Workers Idle

STEAMSHIP LINES CRIPPLED

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 11.—With the beginning of the third week of the coal strike, the situation among the poorer classes all over England is becoming desperate. Prices of all foodstuffs have increased greatly and old timers recall the day of the Crimean war when people lived on black bread and wheat sold at a guinea a bushel. Nearly three millions of workers are now idle owing to the strike and the shutting down of industries on account of no coal. Trans-Atlantic steamers are tied up at nearly every point. The Canadian Northern steamer, Royal Edward, due to leave Bristol a week ago with many Canadians returning to Canada with people who have spent the winter in the old country may not get away even this week. Canadian Pacific lines may cancel this week's sailings.

BAD FIRE IN GUELPH

Special to The Examiner:

GUELPH, MARCH 11.—One of the biggest blazes of the season broke out shortly before 12 o'clock to-day, in the City Hotel block, supposed to have originated from an overheated chimney. The blaze spread to the stables in the rear, completely destroyed this, and also the upper stories of the hotel and all that portion of the building used as a store-room. The fire is still burning, but under control. The loss will be heavy, though there is substantial insurance. There was about $40,000 worth of carpets stored in the building, which will be a total loss to the Guelph Carpet Mills Co.

ASSOCIATED BOARDS OF TRADE WAIT ON GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, MARCH 11.—The immediate deepening of the Welland Canal, with the subsequent deepening of the St. Lawrence Canal System, the need for improvement of highways, and the improvement of the French River Route were pressed upon the Government this afternoon by the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade. The usual consideration was promised. There is reason to believe that the supplementary estimates for next year, which are to be presented some time this week will contain a substantial vote for the Welland extension, but whether the Georgian Bay Canal will receive any consideration this year is very doubtful.

WILL UNITED STATES MINERS JOIN INTERNATIONAL STRIKE?

New York Papers To-day Talk of General Strike---Miners Are Out in Great Britain, Germany and France---Ontario's Coal Supply Would be Cut Off

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, MARCH 11.—It is evident that the coal strike is getting much nearer home. New York papers to-day talk of a general strike of the United States anthracite miners as a crisis that cannot easily be avoided. With strikes on in Great Britain, Germany and France, it is the opinion of Pennsylvania miners that now is the time to show sympathy with their fellow workers across the Atlantic and add to their own fortunes by pressing for higher wages and better hours conditions.

Committees of miners and mine owners in New York city to-day were inclined to deadlock on increases, the miners pointing out that these were only recently granted. A strike in the Pennsylvania mines would mean the immediate cutting off of Ontario's coal supply from that source. It is pointed out, however, that Ontario is rather fortunately circumstanced for power and heating with extensive electric systems in operation all over the province and some districts amply supplied with natural gas and oil.

EATONS HAVE A ROYAL CHANCE TO LIFT THE CUP

Lou Marsh Says Easterners Showed Winnipeg That All The Hockey Speed on The Map is Not Bottled Under The Buffalo Crested Red Shirts of The Victorias

Special to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, MARCH 11. — To-night is the night, to-night's the night!" is the slogan of the Ontario champions to-day. Though beaten 8 to 4 Saturday night, the Eaton team will jump into to-night's fray only a trifle less confident than they went on the ice Saturday night, and don't overlook the fact that the diamond "E" mavericks have one royal good chance to take that silverware back east. They set it rocking in real earnest Saturday night and gave Winnipeg a bad attack of heart failure more than once during the session. Think of it, though playing under Western rules and, officials, the O. H. A. champions had the Pug tornadoes beaten 3 to 2 until a minute before half-time and held them to a tie, 3 all, at the resting period, and just get this under the brim of your hat. The Eatons showed Winnipeg crowd that all the ultra hockey speed on this map is not bottled under the Buffalo-crested red-shirts on the Victorias. While it must be admitted that Foyston and Richardson are not as fleet of foot as their checks, the rest of the crew, Hylasd, Rankin, Meeking, and Laflamme, showed that they could skate just as fast as any man on the Peg team, and sometimes a wee bit faster. Not once, but half a dozen times, Rankin skated the length of the Rink, carrying the puck and skating off every man who joined in pursuit. Right here in Winnipeg it is admitted that Rankin was unquestionably the best man on the ice. Three to one on the round and even money on to-night's game are the prevailing odds.

All were in rags and suffering from lack of food, and the youngest is so ill that its recovery is doubtful. The mother, whose husband abandoned her, consigned her children, is said to have consigned her children to the care of a friend named Frederick, while she went to Peterborough to earn money to support them. That friend, with her husband, and no less than six children of her own, and the other six, a total of fourtee persons, were huddled in a very small room.

SOUTH END COUPLE RENDERED HOMELESS BY EARLY MORNING FIRE

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes 188 Perry Street Badly Gutted by Conflagration at 5 O'clock This Morning

$600 DAMAGE DONE

The Fire Department were given an early start this week, and from all appearances so far have had a busy time. They attended no less than three fires during the forenoon of today.

The first call came at 3.45 a.m. from Box 15, situated at the corner of Perry and George streets. Upon arrival the brigade found a fire had broken out at 188 Perry street, a frame dwelling house half way between George and Aylmer streets. The upper portion of the building was blazing furiously, filling the sky with a lurid glare, and the residents in the locality were much alarmed for fear the fire should spread.

THE FIRE WAS CHECKED

The Department, however, were able to confine the conflagration to the building in which it started. Much to the credit of the firemen, for their alertness the structure was not burned to the ground, only the roof and attic suffering to any great extent. The damage to the building will not exceed six hundred dollars, and the damage to the contents will be very slight, as the occupants of the house had only recently taken temporary possession. Just a few articles of household effects were in the building at the time, otherwise the damage by water would have involved a considerable sum of money. The building, it is understood, is owned by Mr. Onias Leplante, and was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Hughes, who, it is learned, only recently returned from the Northwest.

The brigade reached headquarters at 5.30 a.m.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but in all probability is the result of a defective chimney.

THE SECOND CALL

The second call came from 344 Aylmer street at 8.15 a.m. This was a chimney fire, with no damage.

ANOTHER CHIMNEY FIRE

At 9.50 there came the third call, a summons to 192 Dublin street, where again a chimney was the cause of alarm. With the aid of a couple of small hand chemicals the danger was averted and no damage to the building resulted.

PREPARING TO GO WEST

Four Car Loads of Settler's Effects Being Made up in C. P. R. Yards To-day

WILL LEAVE TO-MORROW

Peterborough is contributing four cars of settlers' effects that will leave for the west some time to-morrow. They are being made up to-day in the C.P.R. yards and the storing away of the household effects has created unusual activity. Mr. Garrett has secured a car and is moving to Moose Jaw; Mr. James Stewart is likewise loading a car for Lethbridge. Mr. A. Thompson and another party are using the remaining cars. This is just the first contingent of Peterborough residents who intend to go west this spring. Others are leaving shortly and quite a pronounced movement to the land of promise, as it appears to some, is noticeable.

AN AEROPLANE WEDDING

Examiner Special:

PARIS, MARCH 11.—The first authentic aeroplane wedding is told of to-day in a despatch from Avignon. The bridegroom, a well-known aviator, named Voiser, flew to the field next to the church, where the wedding took place. Directly after the ceremony, the airman and his bride who was Mlle. Brasmound, mounted in a two-seated Bleriot, and flew to Nice, where the first part of the honeymoon is to be passed.

ALBERTA PUBLICITY CAR AT PETERBORO' MAR. 13, 1912

The Camrose Publicity Club have arranged for a special Grand Trunk Pacific tourist car to contain the exhibits of the Province of Alberta, to tour Eastern Canada with a view of attracting further settlement to that Province.

This car will arrive in Peterborough a 8.10 a.m., March 13th, and will remain on the Station siding at the Grand Trunk depot until 5.30 p.m., the same day. Everybody interested in that great country are cordially invited to pay this car a visit.

DEATH'S CALL WAS SUDDEN

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 1.—Rev. Geo. Elliott, rector St. Peter's Anglican church, Tyrconnell, is dead as a result of being injured in a runaway accident recently while going his rounds in stormy weather. The cutter upset in a snow drift and the horse kicked him in the abdomen.

Golf And Country Club Meeting

At a meeting of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club, Limited, held on Saturday evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers, the following gentlemen were elected directors: Mr. T. D. Holland, Mr. W. H. Denham, Mr. H. D. Burnett, Mr Gerald Hall, Mr. W. G. Morrow.

The attendance was considered not as large as it should have been, and it was deemed unwise to elect captains and committees for the coming season. At a later date, another meeting of the players will be held, when it is hoped that all those who take an interest in golf will make an effort to be present.

PERSONAL

Mrs. A Macfarlane, 599 Hamond avenue, will receive to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon, and not again this season.

THE WEATHER

The thermometer was down to 4 below zero Sunday morning, and 2 above zero this morning. The heavy mantle of winter's snow is still very much in evidence. There has not been a genuine thaw during the winter. A thaw is due any day now. It is quite likely that we may have another snow storm before spring finally arrives. Some of the heaviest falls of snow we have ever had have been in the month of March.—W. P.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled.

MONDAY, MARCH 11, 1912.

THE BIGGEST SURPLUS.

As the fiscal year advances, the indications of Canada achieving the record surplus of revenue, become greater. When the Finance Minister makes his budget speech in a few days, he will be able to announce probably the largest surplus in the history of the Dominion. It will certainly be over $40,000,000 and may even reach $45,000,000. For the eleven months of the fiscal year the revenue on consolidated fund has been $120,645,616, while the expenditure has been $77,145,884, an increase of $16,349,000 in the receipts, and of $6,587,953 in the expediture. The expenditure upon capital account for the eleven months has been just about $27,000,000. A surplus of forty millions will be a striking comment upon the material growth of Canada, and the results flowing from the developmental policy and administration of the Laurier Government.

PERFECTLY NATURAL.

A despatch to the Mail and Empire states that Mr. Burnham (M.P.) is out in favour of voting by ballot in parliamentary divisions; and Mr. Burnham's personal organ in Peterborough introduces its quotation of the despatch by the statement that "Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., is making good, and bringing himself and, incidentally, the county, into the limelight at Ottawa."

The organ is only half right. Mr. Burnham, in one sense, is bringing the county into the limelight in a way that the county is by no means proud of. But instead of putting himself into the limelight in a representative way, he seems to be seeking to hide his light under a bushel.

It is no matter of surprise that a man who gives votes in parliament, which he should be ashamed of, should seek conceal the way he votes from his deluded and disgusted constituents. A man, who, to secure his election, made use of all sorts of false and misleading statements, appealed to every ignorant prejudice and selfish interest, and took a stand that he discredited, and denied in his first vote in Parliament, should demand the vote by ballot, so that his betrayal of interests to which he owes his election, his inconsistency with all he professes to stand for, might be hidden. Such a travesty of representatives institutions as voting by ballot could enter into no other mind, though it is quite consistent with the dark lantern methods that helped him to a place in comic-opera politics. West Peterborough must, for a time, at least, submit to the humiliation of being made a laughing stock of through its parliamentary representation. The latest "break" of Mr. Burnham is not surprising; it is a perfectly natural one to expect, and, of course, "there will be others."

PEN PORTRAIT OF PELLETIER.

Gadsby, in the Toronto Star, puts the followinng pen portrait of Hon. Mr. Pelletier, on the face of "The Gallery Clock" in the Toronto Star:

Pelletier, lean and hungry, like Cassius. A significant man, perhaps, dangerous. Eyes, grey-black, hypnotic, baleful. Face, pale, strangely pale, almost suggesting Carlyle's epithet sea-green as applied to Robespierre. This pallor may be due to ill-health or cigarettes, of which he smokes many, rolling them himself, a little economy which may indicate that Pelletier loves money. In the last twenty-five years Pelletier's political course has been as straight ahead as an equilateral triangle inscribed on two intersecting circles. He has made so many twists and turns that he has lost track of himself, and now vows that the only true consistency is with the present. Pelletier began as a Tory, turned Grit on the Riel question, stayed Grit through the unrestricted reciprocity campaign of 1891, was good enough Rouge to be admired by Mercier, who did not trust him enough to take him into his Cabinet, shaded off into Independent in 1908, became Tory-Nationalist again in 1911. This brings him up to date. Pelletier has been something of a chameleon. If you put on a Scotch plaid he would probably burst himself trying to make good. Pelletier was also Zandring—but that story will keep. Pelletier speaks fair English. When he speaks it badly one suspects that it is a ruse, like Lord Nelson's blind eye, and that there is something he does not want to explain. Pelletier made a speech on the Keewatin school question in which he swallowed himself and his past, and showed himself ready to swallow his present convictions, if necessary. Pelletier professed himself willing to hold any wolf by the ears. Particularly did he look that bogey-man, Bourassa, straight in the eyes. He wouldn't be stampeded by him—not he. Ten portfolios couldn't hold him, once he got his teeth set. No need of ten. One's enough. It's surprising how much patriotism and noble indignation you can buy for ten thousand dollars a year. Pelletier's speech, taken as a whole, is a crazy quilt. It was intended that way—a patch for Manitoba, another patch for Ontario, a third patch for Quebec, other patches for Pelletier's amour propre. The last thing the Postmaster-General wants is that that speech should be read together. It is like the curate's egg—parts of it are excellent.

WHAT IS TREASON.

(Toronto Star)

W. J. Tregillus, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, is charged with treason because he advocated the secession of Western Canada from Eastern Canada. At Massey Hall it was argued that Canad would be better off if her federal union were abolished and legislative union substituted. Neither change will be made in our constitution, but one seems to be as treasonable as the other. In fact, the very worst form of treason is to propose to take away any of the liberties of the people.

In Belfast certain people are swearing that they will not obey a parliament sitting in Dublin. What is the difference between that and certain people in Manitoba and Alberta declaring their desire to escape from laws made at Ottawa? Some Ulstermen say they will not pay any taxes levied at Dublin. This is supposed to be a strictly loyal proceeding. But suppose Western farmers declared that they would not obey tariff laws made at Ottawa, but would insist upon British free trade? If an Ulsterman has a right to disobey any laws that are not made in England, why has not a Western free-trader a right to say that he will pay no attention to a tariff that is not made in London?

BOURASSA HITS NATIONALIST MINISTERS

MONTREAL, MARCH 10.— Before an immense audience in the Monument National, Montreal, Bourassa made a fierce onslaught on the Borden government, especially the recalcitrant Nationalist members.

The address of Mr. Bourassa was typical of the Nationalist leader. For three hours he gave vent to sneers, to bitter denunciations, to appeals to racial and religious prejudice, until at last the huge audience came under the spell of his eloquence and thundered forth their approval of his sentiments.

In his speech he stated that he had never insulted Laurier. This statement caused even the partisan audience to gasp, but Mr. Bourassa continued as unconcernedas if he had made a commonplace remark regarding the weather. His mention of Mr. Monk brought forth hisses. "Stop!" cried the speaker. "Wait until next week before you hiss," intimating that there might shortly be a change of front by the Minister of Public Works. Mr. Pelletier, the Postmaster-General, came in for the most of Mr. Bourassa's sneers. Mr. Pelletier owed his election to Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne, and his subsequent elevation to the Cabinet rank came as a result of their solicitation. That he had seen fit to oppose their wishes now, was sufficient to place him among the enemies of the Catholic church and the French race. "Mr. Pelletier has mixed the Manitoba and Keewatin school questions. They should not be mixed, but kept separate. He is the only politician who has mixed these two questions, and his action in so doing was evidently done for a purpose."

French Language and Rights.

Even in the denunciation of Pelletier and Monk he was far less violent than when he appealed to the French race to preserve their language and religion and to fight for their rights. "What is the use of being faithful for 150 years to the British Crown," he asked, amid thundering applause, "if we are to be kicked and jumped upon at their pleasure simply because we are weak and in the minority? If this law is passed by the Federal Government the French-Canadians may well ask themselves that question."

x x x x x

After a tirade againts tthe English-speaking papers of Ontario, with The Globe mentioned as the chief sinner, Mr. Bourassa tried to defend bilingual schools in Ontario, only to appeal again to the passions and prejudices of his hearers. "The English sneer at us, but we are honest if we are poor. We do not steal the bread from our neighbours as they do. But," added Mr. Bourassa, in conclusion, "we cannot expect the English to fight our battles and defend our rights. It is up to us to start a campaign and wage such a war that no person shall dare to deny us our rights."

Mr. A. C. Cahan, who led the flag-waving element of Quebec at the last elections—to kill Laurier, and incidentally to save the Empire, made as fiery a speech as Bourassa, chiefly attacking Laurier. Among other things, he said:

"If the French minority of Keewatin have their rights taken from them the fault is yours. It is because you have not kept faith with your own people. You supported Laurier in 1896, again in 1900, 1904 and 1908, yet he betrayed your race. You have sixty-five members in Parliament, you represent forty per cent. of the nation. Why do you not fight?"

AN EXPLANATION OF THE WOMAN-SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

Written For The Examiner by Miss Adeline C. Roberts—No. 3

The recent suffragette riots in England have naturally called forth a torrent of criticism. Here and there may be heard a solitary voice bodly raised in defence of their proceedings, but for the most part, the criticisms (even of the strongest suffragists) are those of severe inqualified censure.

On anti-suffragists who sweepingly condemn anything and everything said and done in the interests of woman suffrage, anything in the shape of an explanation, is, of course, wasted. But to those who say they "knew very little about it," to those who are doubtful, unable to justify, yet unwilling to condemn, to those supporters of equal franchise who "cannot approve of militant tactics," and to those who have hitherto defended the "militants" but now consider that "this time they have gone too far," I should like to say something in explanation, and possibly, in justification of their methods.

The experience of some thousand years, the evidence of criminal statistics, an inquiry into the percentage of female prisoners, goes to prove that women, all down the ages, have always been more law-abiding than men. When we then face the fact that by far the larger proportion of these militant suffragettes are not ignorant hooligans of the roughest class, nor yet hysterical, ill-balanced, unreasoning fanatics, but women of education, refinement and intelligence, many of them university students, women who shrink from publicity, but yet feel that they are acting rightly, we cannot but ask:

What is the enormous provocation, what has caused the powerful sense of injustice, that has driven these women into adopting such determined, violent and extreme measures, so contrary to their natural instincts and womanly feelings?

There are 18 suffrage societies in England, one of which, and by far the largest, is militant. This isthe Women's Social and Political Union, of which Mrs. Pankhurst is the head. The modern agitation for the franchise, dates from 1866, when women found a champion for their cause in John Stuart Mill. From 1866 to 1879 a constitutional agitation of magnificent proportions was carried on, the demand for the vote was expressed by women all over the country, it was supported by prominent men, and by the councils of leading municipalities. It is computed that the number of petitions sent to Parliament, asking for the franchise for women, amounted to 9,563, and that the signatures numbered over three millions, and between 1,300 and 1,400 meetings were held to promote the cause. Nevertheless, it was defeated, by the direct intervention of the then Prime Minister.

In 1897 a final effort in the line of constitutional agitation was carried out in the shape of a monster memorial to members of Parliament, of which very little notice was taken. And so, on through the years that followed until 1906 did government continue, with callous indifference, to ignore the women's demand, and it became clear that other means must be resorted to. It became plain that a voteless section of the community cannot bring constitutional pressure to bear on the government of the day. They cannot bring law into action to enforce their rights, for they have no rights. Wherever, therefore, the government of the day has stood out against the wishes of a people who were unrepresented, there revolutionary methods have had to be resorted to. And if a government refuses to listen to a popular demand the responsibility of any consequences of that refusal rests with the government.

The Women's Social and Political Union was formed in 1906 for the purpose of trying to compel the government to listen to the women's case, to force them to argue it out on its own merits, to accept violence at their hands, rather than submit to remain voiceless, and there is no doubt, that whatever may be our opinions of militant tactics, it is these same militant methods which have done more than anything to further the interests of the cause, and to bring it into the forefront of practical politics. No other method would have brought it into that position which it holds today in England. In other countries and states, where woman suffrage obtains, it has been gained by peaceful methods without resort to the means employed by the militants but petitions pleadings, arguments, appeals, even a majority in favour in the British Parliament have all proved useless in England. There comes a time when patience ceases to be a virtue, and when the militant suffragettes commenced their vigorous action the time for patience had gone by.

Why should women be condemned for adopting methods which men found so useful when demanding the vote for themselves. In 1867, also in 1884, very few public speakers who were opposed to an extension of parliamentary franchise to men could utter a word at a public meeting. Meetings were broken up, platforms stormed, and their occupants had to escape as best they could. Before the working men in England got the vote, they destroyed much valuable property, burnt down (in Bristol) the Mansion House, Custom House, Bishop's Palace, Excise Office, three prisons, four toll-houses, and forty-two private dwellings and warehouses. Numerous fires took place in other cities, four men were hanged, one bishop nearly killed, and an archbishop insulted and spat upon, and with difficulty rescued from an angry mob. Wales broke out in active rebellion, and nine men were condemned to death. Such is the example set by men in agitating for the franchise. And they obtained it.

To the "militant suffragettes" it seems inevitable that liberty and possibly even lives must be sacrificed before the cause is won, and they have determined that they themselves will be the sacrificed. Imprisonment, suffering and death have no terrors for them. In years to come when equal franchise is an established fact (as it surely will be) in all civilized lands, many thousands of women, who today are sneering at the "militants" and who give neither help nor sympathy to those by whose efforts equal franchise will be won, will avail themselves of its privileges, will congratulate themselves on the new and better conditions under which they are living, and will give never a thought of gratitude to the brave women of to-day, to whose unselfish efforts they owe their improved conditions. But that is human nature. In the pathetic words of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, speaking to an audience in Toronto last week: "Why must we always burn our Joan of Arc and crucify our Christs?"

In conclusion, let me quote a few lines from a speech by Mr. Zangwill in 1907:

"Who can wonder if, tired of this policy of endless evasion, women begin to take the law into their own hands? They are unwomanly— and therein consists the martyrdom of the pioneers. They have to lower themselves to the manners of men; they have to be unwomanly to promote the cause of womanhood. They have to do the dirty work. Let those lady suffragists who sit by their cosy firesides, at least give them admiration and encouragement. . . . For fifty years now woman has stood crying: "I stand for justice—answer, shall I have it? And the answer has been a mocking "no" or a still more mocking "yes." To-day she cries: "I fight for justice and I answer that I shall have it."

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependible remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

A BOTTLING FACTORY

Mr. H. C. Mackenzie Cornish, of the firm of Corby & Co., is in Watrous Sask., negotiating for the establishment in that rapidly growing Grand Trunk Pacific division point of a bottling factory. A company will be organized under the name of the Watrous Mineral Water Co., Ltd., with a capital of $75,000 and will seek from the city a building site for its office and trackage with a promise to spend $25,000 in developing its plant within three years. A $5,000 by-law for building sites is to be brought before the Council of Watrous immediately.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE SEASON JUST CLOSED ONE OF MOST SUCCESSFUL IN LOCAL HOCKEY HISTORY

Resume of Operations in O.H.A., Trent Valley and Mercantile Leagues--Season Featured by Unexpectedly Brilliant Showing of the Juniors--Much Good Material Was Developed and the Support Given the Game Was Never Better.

The hockey season of 1911-12, as far as Peterborough is concerned, is practically over—nothing remains but the games for the junior city championship which will be played this week—and casting a retroscopic eye over the events of the past two months, the fan has no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the season just drawing to an end has been one of the best in the local history of the great winter pastime. The campaign has been remarkable in many ways—it has been marked by the best showing a Peterborough junior team has made in thirteen seasons, and on only three occasions has the Peterborough intermediate team been so close to a championship. Other outstanding features of the season have been the wonderful interest taken in the success of the teams and the grand attendance at the different games, the growth of Derocher from a good to a phenomenal goalkeeper, the uncovering of a crack junior net-guardian in Dwyer, the development of star forwards in Weir and Clancy, the coming to the front of such good junior material as Milloy and Kennedy and the making good in the right wing position—the hardest place on a line-up to fill satisfactorily—of Jerry Coughlin. While no O.H.A. championships were won, both intermediate and junior teams carried their colours into the second last week of the season and the club can claim the undisputed championship of the entire eastern section of the O.H.A. in both classes. Never in the history of hockey in Peterborough have two teams gone so far towards capturing the silverware, and all things considered the season should be termed a banner one.

THE JUNIORS A SURPRISE.

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the year was the brilliant and totally unexpected showing made by the juniors, who while not considered seriously, except by a few people at the beginning of the season, climbed a notch higher in the championship race than did the intermediates upon whom, when the campaign opened, all faith in the probability of a championship being won, had been pinned. To Captain Art Hall, more than to any other individual is the success of the juniors to be attributed. The only survivor of the 1910-11 team, he began to prepare for this year's team months before there was any hockey talk in the air, and by the rounding up of such splendid material made it possible to place a team on the ice that was indeed a credit to the city. Owing to the late date at which the ice came, there was little time to develop a team; in fact the line-up that practically remained the same throughout the season with the substitution in mid-season of Denison for Cook, had to be chosen after the first practice and had only two workouts before being called upon to meet the Cobourg septette, with five of their last year's team in action. The seven selected were Dwyer, Milloy, Kennedy, Weir, Hall, Cook and Clancy. Of these Milloy, Kennedy, Dwyer and Clancy had never played in the O.H.A., Cook had had one season with Milton, Hall two winters with the locals, and Weir's O.H.A. experience was confined to a couple of games for the Peterborough juniors against the local Collegiate team in 1909, so that it was practically a squad of recruits. To make matters worse, Milloy was the only defence man available and Kennedy, who had always played on the attack, had to be shifted back to cover-point where he made good at once. Singularly, out of the twenty youngsters who turned out, there was not a right hand shot; at least, no one with enough ability in other departments of the game to make him of any service. This made it necessary to play Cook, a left hand shot, on right wing, while Clancy, who had always hitherto played in centre ice, was moved to the left boards. These points are mentioned merely to show the handicap under which the youngsters started the season.

Opened With a Win.

Their first game against the strong Cobourg seven was fortunately on home ice and by their speed and gameness they succeeded in beating the Easterners by 9 goals to 8 after an exciting battle. The youngsters were willing and anxious, proved amenable to coaching and advice and early developed a spirit of harmony and team-play that had a great deal to do with the record they made. Never at any stage throughout the season did any selfishness develop in their play—it was every man for the team, and not for individual glory. On their second appearance against the cocky Lindsay Midgets, they showed improvement and trimmed the visitors nicely by 16 to 5. Then came the real test—the return game in Lindsay, and the kids came through with flying colours, winning a desperate battle by a display of courage and gameness that earned them the name of Bear Cats, which has stuck to them throughout the season. Twice more in the next few days had they hard games away from home and once more their ability on strange rinks was manifested by victories in Port Hope and Cobourg, the latter win giving them the championship of the district without a defeat. Then came the series with Lawson Whitehead's much-heralded Trenton juniors, who were laid away by a total score of 13 to 7, the Bear Cats winning at home by 12 to 5 and sustaining their first defeat of the season in Trenton by 2 to 1. A bye sent them into the semi-finals and they were drawn against Orillia, last year's as this season's finalists, and it was one of the ironies of fate that in a year when soft ice was decidedly the exception, the Bear Cats should have to meet their toughest adversaries on a heavy, sticky surface which neutralized their speed and combination and gave their bigger and heavier opponents an advantage that was augmented by injuries early in the game to Clancy and Kennedy. Orillia won by 8 to 2 .a score utterly out of plumb with the capabilities of the two teams. Fortunately there was keen ice for the return game, and the Bear Cats demonstrated to their own satisfaction, and to the surprise of the Orillia team and their supporters that on a hard, fast surface, they were every bit as fast as Orillia, and shaded the Younkers in combination and teamwork, Orillia just winning after a hammer and tongs argument by one goal.

It was a grand year for the juniors and the prospects for next year, with three or four of this year's squad available and a bunch of recruits to call upon, are of the brightest. There are a number of good youngsters who have been playing with different local teams this season who have not escaped the eyes of the executive, and these lads will be given a chance to make good next season.

THE INTERMEDIATES' RECORD.

The intermediates started off the season with better prospects and in much better shape than the youngsters. There were two absentees on the forward lines of the year before, in Rover Charlie Ray and Right Wing Earles, but six of the 1911 team, Derocher, Giroux, Glover, Park, Kelly and Bond were available.

The right wing problem was solved by taking Coughlin from the junior ranks and shifting him to the boards. The move was rather against his inclinations, but he made good from the start and would be wise to continue playing the wing, in spite of the fact that he prefers centre ice. Giroux was placed at rover, where he did good work, especially in helping out the defence. In connection with the latter end of the team the club had gained a valuable man in the coming to Peterborough in the spring of 1911 of Bearss, a husky point man from Ingersoll who, with Bond and Derocher, formed the defence for the greater part of the season. Fred Denison had been counted upon, but an injury to his shoulder in the first practice kept him out of the game for three weeks and when he finally was able to resume practice the executive deemed it advisable to use him on the junior line-up for the season with the exception of one intermediate game against Cobourg.

Story of the Games.

The team made a grand showing in its district, winning all six scheduled games without a loss and piling up big scores. Lindsay opened the season here and went down to defeat 13 to 1. Then Capt. Park's men invaded Belleville and won handily by 4 to 1, and in the return game amassed the enormous score of 30 to 1, the biggest intermediate score of the season. The rivals of the year before, The Trenton team, were beaten 17 to 2 and on their own ice 6 to 3 and then came one of the sensational games of the year in the return engagement at Lindsay, which the Petes won in most gallant fashion, although the Midgets had been strengthened by the addition of Jack Spratt, the ex-St. Michael's star and were supremely confident of victory. This win was one of the brightest features of the season and was marked by the biggest exodus of fans from Peterborough in the history of the game.

The districts won, the locals were ordered to meet Cobourg in the second round and ran into an unexpected defeat at Cobourg, losing by 8 to 6, but in the return game two nights afterward, showed their real form and swamped the Lakeshore team, winning by 18 to 3.

The formidable Midland team were next encountered and the skilful Northerners proved too much for the blue and white team, winning in Midland by 10 to 2 and proving their victory was not a fluke, by coming to Peterborough and defeating the locals by 4 to 1. The smoothness and team play of the Gould team, gained by years of playing together, was too big a proposition for the blue and white aggregation, although they made a gallant attempt in both games. During the season they won seven games out of ten and scored 107 goals to their opponents' 36, a grand showing indeed.

THE TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE.

In addition to the grand work of the O.H.A. teams the season was notable for the revival of the Trent Valley League, or rather its reorganization into something like its old proportions. For the first time in five or six years, Peterborough was represented in this organization, having not only one, but two teams. The League, which for the last few years, has been confined to the one district, comprising Marmora, Madoc, Tweed and Stirling, this year branched out into three districts, of which Peterborough T. A. S., Peterborough All Saints, Campbellford and Havelock formed one, the Abstainers proving the ultimate winners. They deserve great credit for their fine showing during the season. Not at all dismayed by the drafts which the Peterborough juniors and intermediates made in their numbers, th T.A.S. set to work to build up a team and succeeded admirably. They were lucky in the acquisition of three new comers to the city, in the Lancefield brothers and McPhee, who played sterling hockey for them. In addition they dug up two promising youngsters in Grover Halpin and Jack O'Dette, grabbed Coughlin from the Mercantile League and rounded out their team by persuading Doc McFadden to come back into the game. The Abstainers won their district after tying it up with Campbellford, and then were defeated by Lakefield in the semi-finals, losing on the round by two goals. They were the only team in the League who were sportsmen enough to play in Lakefield. Had they declined to go to Lakefield on account of the unsuitability of the rink, the League would have undoubtedly sustained their objection; as it was, their gameness cost them their championship chances. The Abstainers' record for the year was seven victories and three defeats, all of the losses being away from home.

THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

The Mercantile League, which has taken the place of the iCty League, as a feeder for the O. H. A. teams, has had a most successful season, which was completed on Saturday night by the defeat of the C.G.E. Tool Room at the hands of the Bell Telephone, giving the latter team the championship. The League comprised three of last year's teams, in the Tool Room, the 1911 champions, the C. G.E. Machine Shop and the Lock Works, and two new aggregations, the Bell Telephone and the Clerks, both of which did exceptionally well. The Bell team, an unusually heavy aggregation, won the title without a defeat, the runners-up being the champions of last year, the Tool Room, whose only losses were inflicted by the Telephone team. The League has brought into the limelight a number of good men and should be encouraged. Of this year's junior O.H.A. team, five men came from the ranks of the Mercantile League.

Many Games Played.

In addition to the O.H.A., Trent Valley and Mercantile League, there has been an abundance of hockey, good, bad and indifferent, the season's list of "scrub" games breaking all records. It was a poor mercantile or manufacturing establishment that could not boast of a hockey team this winter, and five or six games a night has been the rule, rather than the exception, at Brook street rink this season. There have been inter-shop games, inter-school games, inter-form games, games of all kinds, and these local contests will keep on as long as the ice lasts, there being a goodly list scheduled for this week. No wonder it may be said that this has been a wonderful year for hockey in Peterborough.

COULD NOT SWEEP FLOOR

Was So Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back, and no woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well.

The weak, lame and aching back comes from sick kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble. Mrs. Harvey W. Brownell, Northport, N.S., writes:—"I now take pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad at times I could not sweep my own floor. While looking through your B.B.B. Almanac I saw Doan's Kidney Pills were a great remedy, so thought I would try a box or two. After using five boxes I was completely cured, and I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. In ordering direct specify "Doan's."

CURTIS H. TEMPLIN IS PETERBORO MANAGER

Berlin's Crack Second Baseman Will be at The Helm This Season—Has Had a Great Record as a Professional Ball Player—Templin Has The Nucleus of a Team Practically Rounded up.

Curtis M. Templin, will be manager of the Peterborough Baseball Club in the Canadian League this season. He arrived in the city from his home in Reading, Pa., on Saturday night, and the conference with the local promoters resulted in terms being reached that were satisfactory to both parties. Templin has a great record as a professional ball player, and his long experience and his wide acquaintance with managers should make him an invaluable man for the position. As a player he will rank second to very few around the circuit, having been

CURTIS H. TEMPLIN,
Of Reading, Pa., Who Will Manage the Peterborough Team in the Canadian Baseball League.

third on the list of regulars with the stick in the League last season, while he is a classy fielder.

Curtis Harold Templin, the brilliant, dashing, reliable and valuable second baseman of the Berlin club, the 1911 Canadian league champions, was born in Reading, Pa., the state made famous by the great output of baseball celebrities, on Tuesday afternoon, February 11, 1873, and in 1896, at the age of 23 years, this dark complexioned, stocky built chap made his debut as a professional ball tosser at short with the Ashland, Pa., club of the Pennsylvania State league club of that city, participating in 102 championship games, closing his initial season in the professional ranks with a batting average of .304. In 1897 he was umpire in the Atlantic league, under the leadership of President Edward G. Barrow, now in the same capacity in the Eastern. As an arbitrator he acquitted himself most creditably. During the next four seasons, 1898-'01, Templin played short for the independent semi-professional Browns of his native city, which organization was successful in carrying off the championship of the city league for four successive seasons. In 1902 he was at Newburn, N.C., in the Carolina league, clouting the pill for .298 in 112 championship struggles, and in 1903-4 he looked after line drives in left field for the Oxford, Pa., club of Chester County league, batting at .273 and .284 and fielding at .947 and .956 respectively for the two seasons. During the year 1905 he was at first base for Concord, N.H., champions of the New England league, taking part in 108 games, finishing with .241 and covering the bag for .976. He cast his lot with the Frankling, N.H., club in 1906 and in 107 games with this aggregation he gathered an average of .294 and .968 at the middle sack. At Worcester, Mass., this clever second base guardian performed in 1907, taking part in 113 games, hitting for .259 and performing on the bag for .926. Worcester winning the New England league championship. Templin was at Fall River, Mass., in the same organization in 1908, and in 119 games at first base he copped out 99 safeties for .936, and with the fine average of .985 he was but nine points in the percentage ladder behind Murch, of Lawrence, the leader. In 1909 he carried the uniform of the New Bedford team in 36 battles for .294 and .976. Last year he was with the Winston-Salem club of the Carolina association, where he secured .936 and .942 in 111 conflicts, the latter figures giving him third position among the second basemen.

Templin is a close student of the great game; he studies every batter and is generally in the right spot. For one man you may find him playing close to second, and for the other he is close to the first baseman, and for another he is right in on the grass. He is clever taking a throw from the catcher and getting it on the runners. It is almost impossible for the would-be pilferer to hook a slide, as he slides with his man. He digs deep into the dirt for the ball and seldom does it get away from him. Although he is only five feet eight and one-half inches tall he can go into the air the proverbial mile and freeze to the pellet. He simply eats up Texas leaguers, and he can tear around in ten-second time. And what an arm the veteran possesses. He can peg 'em to the plate and to third, and it matters little in what position he is in when he makes the heave, and is lightning fast in getting the ball away from him. He bats and throws right-handed. Templin has been throughout the entire season a capable and valuable lieutenant to Manager George (Rube) Deneau. He has filled the keystone position for Owner (Pop) Williams' Canadian league champions in more ways than one, and when it comes to brains he has a clever head harnessed to a fine pair of shoulders. Curt Templin with last Saturday's game closed his sixteenth consecutive professional season.

Speaking to the Examiner this morning, Manager Templin said that he would have no difficulty in rounding together a team that will be in the running all the way.

"I have seven or eight men practically signed up," he said, "and I will get their signatures to official contracts just as soon as I get back. I have a short stop who is over six feet in height and who is a magnificent fielder with great speed, just the kind of a man that is in demand in the big leagues at the present time. I have also a third baseman, a fast fielding, hard-hitting youngster who is afraid of nothing. I will play second base myself and have already secured a first baseman who gives every sign of being a comer. For the outfield I have selected two sterling fielders, both fast and good stick-handlers and with grand whips. There are a couple of catchers already on the string and I have my eye on a pitching staff so that everything is already in good shape. A few days work on my return home will round out the bunch, who have already commenced training at their respective homes. They will not report in Peterborough until May 1st."

The schedule meeting of the League will be held at Hamilton on Wednesday of this week when the Peterborough Club will be represented by Messrs. Walter Davidson, Dan McCabe and Manager Templin.

BELL TELEPHONE TEAM MERCANTILE CHAMPIONS

Won the Title on Saturday in a Poorly-played Exhibition on Heavy Ice—A Free-for-All Mix-up and a Disputed Goal Were Some of the Features of the Final.

The Bell Telephone Company's seven are champions of the Mercantile League.

The Hello team captured the honours on Saturday night, when they defeated the C. G. E. Tool Room by 2 goals to 1, their second victory of the season over last year's champions.

Although wikily exciting, Saturday night's battle was one of the poorest played in the League this season. Neither team showed anything like their real form and only at times was there any hockey of a classy nature. The Bell team were many pounds heavier than their opponents and the big difference in weight gave them a marked advantage on the sticky, heavy ice. They had the better of the play throughout although behind 1 to 0 at half-time and in spite of the fact that there was considerable doubt as to whether or not the winning counter really scored. The Tool Room got the only goal in the first half, Kennedy scoring after a nice rush and shot from the side, a few minutes after the game opened. The teams battled desperately until half-time, neither squad having many opportunities, so close was the checking. A free-for-all battle featured the second half. The trouble started when the Bell umpire came out from behind his nets to argue with Hall of the Tool Room. One of the Bell forwards "butted into" the argument by attacking Hall from behind, and in a moment, there was a mix-up, into which the players of both teams and a number of the spectators were involved. It looked serious for a moment, but the combatants were pulled apart with no damage done.

Patterson scored for the Bell team in a few minutes after the face-off, tying the score. The goal was rather a lucky one. Half a dozen players were in a desperate mixup, at one side of the Tool Room nets, when the rubber was knocked out in front. Cassidy never saw the puck which lay there for a few seconds until Patterson came along and batted it in. A few minutes later, Wettlaufer went up the side and shot from the boards. The Umpire's hand went up and in a second there was another grand argument. The Tool Rooms bunch contended that the rubber went through the side of the net, and in this claim they were supported by many of the spectators at that end of the rink. However, the Umpire maintained that it was a goal, and Referee McClasey counted it as such. The bell rang a few minutes afterwards.

The Bell team have won eight victories without a defeat this season. Following was the line-up:

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Lindsay Warder says:

The Lindsay travelers will play an exhibition game of hockey next Friday night, according to present arrangements ,against the drummers of Peterborough, the proceeds to be handed over to the Ross Memorial Hospital. This game promises to provide untold amusement for players and spectators alike, and as Peterborough will have a large number of travelers to pick a good team from it is expected that they will have a fast line-up. However, Manager "Larry" Blackwell of the Lindsay drummers, stated to a Warder man this morning that his aggregation of puck-chasers will give the visitors a stiff argument. They will probably be the following: Goal, Alex Ross; ; point, Archie Holmes cover-point, Jack Gray; forwards, L. Blackwell, H. Woods, F. Farew and —. Keslick.

Already the Peterborough travelers are dieting on Postum and Quaker oats. Watch for further announcements.

FENELON FALLS, MARCH 9. —In the final game in the hockey tournament played here on Friday evening, 8th inst., the handsome cup given by Mr. A. Fountain for competition was won by the Little Britain from Fenelon Falls team by a score of 5 to 4, in the best game seen on Fenelon ice for years.

A dispatch from Kingston contains news which will be anything but welcome to lovers of sport. It concerns Chaucer Elliott, that popular baseball manager, football player and general sport adviser. According to the dispatch, Chaucer is in grave danger of losing his right leg. Some years ago Chaucer injured the leg while playing football for Queen's university and the same leg was injured a few weeks ago while Chaucer was refereeing a hockey game. Physicians have advised him to go to New York and consult a specialist. They say that the radium treatment is his only hope. Dr. Mundell will accompany the genial Chaucer on his journey, and there is not one sport in Canada who will not hope that the journey results successfully, for Elliott is sure a well-liked sport.

RICHARD HALL & SON

ABLE ADDRESS AT PARK STREET BY THE REV. W. C. RIDDIFORD

Large Congregation Turn Out to The Morning Service—Were Rewarded by an Inspiring Message From Pastor

Rev. W. C. Riddiford addressed a large congregation at Park street Baptist churc hyesterday. The nature of the sermon was a revelation to many, dealing as it did with three very important questions, bearing upon the relation of man to Christ in a spiritual sense.

His subject was "What is it to be in Christ?" and his text, 2 Cor., 5:17: In Christ!

The whole passage, or verse of Scripture, from which my text is taken this morning, reads as follows: "So that if any one is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old state of things has passed away; a new state of things has come into existence. Dr. Weymouth's Greek rendering, which I accept, but I wish to confine myself this hour to a brief resume of the import, meaning, and value, of these two important words, and seek to give, if I can, an answer to the question given to me to answer: "What is it to be in Christ?" and as we endeavour, in the brief time allotted to us to answer this question, let us pray that the unerring Spirit of God will direct us, in all that we say.

Now, I propose to try and answer this important question by referring to three different and distinct passages of God's infallible word."

I shall take you into my confidence this mornig by telling you that I shall explain the meaning of these mysterious words, "in Christ" by saying that if a man be in Christ he must first have the spirit of Christ; second, the character of Christ; and, third, the power of Christ. Around these three facts I shall marshall my thoughts.

Look then at Romans 8, 9: "Now, if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." This is one of the most searching passages in God's word. It goes to the very bottom of the doctrine of eternal salvation in such a manner as to leave no doubt as to what is the only and real foundation of an eternal life of happiness beyond this vale of tears. It is a Scriptural fact, with an indisputable meaning. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His—none of His.

. It removes indefinitely, I suppose one might correctly say, infinitely, from the problem of an eternal destiny all shadow of uncertainty or of doubt. It brings us squarely to the facts in our character; on the force of this Scripture we are borne up on to a platform where we stand, so to speak—with our hearts uncovered, and naked, before the eye of God.

Like a broadaxe in the hands of some theological giant, it comes down with a relentless thud upon the petty theories and opinions of men, and declares in an authoritative voice, which defies contradiction: "If any man has not the Spirit of Christ he is none of His." There is no white-washing, no quibbling, no nice ornate phrases, no splitting of theological hairs, no fine metaphysical distinctions, which would make even some of our Christian Science friends wonder what the authors of them meant. No, no—a plain, matter-of-fact utterance: "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is one of His. So, to be 'in Christ' we must have His spirit.

Arising out of this explicit portion of Divine truth, are some indisputable facts:

First, man in his unredeemed state hath not the spirit of Christ.

Second, man in his unredeemed state, needs the spirit of Christ.

Thirdly, that when a man has received, by faith, the Spirit of Christ, he is saved for time and for eternity.

So we are right in asserting that to be in Christ, we must possess His spirit, "for if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ he is none of His.

No shadow of a chance for a man to be saved, here or hereafter, unless he hath the Spirit of Christ, for if he hath not the Spirit of Christ he is none of His.

Now, what is the Spirit of Christ? Well, in brief, it is this: "He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life for the many. His was not a spirit of get, but give. Not to see how much He could gather into His own bosom, out of the lives of others; not to be ministered unto, not to be petted, and dandled, and lifted along, and fed all the way, with no burden, and no care, and no work. Not that. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, to pour out of His life into the lives of others; to see what He could do to make others blest; and to give His life a ransom for many, not merely to give the little pittance that He could spare, and not know it any more than one would miss the nickel he spends on a street car ride, but to give His life in all its preciousness to save men. It will ever be said of Him, who is truly in Christ, "He saved others; Himself, He cannot save"; and if any man have not that spirit he is none of His. To be in Christ is to have the spirit of Christ.

But we must pass on to the second thought for our consideration.

"To be in Christ" means that we shall possess, in part, at least, the character of Christ." An indwelling Christ makes for an out-lived Christ life. There is a wonderful verse in I. John, 4-17: "As He is, so are we in this world. That is, "What Christ is, in spirit, in character, in power, we are called to be in this world. The thought is staggering, but the fact is sure. What He is, we are to endeavour to be in this world, and only a man who hath the spirit of Christ, can to any degree whatever possess the character of Christ. To be in Christ, means to live out among men the character of Christ. Time will not permit us, nor could we, if it did, touch even the fringe of the unique, matchless, and unrivalled character of the God-man. The character of Jesus Christ stands out, and will for ever stand out, the character par-excellence of the universe. It has no rival. It admits of no comparison: It is unique in its individuality, alone in its majesty, unapproachable in its God-ordained and conceived dignity. Why? Because it is God. The more we contemplate Christ's character as exhibited in the Gospel, the more we shall be impressed with its genuineness and reality. It was plainly drawn from life. It was a character developed among men, by a man surrounded by the same environment as ourselves, and without sin. It was a character subjected in all points to temptation, as we are. Yet without sin. "And therefore, because He was tempted in all points like as we are "therefore He is able to succour all who are tempted. We cannot dwell upon the various shades of the Christ character that is not our purpose, suffice us to show that if any man be in Christ, as He is, so are we called to," and expected to, be in this world.

Like Christ, in Spirit—like Christ in character. His character was love. For He was God, and God was love. There was no class of human beings too low to be beneath His sympathy. He came to save a world—not a select part of it. He not merely taught the publican and sinner, but, with all His consciousness of purity, sat down and dined with them, and when reproved by the malignant Pharisee, for such compaionship, answered His accuser by these touching parables of Luke 15, 1, and summed up his justification in those memorable words "I am come to seek and to save that which was lost" I reiterate what I said two Sundays ago: The two outstanding evidences of a saved life are these: "Seeking to save the lost, and going about doing good, and if we have the spirit of Christ such will be our every-day employment, wherever we may toil in this work-a-day world.

The character of Jesus is great because of the high value He placed upon the soul. What is your estimate value of a soul? Your character will be in accordance with your value.

If I were asked, in a word to state the underlying principle of the character of Jesus Christ, I would say: "His conviction of the greatness, value and possibilities of the human soul." He saw in man the impress and image of God, and therefore thirsted for His redemption. The eye of the Christ looked beneath the silk of the rich, or the rags of the poor. They were nothing of Him. He looked through them and saw the poor, God-forsaken, hell-bound soul, and died to save it. He longed to life men from their low estate up to the sublime heights of his faultless character. His ideal is correctly stated by John. "As He is so are we in this world. The more we have of His spirit the more will we have of His character, and the more we have of both, the greater power will be ours. To be in Christ, we must have His spirit. If we obe in Christ, we shall have his character, and if we be in Christ we shall have the power of the Christ in our lives.

To have His spirit, to have His character, means to have Christ-power with and over men."

What this power is I cannot tell, any more than you can tell, but this power manifests itself, we well know.

When some clever man can explain the multiplication of the seed unto its harvest fulness, then, too, will be explained the power of the Lord. He touches the leper and says: "I will be thou clean, and immediately he is cleaned." A word from Christ stills the tempest and makes of the troublesome sea a firm walk for His feet. He speaks to the physically dead, and recalls the departed spirits back to their tenements of clay. Wonderful power; and yet He says to His disciples: "Greater things than these will ye do, because I go unto my Father." Let us then accept His spirit, give out His character, and exert the Christ power; and thus provide, by our daily walk and conversation that we are really "in Christ".

A GOOD LITTLE MAN CAN'T BEAT A GOOD BIG MAN

—JACK JOHNSON

St. Louis, March 7.—"A good little man can't beat a good big man," chirped Jack Johnson, the heavyweight champion in his dressing room at the Standard theatre yesterday when we asked him how he sized up his coming battle with Fireman Jim Flynn.

Johnson picks himself to win. He believes it will be via the knockout route, although he claims he can't predict how far the contest will progress. But while he admits that he classes himself as a better man than the Brooklyn fighter, he says Flynn will probably put up a good argument.

"Flynn, to my way of thinking, is the best of the present corp of white hopes," continued Johnson. "I believe he has it on Morris, Palzer, Wells and Kennedy. That's because he has had more experience than the other men I have named.

McVey is Best.

"But the man whom I regard as the most dangerous in the entire field is Sam McVey. McVey could wallop any of the men in the heavyweight class to-day, outside of myself, I believe.

"I have seen Morris, Palzer, Kennedy and Wells work. Morris and Palzer may develop into dangerous men in the heavyweight division. But to-day they are in a crude state. It will require lots of experience to make them finished fighters, and then I believe Morris too slow. Palzer, they tell me, isn't a quick thinker, which is a big handicap for a first-class fighter. The trouble with most big fighters, though, is that when they get tired they wobble. They are top heavy and can't hold up. After you get them in that condition a stiff wallop will finish the bout."

According to Johnson he believes his bout with Flynn will be held in Nevada, a distance of about 100 miles from Salt Lake city. He and Flynn have posted $5,000 forfeits, while Jack Curley, representing the promoters, has posted $10,000. He will be required to hoist $20,000 more in May, when the date and place for the fight will be agreed on by the principals and promoters.

Will Be 34, March 31.

And because he rates himself far above the present crop of heavies, Johnson isn't fearing about his title for several years to come. He has a birthday this month, when he will be 34. Jack says he is now in the prime of life, never felt better and believes he can hold his own for several more years to come.

His present weight is 230 pounds. He doesn't look to be carrying much surplus flesh, although he says he plans to cut down to about 200 pounds when he enters the ring to meet Flynn. The champion gives the laugh to the tales that came from France saying he was living a high life and was fat as an alderman.

Should he climb through the ropes weighing 200 pounds, Johnson says he will have only a weight advantage of about 15 or 20 pounds over Flynn. He says that Jim is now a pretty big man, that he is building himself up to the heavyweight notch and when they mix Flynn will probably tip the beam at about 185 pounds.

BUTTER SHOULD REMAIN FIRM

"Butter will likely hold its price for the rest of this month," said a buyer this morning. "I cannot see why it should go any lower. The milk supply will not increase for a time yet, and until the yield of milk increases it is hardly to be expected that the make of butter will be larger. In the meantime the price should hold firmly at the present figures."

The assistant market clerk stated this morning that eggs on the market Saturday sold down as low as 21 cents before dinner, and butter went down to 30 and 28 cents. These prices obtained afte rthe bulk of the buyers had gone and a slight demand was felt. Slightly lower prices may be expected in eggs, but whether they materialise or not is another question.

Potatoes in Ottawa on Saturday were down to $1.75, a reduction of 50 cents from the previous week. This may have been the result of a little heavier supplies.

CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Salts, Calomel and Cathartic Pills Are Violent—They Act on Bowels as Pepper Acts in Nostrils

Take a Cascaret to-night and thoroughly cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have headache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

WALTER MILLER BACK FROM NEW GLASGOW

Walter Miller, the Peterborough boy who has made a name for himself in the professional hockey ranks, arrived home on Saturday night after a most successful season with the new Glasgow team in the Maritime professional league. He enjoyed the campaign among the Blue Noses immensely and reports a good season. The New Glasgow team of which he was a member finished second in the league race, the title being captured by the Moncton team, who are playing Quebec for the Stanley Cup. New Glasgow had the strongest team in the League had they been in shape, their line-up including Rocket Power of the Canadians, Doran of the Wanderers, Horace Gaul of the Ottawas and other good men. Miller says the players did not appreciate the six-men-a-side rule in vogue down East, as it made the work too hard for the men on the ice.

AN ANCIENT COIN.

An Examiner reporter was shown a very ancient coin this morning in the form of a specimen of Irish fraction money. This was a bronze coin about the same size as a ten-cent piece and although the imprint was scarcely discernable, the date could be easily recognized as 901. This coin which is owned by Mr. Pat. Murphy, 6 Park street, is therefore 921 years old.

MR. BUSKIN MAKES 28TH ANNUAL VISIT

Mr. George Buskin of the International Evangelical and Colportage Mission, is in the city, in the interests of the work. The present is Mr. Buskin's twenty-eighth annual visit. He has always received substantial recognition of his work, and it is expected that his present visit will be similarly welcomed. During the period from Oct. 15th, 1909, to Nov. 1st, 1911, the work Mr. Buskin represents, supplied 502 Bibles and books in five languages, a large number of religious leaflets, and about seventy editions of books, etc., published in five languages, and 70 towns contributed $1.185 to the mission, which, in the past 27 years, has distributed a total of 48,266 books, printed in 25 languages. The total donations in that time amounted to $42,575. A contribution of $21.25, made by Peterborough, last year, is gratefully acknowledged.

INDIVIDUAL MATERIALISM THE GREATEST DANGER OF TO-DAY

The Rev. Dr. Farmer, of McMaster University, Addressed Congregation of Murray Street Baptist Church Yesterday on Christian Education---An Interesting Discourse

If there is a real Christian Church if we are real Christian people, it is our duty to make Christians of those friends who are outside the church." So said the Rev. Dr. Farmer of McMaster University, when addressing the congregation of Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday morning, on "Christian Education".

"If we are Christians," he continued, "we will do our best to bring an erring man into everlasting union with our Saviour, Jesus Christ. The next thing is for such a man to be baptised. In doing that he publicly commits himself to our Lord Jesus Christ. But the teaching part of Christ's mission is almost as important as Baptism.

A missionary in China was heard once to say: "The greatest thing in life is to save a soul." Some years later, returning from China he said: I have found a greater thing than that, namely, teaching other Christians to save souls.

I rejoice in the Laymen's movement. It is a splendid sight to see our leading and more prominent business men in Toronto give so much of their time to the work of organising this great missionary movement.

There is grave necessity for leadership in the Church. In the early part of last century, Germany suffered a great humiliation at the hands of France. What did Germany do then? They realized that their leadership was faulty and revised the system of education, consequently, in the early sixties and seventies, it was time for their enemies to suffer humiliation. Of course I would rather see a devout man who would break grammar in the pulpit than a highly educated man who was a professionalist and not a confessionalist, but there are other things that are excellent addenda. God wishes that in regular ways we should train people for leadership in Christian service.

The chief danger of this present day is, in my opinion, gross individual materialism. In this country of ours it is running riot. Men are hasty to be rich, and Scripture says that they who will be rich fall into temptation and destruction. That is the chief danger about us to-day, and I believe the best counteraction of that is a University course. There is something in a course of study that tends to make a man see that things of the mind are greater than things of the body. It is the University men that are leading the world. Look at Britain, with all its great institutions. You will find that Oxford, Cambridge, Eton and Rugby count for ninety per cent. of leadership.

In Christ's campaign we must have something more than state universities—we must have Christian colleges. It is to Christian colleges that we must look for leadership in our Christian business. If we are to have a supply of Christian ministers we have to look to the Christian colleges and not to state universities. It is time that men recognised that. A man is to be considered a fool who says to himself, I will reserve all my strength for one specific department. No man can afford to neglect any one department at the expense of another.

Go back to the Old Testament and you will see that Moses was filled with Egyptian learning. In the New Testament we find that Paul was a teacher. He taught Timothy, and Timothy taught others.

Some might say: "What of the 12 that were not learned?" Jesus gave half His time teaching those men. He was a teacher as well as a preacher.

GENEROUS OFFER

To People With Stomach Trouble

Many readers of this paper suffer at times from indigestion, and a large number of them are badly rundown and have no appetite for their meals.

We wish to make an offer that is unusually generous. Our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil (Vinol) is a great strengthening tonic. It has also cured many bad cases of stomach trouble.

Mrs. Desire Goudreau, of Woonsocket, R.I., says "My husband was very weak and rundown and had been in bad health for five years. He suffered greatly from pains in his stomach and had poor appetite. This spring I got him to take Vinol and it is simply fine. He has been growing stronger ever since, his appetite returned and he had no stomach trouble since taking Vinol."

So we say, if you have stomach trouble, are rundown, played out and sickly, try Vinol at our risk. If it does not please you, we will give back every cent of your money.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Most of us are continually regretting something in our past. I don't mean actually suffering from remorse but simply realising that we might have acted much more wisely. It is strange that we do not more often reflect that we are making a new past, even at the very moment of our regrets, and probably making it no more wisely than we did before.

By your leave, I'll take my own case for an instance. My besetting sin is hurrying. I have always hurried too much, tried to crowd too much into my days. I look back over my past and I say: "How foolish I was; how much better off I should have been if I had not tried to do so much. How much happier and healthier I should be to-day if I had not hurried so. And so few of the things I did were vital I might have left half of them and not affected my happiness or welfare at all." And yet, when I stop to think, I realise that I am hurrying to-day. This year, this month, this very day I am making a past of which I shall probably say much the same thing ten years from now.

I look over all my activities and say: "But all these are vital. I could not spare any of them." I remember ten years ago I said the same thing when anyone warned me that I was trying to do too much.

That is my personal experience. I tell you about that because it is the one with which I am the most familiar. But does it not find a parallel in your own life? Perhaps your besetting mistake is not planning far enough ahead. You look back and say: "If I had only planned my life wisely and methodically five years ago, how much farther ahead I might be to-day." True, my friend, but very unimportant as compared with the fact that if you plan your life wisely and methodically to-day, you will be much farther ahead five years from now.

Perhaps the weakest point in your character is procrastination. "Ah," you bewail, as you look back five or ten years, "if I only hadn't put off taking that course in advertising, I might have as good a position as C to-day. I know I have just as much brains as he." Come back, my friend. Come back to the present past, and look into your life, and see what you are procrastinating now.

Experience is a good teacher, but we are all poor scholars. The past of five years ago is unimportant compared with the past you are making now. If we could only look at this present past with the unprejudiced, clear-sighted eyes which we turn on the buried past, how differently we should live.

Perhaps such detachment is impossible, but surely we might take more interest in this vital past which we are making now and which we have a chance to influence than in that unimportant dead past, which no regrets can change.

Ruth Cameron

A STORY WITH A MORAL AND AN IMMORAL SIDE

There seems to be no limit to the impudence of certain individuals of the community, who seem to be bound to stir up, and keep stirred up, religious discord, under the plea of advancing the interests of "Protestantism." A case in point, whose truth is vouched for, may be mentioned. Rev. Mr. Brown, of St. James' Methodist church, recently announced that he would give an address to the brotherhood of his church on the "Elements of Protestantism." Mr. Brown's subject was not of the character that suggested itself to the local ward politician and pro-"protestant" enthusiastic, Mr. Percival G. S. Webb. From his narrow gauge point of view, and in the interests of the peculiar political interests he seeks to promote, he seized on the announced subject of Rev. Mr. Brown as something in his line. He caused announcements to be made in the Times and Review, as a pointer to those who hunt in his company, an act of impudence that disgusted both the pastor and the brotherhood, who saw in this unauthorized notice, an attempt by the political zealots to make even the church contribute to the low game of ward politicians. Percival and his "pals," thinking that they would hear a tirade of abuse of Roman Catholics, were present on the occasion of the address in full force, and it is said that when the pastor saw indications of what was expected, from the character of the intrusive element of his audience, which was greatly different from anything he had intended to say, apparently resolved to disappoint the evil expectations and changed his subject into an address on "True Manhood," which, naturally had little application to or interest for his unexpected auditors.

To the disgust of all concerned, the infliction was not confined to the presence under such auspices of the visitors at the lecture. Refreshments had been provided after the address for the brotherhood and as their number was pretty well known, provision was made accordingly and without reference to a considerable number of supernumerary uninvited guests. As a result the brotherhood was, to use a common expression "eaten out of house and home." The material hunger of the visitors seemed to be as rabid as their hunger for slang-whanging abuse of the religion of a large portion of the Christian community. Protestanism would be in a bad way if its interests depended upon the support of such elements as the moral ghouls that thrust themselves into the presence of a peaceful religious gathering in the, fortunately disappointed, hope of hearing an appeal to the bigotry-narrowmindedness and political self-seeking they represent. There is no need to search very far for the moral of the incident. —Com.

JOHNNIE CANUCK COMES AGAIN INTO THE LIMELIGHT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I do not claim to be a prophet, nor yet the son of a prophet, but, at the same time, you will remember that I predicted, some time ago, that we, in the near future, would have great cause to enjoy ourselves when the enemies of Laurier and his Government would be brought to realise how easily they were buncoed by their modren Moses. Where, oh, where, is the great revolution that was to take place? If anybody should ask you, just whisper that my friends and I are enjoying the situation immensely. You would have heard from me before, but I was afraid of spoiling a good thing. What better results could we wish for? Now, Mr. Editor, there is always a limit and it has been reached, when our rose-water philosopher of a representative joins in with an organisation of other old women that preach the doctrine that our wives must leave us married men until they get the ballot. Then we will all join in the chorus, "are we married, or not married?" We gave him our votes, at least the most in the city did, and he took away a swing bridge from Johnnie Cronin and aCustoms House from "Daddy" Taylor, and we will let it go at that. But are we going to give up our wives, or let him take them away. Well, I guess not. His supporters in the past, even if the quantity of the fruits are very scant, appreciate the valuable services their wives are to them. Our women may govern our homes and some of us Johnnies, but it will take more than Bachelor Burnham, or the Lancaster Bill to convince them that they have a government job. We must expect that when the Hon. Col. Sam. is asked to send a contingent over to England in order to help put those suffragettes in their place that our advocate for old-age pensions for old bachelors will object, or will he remember, as Mrs. Fessenden says, that as "mother, sweetheart, inspirer and friend, man accepts and welcomes woman"; but once she ceases to be what he thinks and wishes, look out for a great revolt from female ascendancy. In regard to his suggestion of voting by ballot, in the House, it is in line with the manner in which he and his friends conducted his election campaign, they found that those cowardly and secret methods worked so advantageously, and he might find, if adopted in the House, it would be beneficial to him and his friends.

MEETING CANCELLED.

The regular Tuesday evening Literary class of the Y.W.C.A., has been cancelled for this week.

Manager Jack Thirnbeck has called a meeting of his Midgets for 8 o'clock to-night at Brock street rink, and every member is expected to be on hand in order that the team may be selected for to-morrow night.

WHAT THE CURLERS ARE DOING

The primary eventof the local bonspiel was conducted on Saturday evening and resulted in a win for J. W. Thompson's rink by seven shots. The game was full of surprises, and up to the last five ends it could be called anybody's game. At this stage Skip Thompson's rink stole a lead and came from behind, winding up in a grand finish with seven shots to the good. His opponent, Skip Lang, has no discredit coming to him for the loss of the game. The rink which he represented put up a hard fight, but the better rink won. Although it did not figure as a runaway game for the winners by any means.

The score at the finish was 14-7.

THE CONSOLATION

Skips Wightman, Morrow, Renwick and Brightman are now in the fourth round of the consolation fixture. They will fight it out among themselves for a position in the semi-finals.

"OH! YOU" CLARMONT

A couple of local rinks are contemplating journeying to Clarmount to-morrow, where they will hook up with their brother curlers in a friendly game. That's if Mr. E. L. Bowers can round up a contingent who are willing to make the trip. At present he is experiencing some difficulty in the matter, but it is altogether probable that he will be able to accomplish his purpose.

Mrs. R. E. McKee, 403 Aylmer street, will not receive to-morrow.

Pruning the Appendix

What thousands of people are rushthe idea that pruning the appendix teh idea that pruning the appendix will rid them of the cause and effect of wrong habits of eating and living.

We eat too much, take too little outdoor exercise, breathe impure air, and when the system gets loaded with foul impurities, which irritate the digestive system and set up inflammation, we are told that the operating table is the only place for us.

Why not prevent appendicitis, as well as acute indigestion, peritonitis and Bright's disease of the kidneys, by keeping the liver active and the bowels regular. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the digestive system of foul impurities more quickly than any treatment you can obtain. They awaken the liver and ensure the healthful action of the kidneys and bowels.

DEBATE IS VIGOROUS

Queen's University Bill Passes Second Reading

GRAIN BILL GOES THROUGH

Ottawa, March 12.—Parliament wrestled at great length yesterday with the alleged anti-Semitic clauses in W. F. Nickle's bill respecting Queen's University, in which it is provided that the university shall remain distinctively Christian.

Robert Bickerdike (Montreal, St. Lawrence), as on former occasions, appeared as the chief exponent of the rights of the Hebrew race, being supported by A. E. Lancaster (Lincoln) and E. B. Devlin (Wright).

Mr. Bickerdike moved to strike out of clause 20 the words "save the profession of Christianity." Shortly before the six o'clock recess this was rejected on a vote of 70 to 7 and the bill was reported, as was also the bill incorporating Queen's Theological College.

Mr. Nickle explained that as far as his private views were concerned, he did not agree with the ground taken by the promoters of the bill. It would cut Queen's University off from taking advantage of the intellects of Jewish people of science and learning. It might be argued that the Ontario Legislature would be justified in refusing aid to the university on the ground that it was not national, but it was a retrograde step to put on Queen's restrictions not yet there. At the same time it was a private bill, which had the ratification of the Presbyterian Church and the board of Queen's University, and they were legally entitled to get what they asked for.

Mr. Bickerdike claimed that Queen's University, under its new constitution was not a work for the general advantage of Canada. He questioned the jurisdiction of the House. It was an invasion of the rights of the Legislature to which were assigned educational matters.

He doubted whether the bill had the endorsation of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Nickle waxed warm over Mr. Bickerdike's references to himself: "I say it is unfair," he declared, "for the member for St. Lawrence to brand me as a persecutor of the Jews. Heaven knows we have heard enough of east against west, of Roman Catholic against Protestant. Are we to set Jew against Gentile?"

Dr. Steele (South Perth) declared that no one could doubt that Queen's University was national in scope. It was a small thing to ask that it should remain distinctively Christian.

Dr. Schaffner (Souris) enquired if it was proposed to make Queen's a distinctively state institution.

Mr. Bickerdike declared that this was not a fair way to treat half a million good citizens of Canada. It was not only endorsing, but legalizing, an insult to the Jewish minority.

Sam Sharp (North Ontario) pointed out that this was private legislation. It was not putting a ban on any class or creed in public legislation. To change its provisions would be a breach of faith with the Presbyterian Church, which was making a gift of the university to the nation.

A. E. Lancaster (Lincoln) saw no difference between public and private legislation in regard to the functions of Parliament.

Hon. Frank Oliver protested against the idea that the Presbyterian Church had any intention of insulting anybody. It had always stood for tolerance.

Mr. Bickerdike claimed that not only the Jews, but the Baptists also objected to the test clause in the bill.

In reply to a question by H. H. Stevens (Vancouver) in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Hon. Martin Burrell stated that, up to date, 16,903 Chinese and 13,768 Japanese had entered Canada through British Columbia ports. Of these, 5,264 Chinese and 436 Japanese came during the last fiscal year, 5,142 Hindus had entered Canada, of whom only one had arrived during the last fiscal year.

With regard to Dr. Sunder Singh, he had landed at Halifax on March 12, 1909. He had not complied with the immigration regulations and an order for his deportation had been issued, but had not yet been executed.

The grain bill at last received its third reading and passed at 12.40 o'clock this morning, after engaging the attention of the House for almost the entire evening. It stood on the order paper for third reading, but Hon. George E. Foster moved it back into committee to make a few changes.

After it was again reported the members of the Opposition moved four times to have it referred back to committee, two of the motions coming to a division. Then E. L. Cash (MacKenzie) moved the six months' hoist on the ground that the bill was immature, too long, and the House had not had a chance to become properly seized of the details. This was defeated on a division of 88 to 44. The bill then got its third reading.

Home Rule Next Month.

London, March 12.—The home rule bill for Ireland is to be introduced into the House of Commons on April 9 or April 11. Premier Asquith made this definite promise yesterday afternoon, adding:

"This is the date when it has always been intended and contemplated by the Government to introduce the home rule bill. I have always thought this bill, having regard to its magnitude and complexity, is by far the most important to be brought in this session and that it ought to be produced under conditions which will secure adequate Parliamentary discussion."

Hotel at Guelph Burned.

Guelph, March 12.—Fire completely gutted the City Hotel yesterday, and at 1 o'clock the fire was still burning, but under control. The roof had caved in, but the stone walls were standing. The Guelph Carpet Co. had $25,000 worth of carpets stored in the building. The loss on the building is about $27,000. Most of the contents were also lost.

British M. P.'s See a Solution For Coal Situation

PETITION IS PREPARING

London, March 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A movement is afoot to petition Premier Asquith forthwith to appoint a royal commission to enquire into the question of industrial co-partnership as a likely solution of the present industrial unrest. Two hundred and forty members of Parliament, including 157 Unionists, 77 Liberals, 10 Nationalists and 2 Laborites support the petition.

The Labor party oppose the project on the grounds that it would undermine trades unionism.

The National Miners' Federation unanimously decided last night to accept the Prime Minister's invitation to meet the coal owners and the representatives of the Government at a round-table conference, at which Premier Asquith will preside. The acceptance was coupled, with the reservation that the principle of a minimum wage will be excluded from the discussion. It is understood that this means that the granting of a minimum wage will be assumed to have been conceded, but it does not imply that the schedule of minimum wage rates drawn up by the Miners' Federation will not be discussed.

The coal owners have not yet accepted the Premier's invitation. They will meet this morning to decide this question. Even if the Welsh and Scotch owners stand aloof, it is taken for granted that the English owners will accept. The conference will be held this afternoon, but the miners' representatives are not authorized to agree to any reduction of the federation's schedule of rates, or to any scheme determining the rates without a new ballot of the miners. There a settlement of the strike can be attained only if the owners agree to accept the miners' schedule, which is very improbable.

The most hoped for from the conference is that some basis of agreement will be reached for the fixing of a minimum rate, which will be submitted to a ballot of the miners.

That the strike will continue for another week is now regarded by the most optimistic as inevitable. It practically has been determined that the coal strike must be ended by agreement, or legislation will be invoked to bring about compulsory peace. A time limit for the negotiations is demanded on all sides, and Thursday is expected to see Parliamentary action unless the extremists on both sides relax in the meantime sufficiently to enable a settlement by consent.

At present almost the entire nation is under notice to quit work. Including the miners there are probably nearly 2,000,000 persons idle, and, should the strike be prolonged throughout next week, perhaps half or more Britain's workers will be unemployed. The distress is widespread now, and the drain on funds is so great that some of the unions are already showing distress signals. The courts are refusing to grant judgment and summonses on the ground that the common necessaries of life are beyond the reach of many of the poor.

Germany's Strike.

Berlin, March 12.—The coal strike went into effect in the Westphalian coal mines yesterday, when about fifty per cent. of the 300,000 miners struck. In some districts the cessation was practically complete, while in others only from 15 to 20 per cent. struck. Large forces of police are on duty everywhere.

The conflict is quite as much between leaders of the rival Socialist and non-Socialist unions as with the mine owners. The leaders of the non-Socialist Christian union are so far holding their followers well in hand.

Coal Held Up at Border.

Niagara Falls Ont., March 12.—The railroads are holding at least 500 tons of both hard and soft coal on the American side consigned Canadian points. The agreement between the miners and operators expires April 1, and anticipating a strike, the railroads are holding up shipments, they having the legal right to confiscate coal in transit.

No Welcome For U. S. Soldiers.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 12.—The Niagara County Board of Supervisors yesterday decided to vigorously protest against the plans of the New York State militia department to hold a training camp at Youngstown during the Canadian encampment at Niagara, directly across the river.

American councillors claim the meeting of Canadian militiamen gives farmers plenty of trouble without Yankee troops being thrust upon them.

Suffragettes at U. S. Senate.

Washington, March 12.—Women's suffrage will be advocated before the Senate suffrage committee next Wednesday, by a delegation of the most prominent women in American public life. Arrangements have been made for an open hearing and addresses will be made by Rev. Anna Shaw, Miss Jane Adams, Prof. Sophemisba B. Breckenridge of the University of Chicago and others.

Earl Grey Competition.

Ottawa, March 12.—Eleven dramatic and five musical entries have been received for the Earl Grey competitions in the Russell Theatre in April. As only 12 can go on, four will have to be eliminated.

The musical entries include the local Orpheous Glee Club and the Ottawa Symphony Orchestra, Pembroke Methodist Church Choir in "The Merry Bells of Yale," Presbyterian Church Choir of Brockville and the Hamilton Operatic Society in "Florodora."

The dramatic entrants include the Edmonton Dramatic Club, London Dramatic Club, Montreal Dramatic Club, Strollers' Dramatic Club of Winnipeg, Bonaynes Amateur Players—of Montreal, Capt. Prideaux's Amateur Dramatic Club of Kingston, "The Green Room Club of Moose Jaw, the London School of Elocution, the Royalist Dramatic Club of St. John, N.B., and the Ottawa and Walters Dramatic Clubs, this city.

Spanish Cabinet Crisis.

London, March 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Morning Post's Madrid correspondent wires that a Cabinet crisis has occurred. A communication has been passed by both Chambers asking them to suspend sessions until a new Cabinet has been formed. Senor Canalejas has received royal authority to reorganize his Government. A crisis was expected, as several Ministers have been vigorously attacked in Parliament, and it became impossible for them to continue the Ministry.

The King desires the Liberal party to continue in power, but since the party is hopelessly divided, the next Ministry will be short lived.

To Pay His Bills.

Christiania, March 12.—It is announced that Capt. Roald Amundsen's debts, on account of his south polar expedition, amount to approximately $18,000.

A special committee which has been appointed has sent out an appeal to Norwegians to subscribe this amount, so as to enable the committee to cable Amundsen at Hobart that his debts have been paid.

Later a national subscription for the benefit of the explorer will be opened.

TOO MANY EXEMPT

Whitney Would Make All Institutions Pay Taxes

WHAT ABOUT NE TEMERE?

Toronto, March 12.—Sir James Whitney expressed his views very forcibly in the Legislature yesterday afternoon on the question of exempting institutions of various kinds from school taxation. The question arose over the bill introduced by C. W. Jervis to incorporate the new Y.M.C.A. of Fort William, a clause in the bill proposing to exempt the association from all school and municipal taxation except for local improvements.

Sam Clark (West Northumberland) objected to this clause on the ground that municipalities had no right to exempt institutions of this kind. Just at this stage Sir James Whitney had his say:

"If left to me entirely I wouldn't allow any institution in the province to be exempt from school taxation," declared the Premier. "I don't care whether they are Y.M.C.A. or Y.M.C.B.'s."

Sir James intimated, however, that because the institution in question was associated with educational work the committee had allowed it to pass.

Allan Studholme said the clause should be eliminated. Hamilton Y.M.C.A. was not exempt from school taxation and Port Arthur had no claim for privileges that the Mountain City could not have.

C. R. McKeown (Dufferin) said that the bill had passed the private bills committee, of which he was a member, because a similar concession had previously been granted Port Arthur, and it was thought inadvisable to discriminate in this case on account of the proximity of the two cities.

"From the remarks of my hon. friend I conclude that the door is open then," said Mr. Clark. "Everybody wanting exemption for similar purposes will refer to this one."

Sir James Whitney admitted that the remarks of the member for West Northumberland were technically correct. "The only way to do in future," added Sir James, "is to quietly drop all proposals of this nature. We can say this far and no further will we go." The House came to the conclusion that the bill should go to the third reading, anyway, and A. Studholme will likely move that the reference to exemption from school taxation be eliminated from the clause. Mr. Jarvis, the member for Fort William, was not in the House when the discussion was on.

J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) is now turning his attention to the ne temere decree. Mr. Elliott gives notice of motion that he will on Thursday enquire of the Ministry as to whether it is the Government's intention to accept the invitation of the Federal Government to appoint counsel to represent Ontario at the hearing of the case before the Supreme Court. Mr. Elliott also wants to know the name of the counsel, if counsel has already been appointed, and he wants to know further if instructions have been given to the Ontario counsel to either support or oppose the right of the Dominion to enact the legislation referred to.

Then Mr. Marshall's request was read for a return of all copies of correspondence since January, 1911, between the Minister of Education or the Educational Department and any of the trustees of the Township of Springer with regard to the teaching of French in the schools of that township. Hon. Dr. Pyne replied. The Minister said that there was a dispute between the school sections in that locality and he didn't think there was much use in perpetuating the unpleasantness. However, if Mr. Marshall desired he could have access to the correspondence, which was in the Minister's office.

A formal order was passed by the House on the motion of Dr. Pyne, with regard to the establishment of the Provincial Museum.

An Aeroplane Honeymoon.

Paris, March 12.—The first authentic aeroplane wedding is told of today in a despatch from Avignon. The bridegroom, a well-known aviator named Voisier, flew to a field next to the church where the wedding took place.

Directly after the ceremony the airman and his bride, who was Mlle. Bremond, mounted the two-seated Bleriot and flew the 100 and more miles separating Avignon from Nice, where the first part of the honeymoon is to be passed.

Voisier hopes to fly on to Genoa and home to Paris with his wife.

Succession Dues Decrease.

Toronto, March 12.—During February there has been a slump in the receipt of succession dues at the Parliament Buildings. For the past month this revenue totalled $39,998.79, as against $60,644.64. From Oct. 31, 1911, to end of February of this year, the succession dues amounted to $281,444.90, as compared with $256,242.67 during the same period last year.

Trailing Miss Pankhurst.

New York, March 12.—Scotland Yard yesterday asked the New York police to notify them of arrival of any person answering description of the much-wanted suffragette leader, Christabel Pankhurst.

It is believed there that she may have come here to join her sister Sylvia, now lecturing in America.

Talk No. 1 About
EYES and GLASSES
by J. W. BROWETT Optometrist

We Examine The Eyes To Determine Which Of The 27,000 Lens Combinations Should Be Used

Glasses were invented a great many years ago—so were eyes. The eyes in construction are the same to-day, but the Glasses have changed. The Science of optics has steadily advanced, until now manufacturing opticians are able to grind Glasses in more than 27,000 different combinations of powers to correct defects of vision of many varied forms. Few persons, comparatively speaking, have perfect eyes; and an eye which is not perfect is an annoyance to the brain; the eye and the brain are very intimately connected. When the eyes differ we have unequal vision—unequal vision causes headaches and nervousness; these are symptoms of eye strain. We correct unequal vision with lenses scientifically made. Optical lenses are made from scientifically made glass, except in cheap spectacles; in these the glass is made the same as for windows. We use pure and faultless crystals only.

Letterymen Merten In Trouble.

Ottawa, March 12.—A fine of $500 or one year in jail was meted out this morning in the police court to Edwin Merten, a young man who pleaded guilty to the charge of managing a scheme or lottery for the purpose of disposing of certain articles, including gold watches, opera glasses, silverware, etc. Merten was arrested in Toronto about two weeks ago for practically the same offence and was subjected to a heavy fine. He was escorted to the city Saturday by a detective.

Outlook Clears In Mexico.

Mexico City, March 12.—A decided feeling or optimism pervaded the capital yesterday affecting foreigners and Mexicans alike. The popular demonstration of loyalty to the Government has had the effect of stiffening the backs of Government and private citizens. This fact was manifest yesterday by a material increase in the number of enlistments for army service. Business men generally profess to see a great improvement in the outlook.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made each a face that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never complain. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an adjustment in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segment must be cut low, so low that the edge, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course, this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Famous Ionolite Segment. Ask for such lenses when having them.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass. — "I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN E. GERATON, 61 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

But even his hardihood showed shock, when, upon turning round with a brisk, "Now I'm ready to talk," he encountered again the clear eye of Sweetwater. For, in the person of this none too welcome intruder, he saw a very different man from the one upon whom he had just turned his back with so little ceremony; and there appeared to be no good reason for the change. He had not noted in his preoccupation how George, at sight of his stooping figure, had made a sudden significant movement, and if he had, the pulling of a necktie straight, would have meant nothing to him. But to Sweetwater it meant everything, and it was in the tone of one fully at ease with himself that he now dryly remarked:

"Mr. Brotherson, if you feel quite clean, and if you have sufficiently warmed yourself, I would suggest that we start at once, unless you prefer to have me share this room with you till the morning."

There was silence. Mr. Dunn thus addressed attempted no answer; not for a full minute. The two men were measuring each other—George felt that he did not count at all—and they were quite too much occupied with this task to heed the passage of time. To George, who knew little, if anything, of what this silent struggle meant to either, it seemed that the detetive stood no show before this Samson of physical strength and intellectual power, backed by a pistol just within reach of his hand. But as George continued to look and saw the figure of the smaller man gradually dilate, while that of the larger, the more potent and the better guarded, gave unmistakable signs of secret wavering, he slowly changed his mind and, ranging himself with the detective, waited for the word or words which should explain this situation and render intelligible the triumph gradually becoming visible in the young detective's eyes.

But he was not destined to have his curiosity satisfied so far. He might witness and hear, but it was long before he understood.

"Brotherson?" repeated their host, after the silence had lasted to the breaking point. "Why do you call me that?"

"Because it is your name."

"You called me Dunn a minute ago."

"That is true."

"Why Dunn if Brotherson is my name?"

"Because you spoke under the name of Dunn at the meeting tonight, and if I don't mistake, that is the name by which you are known here."

"And you? By what name are you known?"

"It is late to ask, isn't it. But I'm willing to speak it now, and I might not have been so a little earlier in our conversation. I am Detective Sweetwater of the New York Department of Police, and my errand here is a very simple one. Some letters signed by you have been found among the papers of the lady whose mysterious death at the hotel Clermont is just now occupying the attention of the New York authorities. If you have any information to give which will in any way explain that death, your presence will be welcome at Coroner Heath's office in New York. If you have not, your presence will still be welcome. At all events, I was told to bring you. You will be on hand to accompany me in the morning, I am quite sure, pardoning the unconventional means I have taken to make sure of my man?"

The humour with which this was said seemed to rob it of anything like attack, and Mr. Brotherson, as we shall hereafter call him, smiled with an odd acceptance of the same, as he responded:

"I will go before the police certainly. I haven't much to tell, but what I have is at their service. It will not help you, but I have no secrets. What are you doing?"

He bounded towards Sweetwater, who had simply stepped to the window, lifted the shade and looked across at the opposing tenement.

"I wanted to see if it was still snowing," explained the detective, with a smile, which seemed to strike the other like a blow. "If it was a liberty, please pardon it."

Mr. Brotherson drew back. The cold air of self-possession which he now assumed, presented such a contrast to the unwarranted heat of the moment before that George wondered greatly over it, and later, when he recapitulated to me the whole story of this night, it was this incident of the lifted shade, together with the emotion it had caused, which he acknowledged as being for him the most inexplicable event of the evening and the one he was most anxious to hear explained.

As this ends our connection with this affair, I will bid you my personal farewell. I have often wished that circumstances had made it possible for me to accompany you through the remaining intricacies of this remarkable case.

But you will not lack a suitable guide.

BOOK II
AS SEEN BY DETECTIVE SWEETWATER
X
A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

At an early hour the next morning, Sweetwater stood before the coroner's desk, urging a plea he feared to hear refused. He wished to be present at the interview soon to be held with Mr. Brotherson, and he had no good reason to advance why such a privilege should be allotted him.

"It's not curiosity," said he. "There's a question I hope to see settled. I can't communicate it—you would laugh at me; but it's an important one, a very important one, and I beg that you will let me sit in one of the corners and hear what he says. I won't bother and I'll be very still, so still that he'll hardly notice me. Do grant me this favour, sir."

The coroner, who had had some little experience with this man, surveyed him with a smile less forbidding than the poor fellow expected.

"You seem to lay great store by it," said he; "if you want to sort those papers over there, you may."

"Thank you. I don't understand the job, but I promise you not to increase the confusion. If I do; if I rattle the leaves too loudly, it will mean, 'Press him further on this exact point,' but I doubt if I rattle them, air. No such luck."

The last three words were uttered sotto voce, but the coroner heard him, and followed his ungainly figure with a glance of some curiosity, as he settled himself at the desk on the other side of the room.

"Is the man—" he began, but at this moment the man entered, and Dr. Heath forgot the young detective, in his interes in the new arrival.

Neither dressed with the elegance known to the habitues of the Clermont, nor yet in the workman's outfit in which he had thought best to appear before the Associated Brotherhood, the newcomer advanced, with an aspect of open respect which could not fail to make a favourable impression upon the critical eye of the official awaiting him. So favourable, indeed, was the impression that that gentleman half rose, infusing a little more consideration into his greeting than he was accustomed to show to his prospective witnesses. Such a fearless eye he had seldom encountered, nor was it often his pleasure to confront so conspicuous a specimen of physical and intellectual manhood.

"Mr. Brotherson, I believe," said he, as he motioned his visitor to sit.

"That is my name, sir."

"Orlando Brotherson?"

"The same, sir."

"I'm glad we have made no mistake," smiled the doctor. "Mr. Brotherson, I have sent for you under the supposition that you were a friend of the unhappy lady lately dead at the Hotel Clermont."

"Miss Challoner?"

"Certainly; Miss Challoner."

"I knew the lady. But—" here the speaker's eye took on a look as questioning as that of his interlocutor—"but in a way so devoid of all publicity that I cannot but feel surprised that the fact should be known."

At this, the listening Sweetwater hoped that Dr. Heath would ignore the suggestion thus conveyed and decline the explanation it apparently demanded. But the impression made by the gentleman's good looks had been too strong for this coroner's proverbial caution, and, handing over the slip of a note which had been found among Miss Challoner's effects by her father, he quietly asked::

"Do you recognize the signature?"

"Yes, it is mine."

"Then you acknowledge yourself the author of these lines?"

"Most certainly. Have I not said that this is my signature?"

"Do you remember the words of this note, Mr. Brotherson?"

"Hardly. I recollect its tenor, but not the exact words."

"Read them."

"Excuse me, I had rather not. I am aware that they were bitter and should be the cause of great regret. I was angry when I wrote them."

"That is evident. But the cause of your anger is not so clear, Mr. Brotherson. Miss Challoner was a woman of lofty character, or such was the universal opinion of her friends. What could she have done to a gentleman like yourself to draw forth such a tirade?"

"You ask that?"

"I am obliged to. There is mystery surrounding her death—the kind of mystery which demands perfect frankness on the part of all who were near her on that evening, or whose relations to her were in any way peculiar. You acknowledge that your friendship was of such a guarded nature that it surprised you greatly to hear it recognized. Yet you could write her a letter of this nature. Why?"

"Because—" the word came glibly; but the next one was long in following. "Because," he repeated, letting the fire of some strong feeling disturb for a moment his dignified reserve, "I offered myself to Miss Challoner, and she dismissed me with great disdain."

"Ah! and so you thought a threat was due her?"

"A threat?"

"These words contain a threat, do they not?"

"They may. I was hardly master of myself at the time. I may have expressed myself in an unfortunate manner."

"Read the words, Mr. Brotherson. I really must insist that you do so."

There was no hesitancy now. Rising, he leaned over the table and read the few words the other had spread out for his perusal. Then he slowly rose to his full height, as he answered, with some slight display of compunction:

"I remember it perfectly now. It is not a letter to be proud of. I hope—"

"Pray finish, Mr. Brotherson."

"That you are not seeking to establish a connection between this letter and her violent death?"

"Letters of this sort are often very mischievous, Mr. Brotherson. The harshness with which this is written might easily rouse emotions of a most unhappy nature in the breast of a woman as sensitive as Miss Challoner."

"Pardon me, Dr. Heath; I cannot flatter myself so far. You overrate my influence with the lady you name."

"You believe, then, that she was sincere in her rejection of your addresses?"

A start, too slight to be noted by anyone but the watchful Sweetwater, showed that this question had gone home. But the self-poise and mental control of this man were perfect, and in an instant he was facing the coroner again, with a dignity which gave no clew to the disturbance into which his thoughts had just been thrown. Nor was this disturbance apparent in his tones when he made his reply:

"I have never allowed myself to think otherwise. I have seen no reason why I should. The suggestion you would convey by such a question is hardly welcome, now. I pray you to be careful in your judgment of such a woman's impulse. They often spring from sources not to be sounded even by her dearest friends."

Just; but how cold! Dr. Heath, eyeing him with admiration rather than sympathy, hesitated how to proceed; while Sweetwater, peering up from his papers, sought in vain for some evidence of the bereaved lover in the impressive but wholly dispassionate figure of him who had just spoken. Had pride got the better of his heart? or had that organ always been subordinate to the will in this man of instincts so varying, that at one time he impressed you simply as a typical gentleman of leisure;—at another, as no more than a fiery agitator with powers absorbed by, if not limited to the one cause he advocated; and again—and this seemed the most contradictory of all—just the ardent inventor, living in a tenement, with Science for his goddess and work always under his hand? As the young detective weighed these possibilities and marvelled over the contradictions they offered, he forgot the papers now lying quiet under his hand. He was too interested to remember his own part—something which could not often be said of Sweetwater.

Meantime, the coroner had collected his thoughts. With an apology for the extremely personal nature of his enquiry, he asked Mr. Brotherson if he would object to giving him some further details of his acquaintanceship with Miss Challoner; where he first met her and under what circumstances their friendship had developed.

"Not at all," was the ready reply. "I have nothing to conceal in the matter. I only wish that her father were present that he might listen to the recital of my acquaintanceship with his daughter. He might possibly understand her better and regard with more leniency the presumption into which I was led by my ignorance of the pride inherent in great families."

"Your wish can very easily be gratified," returned the official, pressing an electric button on his desk; "Mr. Challoner is in the adjoining room." Then, as the door communicating with the room he had mentioned swung ajar and stood so, Dr. Heath added, without apparent consciousness of the dramatic character of this episode, "You will not need to raise your voice beyond its natural pitch. He can hear perfectly from where he sits."

"Thank you. I am glad to speak in his presence," came in undisturbed self-possession from this not easily surprised witness. "I shall relate the facts exactly as they occurred, adding nothing and concealing nothing. If I mistook my position, or Miss Challoner's position, it is not for me to apologize. I never hid my business from her, nor the moderate extent of my fortune. If she knew me at all, she knew me for what I am; a man of the people who glories in work and who has risen by it to a position somewhat unique in this city. I feel no lack of equality even with such a woman as Miss Challoner."

A most unnecessary preamble, no doubt, and of doubtful efficacy in smoothing his way to a correct understanding with the deeply bereaved father. But he looked so handsome as he thus asserted himself and made so much of his inches and the noble poise of his head—though cold of eye and always cold of manner—that those who saw, as well as heard him, forgave this display of egotism in consideration of its honesty and the dignity it imparted to his person.

"I first met Miss Challoner in the Berkshires," he began, after a moment of quiet listening for any possible sound from the other room. "I had been on the tramp, and had stopped at one of the great hotels for a seven days' rest. I will acknowledge that I chose this spot at the instigation of a relative who knew my tastes and how perfectly they might be gratified there. That I should mingle with the guests may not have been in his thought, any more than it was in mine at the beginning of my stay. The panorama of beauty spread out before me on every side was sufficient in itself for my enjoyment, and might have continued so to the end if my attention had not been very forcibly drawn on one memorable morning to a young lady—Miss Challoner—by the very earnest look she gave me as I was crossing the office from one verandah to another. I must insist on this look, even if it shock the delicacy of my listeners, for without the interest it awakened in me, I might not have noticed the blush with which she turned aside to join her friends on the verandah. It was an overwhelming blush which could not have sprung from any slight embarrassment, and, though I hate the pretensions of those egotists who see in a woman's smile more than it by right conveys, I could not help being moved by this display of feeling in one so gifted with every grace and attribute of the perfect woman. With less caution than I usually display, I approached the desk where she had been standing and, meeting the eyes of the clerk, asked the young lady's name. He gave it, and waited for me to express the surprise he expected it to evoke. But I felt none and showed none. Other feelings had seized me. I had heard of this gracious woman from many sources, in my life among the suffering masses of New York, and now that I had seen her and found her to be not only my ideal of personal loveliness but seemingly approachable and not uninterested in myself, I allowed my fancy to soar and my heart to become touched. A fact which the clerk now confided to me naturally deepened the impression. Miss Challoner had seen my name in the guest-book and asked to have me pointed out to her. Perhaps she had heard my name spoken in the same quarter where I had heard hers. We have never exchanged confidences on the subject, and I cannot say. I can only give you my reason for the interest I felt in Miss Challoner and why I forgot, in the glamour of this episode, the aims and purposes of a not unambitious life and the distance which the world and the so-called aristocratic class put between a woman of her wealth and standing and a simple worker like myself.

"I must be pardoned. She had smiled upon me once, and she smiled again. Days before we were formally presented, I caught her softened look turned my way, as we passed each other in hall or corridor. We were friends, or so it appeared to me, before ever a word passed between us, and when fortune favoured us and we were duly introduced, our minds met in a strange sympathy which made this one interview a memorable one to me. Unhappily, as I then considered it, this was my last day at the hotel, and our conversation, interrupted frequently by passing acquaintances, was never resumed. I exchanged a few words with her by way of goodbye, but nothing more. I came to New York, and she remained in Lenox. A month after and she too came to New York."

ASKED HER DRUGGIST TO GIVE HER SOMETHING.

She Had a Bad Cold, So He Recommended

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. James Warren, Edmonton, Alta., writes:—"Just a few words in favor of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A short time ago I contracted a bad cold, and tried several remedies, but had no good results. I asked my druggist to give me some good cough medicine he could recommend, so he told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I can safely say I have never tried anything like it. The first dose gave me relief, and I was completely cured of my cough before I had finished one bottle. It is the best cough remedy I have ever tried, and I can recommend it to everyone."

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful, soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It is a remedy without an equal for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all affection of the throat or lungs.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

The Elevator Ranks With The Indispensable Aids to Modern Business

BUSINESS was transacted without the typewriter, telephone or electric light for thousands of years. Until invention provided these conveniences, no one could realize how absolutely indispensable they would become.

Yet the business to-day that tried to get along without their aid would be a poor last in the race of competition. Many business men have yet to realize that good elevator equipment is as indispensable in the efficient management of the warehouse or factory as are typewriters and telephones in the general offices.

Otis Fensom Freight Elevators have have made themselves indispensable wherever they have been installed. They save labor—reduce the biggest single item of expense in any business, and at the same time remove sources of worry and vexation that otherwise would seriously impair the efficiency of an important department.

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT ELEVATORS

It will be to your profit to realize now that in doing without good elevator service you have been doing without a really indispensable convenience.

The booklet, "Freight Elevators and Their Uses," will aid you in deciding whether or not you really need an elevator. The book is free. Write for it.

A SHILLING EDUCATION

The Bishop of Manchester Tells of His Road to Learning.

Speaking of the removal of D. Talbot to Winchester at a meeting at Church House, Westminster, the other day, the Bishop of Manchester told an amusing story of his own departure from a small parish to a larger one in earlier years. When he told his parishioners that he was going to have seven children they said, "That's worse than having seven wives."

His answer was, "It all depends upon the curates." Besides, Dr. Knox added, his little experience of life was this—that the secret of happiness was to have a sufficient multitude of worries. The man who had only one worry, a blind that would not be pulled up straight by the servant, or a coal-scuttle the bottom of which was always coming out—that man found his way to the lunatic asylum. But the man who had no time to dwell upon his worries because he had to go from one to another and back again, and round and round like a squirrel in a cage, could be a perfectly happy man.

Dr. Knox is in many ways one of the most democratic bishops in the Church. His services on that sands at Blackpool in the summer, and his "straight from the shoulder" talks to thousand of Lancashire mill hands that make holiday there, have become institutions.

Preaching on one occasion of charity, Dr. Knox, dealing with the various types of wastrels that parade up and down the country(related a story of a particularly proud and haughty member of the fraternity. An old lady, being accosted by him, gave him a threepenny piece. The beggar, holding the coin in the palm of his hand, gazed at it for some seconds. "Wot d'ye think I'm going to do with this?" he growled, "Oh, keep it," said the old lady sweetly; "keep it, and give it to some poor tramp."

Dr. Knox is an old Pauline, and he has paid a high tribute to the value of the education he received at St. Paul's. "My father," the bishop has said, "was one of those not very uncommon persons, a poor clergyman with a large family, and he could not have sent me to a public school or university, if in the first place, St. Paul's had not opened its door without payment except one shilling paid to the porter of the school. Later I was able, by the munificence of the Mercers' Company, to proceed to the university, without costing my father a single sixpence. I can claim that the whole of my education cost my father one shilling, and I claim it was not a bad education."

MANUAL TRAINING AFLOAT

Boys to be taught useful trades on a vessel on the Thames.

Before long there will be established on the Thames, off Temple River, if the Government is sympathetic, a training ship, in which boys in "blind alley" work—errand boys, messengers, junior clerks, etc.—will learn the rudiments of some skilled trade. Lord Northampton's scheme is novel and attractive. The ship—when it has been procurred—will be fitted with club-rooms, reading-rooms, and gymnasium. Workshops will be fitted up on board, and the boys will be taught such useful trades as carpenter, wheelwright, coach-builder, blacksmith, saddler and harness-maker.

Friday will be an off-night, and will be given up to concerts and lectures, while on alternative Saturdays there will be route marshes on shore. It is proposed to form the boys into a corps to be known as the "Imperial Marine Artificers," and the first year it is intended to limit the number to 200 non-commissioned officers and artificers-apprentices, although it is impossible that provision may be found for 100 more boys. It is estimated that the annual cost of the corps, including wages, maintenance of the ship and all other expenditures, will be $7,000. Already, half of the money required for the initial outlay has been privately promised, and an appeal is to be made to the citizens of London to provide the balance. It is expected that the Government will assist the scheme to the extent of supplying a ship.

TO REPAIR BUCKINGHAM

The Duke of Connaught's Criticism of the Palace Bears Fruit

Buckingham Palace is to have some much needed attention given to its exterior. This is due to the outspoken remarks of the Duke of Connaught upon the appearance of the Palace. Last year Mr. Harcourt, the First Commissioner of Works, found himself with a surplus of $750,000, in hand, and this he purposed to devote to the painting of the exterior of the Palace and other highly necessary works. He was over-ruled however, by other members of the Cabinet on the ground that with such large sums required for the Coronation and other Royal purposes this sum should be expended elsewhere. It is understood that work will be commenced on the building about Easter, when the Court will be at Windsor, and that it will be pushed forward so as to be completed by the time the London season proper commences in May. The roof of the Palace is in a very bad state of repair in places and this, too, is to receive attention.

Many of Them Date Back Centuries, Some Belonging to Henry VIII.

The royal jewels of the priceless value which are kept—under the charge of the King's Librarian, the Hon. John Fortescue—in a strong room at Windsor Castle, have just been recatalogued and photographed.

Many of the jewels date back centuries and belonged to former kings and queens of England. They consist of pendants, necklaces, hair ornaments, and rings of great beauty. Several of the greatest treasures are of the time of Henry VIII. and belonged to one or other of that monarch's queens.

The late king took much interest in the jewels. Previously they were in various apartments in the castle, but he had them collected and deposited in the strong-room which was built when he came to the throne. King George and Queen Mary have also interested themselves in the jewels, and by his Majesty's directions the photographer on the Lord Chamberlain's staff at the castle has photographed every jewel. The catalogues and the photographs have been bound, and are kept in the royal library.

In the gold pantry at Windsor Castle are some magnificent jeweled Communion cups, which have been used by the kings and queens of England for centuries and are still used by the King and Queen when they take the Sacrament. A recent addition to the collection of treasures in the royal library is the shirt that King Charles I. wore at his execution.

QUEER CORONATIONS

Various Methods of Formally Crowning a Sovereign.

One of the most extraordinary coronations in the world's history was that of Henry VII., who had the crown placed upon his head in an impromptu ceremony after defeating and slaying Richard III. at the battle of Bosworth. To be crowned on the field of battle is a distinction offered to few monarchs.

When Norway and Sweden were united under one king, that king had to go through two coronation ceremonies, one for each kingdom, and have two crowns offered him; this presumably being in memory of the time before the union of the two kingdoms.

There are many "coronations," if we may use the term, in which no crown takes part at all. The King of the Belgians, in the ceremony of his investure, merely swears to preserve the constitution and obey the laws. Neither is there a coronation proper in Spain, which originally had no royal crown.

The Sultan of Turkey, instead of being crowned, is girt with the sword of Othman, one of the early Kalifs, as a sign of the power of the sword and his absolute monarchy.

Whereas some kings have no crowns at all, the Czar has a great number. In addition to the Russian Imperial crown, he possesses the crowns of Finland, Poland, Astrachan, Siberia, Kasan, Kiev, and the Crimea.

DARING HORSEWOMAN.

Miss Helen Preece, of London, Eng., one of the most daring horsewomen in England, was one of the attractions at the New York Horse Show. Miss Preece is an enthusiastic cross-country rider and was recently personally complimented by Queen Mary on her bravery. Miss Preece is only fourteen years old and has won blue ribbons.

Prince to Study Law.

Prince Joachim, the sixth son of the German Emperor, will shortly be entered as a law student at the University of Strasburg. Several of his brothers have had special training in Government departments, and it is thought that Prince Joachim is destined for employment, for a period at least, in some state office. He will study law with the son of Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor.

103 ONE-LEGGED MEN

Fifteen Men Crippled Through Football Assembled by Theatre Ad.

Issue of an advertisement for a one-legged man, to take charge of part of a new house of entertainment at Glasgow, produced 103 cripples at the Adelphi Hotel. One of the applicants had fought under Lord Charles Beresford at the bombardment of Alexandria. Fifteen men had had their legs cut off as boys through injuries received while playing football, and five were ex-sailors whose injuries were due to falls from the rigging of sailing ships.

HINTS FOR INVESTORS

Here is some advice from James H. Clews, of Henry Clews & Company:

The first thing to be considered is safeguarding one's principal.

Remember that principal comes first and that everything else is of a secondary nature.

It is said that when nothing is risked nothing is gained; nevertheless.

Doubtful bonds for investment is a source of worry and annoyance and often begets loss.

Never leave a bad bond to your heirs, lest they question your judgment.

Do not expect to find an absolute safe bond paying an excessive rate of interest, for the two do not go hand in hand.

In making investments high grade means low rate, and low grade means high rate, but the terms are not synonymous.

It is better to be satisfied with a moderate income than to jeopardise your principal.

A company is only as strong as its weakest mortgage.

A junior mortgage of a strong company is often better than a first mortgage of a weak company.

It is a bad proposition to be tied up with security which cannot be readily marketed.

It is a good rule for an investor to scatter his risks.

Four per cent. is the recognized ideal standard of income the world over.

Remember that the further one gets away from 4 per cent. the greater the proportionate risk.

A good railroad bond is more desirable than a real estate mortgage, owing to its marketability and its ready use as a collateral.

The market offers as good opportunities for the small investor as for the large one.

A company that earns double its fixed charges is a strong company.

PRINCE OF WALES' FEATHERS

On the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a tuft of peculiar feathers, the value of which is estimated at over nine thousand pounds, and which is thought to be the only tuft in possession of any human being. The feathers are those of the periwak, a very rare creature which is found only in dense jungles infested with tigers. Consequently, there is considerable danger in undertaking to procure the feathers; those in the crown of the Prince of Wales having cost more than twelve human lives to secure.

GERIATRICS

The New Department of Medicine, Which Has to Do with the Treatment of the Aged by Material Methods—"Death Takes the Quitters"

BY JAMES J. WALSH.

AT last medical science has awakened up to the fact that special care needs to be taken of the old. There are now one-fifth more people alive above the age of sixty, it is said, than was the case a generation ago. The average length of life has increased about one-fourth, and as the average is greatly decreased by the excess of deaths under five it is particularly because of much longer life than before that our mortality average has improved so much. Scientific medicine has been occupied for many years with the question of reducing the death rate among children. A special department of medicine, called pediatrics, from the two Greek words meaning child and healing, was established about half a century ago and a special chair created for it in all the medical schools. Those who know the statistics of the death rate among children will appreciate very well how much has been accomplished by this departure. There are literally thousands of children alive now in our large cities that would not be alive if the infantile death rate of even twenty years ago had maintained itself.

Now medical science and, above all, medical education is coming to recognize that a similar benefit can be conferred upon mankind by the careful specialty of the diseases of the old. It has been too much the custom to think that old age must necessarily be associated with suffering and that the inevitable progress toward death, with its accompanying manifestations, must be accepted calmly without any possibility of much relief for them. A great change has come over the scientific attitude toward old age, however. Metchnikoff, at the Pasteur Institute, calmly discusses the possibility of man living on to 120 or, perhaps 150, if only the disharmonies of life can be corrected. Distinguished thinkers in psychology have quite seriously discussed the question as to whether death may not really be a process of anticipation in human life because of the conviction that has come to so many minds that almost any affection occurring after sixty is likely to carry the patient off. Certain it is that by will power men sometimes live long after physicians are ready to declare that death is inevitable. On the other hand, it is well known that death takes the "quitters" and that men who give up in such diseases as pneumonia or kidney disease do not last long. Tuberculosis, it has often been said, takes only the "quitters," and every man who will will to live in the early stages of the disease can almost without exception secure many years of life for himself.

Food, Rest and Air.

The great reduction in the death rate among children and the corresponding lengthening of life has come as a result of attention particularly to three things—food, air and rest. Overfeeding is only a little bit more serious than too little air or sleep. Sometimes the details with regard to these seem very trifling, but long ago Michael Angelo said, "Trifles make perfection, though perfection is no trifle." Certainly this may be paraphrased, both as regards the health of the young and the old. "Trifles make health, though health is no trifle." It is the food, its proper preparation, and especially care that there shall not be an excess of it; the amount of air, and watchfulness that there shall be an abundance of it, and the amount of sleep, and precautions to obtain the proper amount of it, that makes all the difference between health and disease, which, after all, means only discomfort, though it may have serious consequences for the old as well as for the young.

What we have learned in recent years is the definite application of principles of treatment to the old so as to obtain these indispensable requisites to as great an extent as possible, and particularly to the degree required for the special individual, for, after all, it is a question, not of treating old age, but of treating old persons, each one of whom is very different from the others. It is only appropriate, then, that the new special department of clinical medicine should be called by a name analagous to pediatrics. Geriatrics—from the Greek geras (an old man) and iatrics (healing)—has been very properly adopted for it.

There are certain noteworthy differences between those who are beyond sixty and those who are in middle life as regards physiology, pathology, tendencies to disease and resistive vitality. This is particularly noticeable with regard to the two most important functions of animal life—eating and sleeping. Long ago Hippocrates declared in one of his aphorisms, "The old stand fasting much better than those of middle age, and those of middle age much better than the young. Children are very easily hurt by lack of food." This is the keynote of eating among the old. They need less food than in earlier years, and if they insist on eating as much as formerly they suffer from it. It is rather easy to understand the reason for this. They are not nearly so active as in middle life and their heat processes within the body are much lower. As a consequence they do not burn up so much fuel, and if the fuel continues to be provided in excess for this heat engine that the animal part of man is, it will not be long before the fire box will be clogged and before processes of various kinds within the body will be seriously disturbed.

Moderation in Eating.

Above all, it is important that long established habits of eating shall not be disturbed in the older years, especially in the direction of more abundant eating than before. Many a man who after a reasonably long life of simplicity in eating comes into conditions of life where dining becomes a function and course dinners and luncheons and breakfasts a routine suffers severely from it. It is in these cases literally that men sometimes "dig their graves with their teeth." Moderation in eating is of first importance for the old.

An extremely interesting story is told of the physician of the late Pope Leo XIII. and his arbitrary regulation of certain of the habits of the great pontiff. The Pope is said to have announced to his physician one day that he was thinking of getting a new set of teeth and that a dentist should be summoned for that purpose. Leo XIII. had been one of the most abstemious of men in the matter of food and had always done an enormous amount of work. His physician, well pleased with the state of the Pope's health, which enabled him to accomplish so much in spite of his years, naturally hesitated about the change in his diet that might come with the introduction of new teeth. He declared at once:—"No, Holy Father. I shall not permit you to get a new set of teeth. We shall have the old ones repaired, but no more. You have been getting on very well with the old ones, and I have grave fears as to what might happen to your old stomach because of the work that might be set for it by the new teeth."

After eating, the most important factor for the retention of health in age is sleep. Those above sixty need more sleep than they did in middle life, or at least need to spend more of their time in a reclining position. It is not absolutely necessary that they should sleep all the time, but they ought to spend at least eight hours lying down with all portions of the body on about the same level, so as to save their hearts the necessity for pumping blood against the force of gravity. It must not be forgotten that some two gallons of blood—that is, sixteen pounds—goes through the heart about every minute. The merely mechanical labor performed by the heart muscles is enormous. The saving of a considerable portion of the heart by lying down is an extremely favorable factor for old hearts. Besides, the old should lie down for some time about the middle of their working day. If they get up a little after seven o'clock and stay up until nearly eleven the sixteen hour day should be broken between two and four o'clock by a prolonged interval of lying down. In Europe many men have the practice of reclining for a while at this time, and a good many of those who have lived long lives have had this habit of breaking the day for a time about its middle.

In recent years public attention has been very widely attracted to the question of the hardening of the arteries that occurs almost normally in old age. Arterio-sclerosis has come to be considered a dread disease that shortens men's lives. As a matter of fact, it is almost an inevitable development of the changes consequent upon the growing old of the tissues.

Youth Has a Magnetism of Its Own Which It Imparts to the Old, Lifting Them Out of Depression and Despondency.

For some reasons, such as overwork in youth, the deteriorating effect of certain diseases, overstrenuousity of life, the abuse of stimulants, drugs and tobacco and the influence of heredity, some men develop hardening of the arteries prematurely—that is, much sooner than it should normally come. A man is literally as old as his arteries, and the arteries of these individuals have grown old before their time. There has been question of cures for arterio-sclerosis, but it is an affection to be prevented, not cured. Oliver Wendell Holmes said that a physician could cure any disease if he only came to him in time, but that the diseases of many of his patients ought to have come for treatment in the persons of their grandfathers. Something very similar ought to be said of arterio-sclerosis. It needs to be treated not when it is already fully developed, but twenty or forty years before, when the abuses in eating, drinking, working, and, above all, worrying, were making themselves felt upon the arterial system.

It is extremely important that the old should keep up their occupations, so as to prevent occupation of mind with itself to a harmful degree. Men, like machines, will rust out sooner than they will wear out. Many a man at the age of sixty or less gives up his occupation in life, thinking that now it is time for him to take a rest, and finds before long that there is no rest for him in the sense of being satisfied with doing nothing, but that if he has been much occupied during the preceding years then for peace of mind for himself he must continue to have mental occupation. Some one once said, very well, we must occupy our minds with doing things or else they will do us. That is literally true.

After occupation of mind the most important preservative for the old is association with the young. Nothing so keeps a man from brooding over the troubles of life, and even impending dissolution, than occupation with those much younger than himself in which he is deeply interested. Many a grandfather finds the very best tonic for his vitality in intimate association with his grandchildren. Youth has a magnetism of its own which it imparts to the old, lifting them up out of depression and despondency. Curiously enough, associations with those of mature or middle age have not so much benefit for the old. Often they emphasize the impossibility and incapacity for accomplishment which age more or less necessarily brings with it. When a man can help young people and be much with them, then his older years are likely to have more of happiness and health than under any other circumstance.

It has been found that it is extremely important for old age not to lapse into habits of inactivity. There is the temptation of a man well on in years to give up walking to a great extent, to ride in carriages and to sit in the house a great deal. What has been learned about the heart in recent years shows very clearly that unless it gets a certain definite amount of exercise it does not do its work as well as it otherwise would. At Nauheim, the greatest health resort for heart cases in the world, while the baths constitute the attraction, it is well recognized by the medical profession that the graduated exercise up the low grade hills which surround Nauheim, which is always carefully prescribed, constitutes the most successful part of the treatment. Stokes, the greatest of English authorities at the middle of the nineteenth century, insisted that even for fatty hearts gradually increased exercise is extremely important.

It is recognized now that the tendency of the old to drop into flesh is particularly unfavorable for them. Their obesity is due to a great extent to the inactivity to which their years predispose them, but the accumulation of fat has had two bad effects. First, because of the weight it requires the individual to carry around it further discourages activity. Second, it accumulates around important organs, especially around the heart, though also in the abdomen, and hampers their activity. Great care must be exercised, then, not to permit the accumulation of fat. There is only one way to do this, eat no more than is required for the amount of exercise taken. Just as soon as the weight begins to go up beyond the normal weight for height there must be less eating and more exercise. Care must begin not when the patient is already thirty or forty pounds over weight, but when five per cent more than the normal weight for height is noted. It is not hard to get a table that will show exactly what that is.

Difficult to Reduce Weight.

When older people have once put on weight it is rather difficult to take it off. Much can be done, however, by regular exercise and proper limitation of food. This need not mean that they shall be denied all starchy substances and most of the food products that they like best, but that everything that they eat shall be somewhat limited and that certain especially fattening articles like puddings, ice cream and butter shall to a great extent be taken out of their diet. With regard to exercise they will probably need considerable encouragement. There are forms of exercise, however, that are particularly good for old people. Golf is one of these, walking, especially in company with a friend or friends, is another, and then in recent years the value of walking down stairs has been recognized. We probably owe the suggestion of this to some of the German specialists, but American experience has shown it to be a very valuable form of exercise in taking off weight from those who are pretty well on in years.

For older women (how much weaker the comparative is here than the positive) probably the worst possible feature is their environment in the presence in the house with them of several unmarried daughters. They take all the responsibility off mother's shoulders and try to do everything for her, keep her from going out in case there has been the slightest change in the weather and want to make arrangements by which she shall be saved all fatigue. Now, fatigue is a valuable conservative process in nature. It means that a certain amount of energy has been used up, and there is always a certain satisfaction in it. It has often been called to attention that muscular exercise is really only satisfying and pleasurable when it reaches a point where it is properly fatiguing. Unless mother is allowed to have proper occupation of mind with many things that she has to do for herself until she is encouraged to exercise, to get out for herself, to do many things, there is danger that she may rust out sooner than wear out. Any one who knows conditions in households where the daughters try to make things too easy for mother will appreciate these remarks. Any physician is likely to have seen a number of cases in which oversolicitude for mother on the part of the daughters has, if not actually shortened life, certainly made the closing years of mother's life more full of mental and even physical discomfort than it otherwise would have been.

Exercise of Legs.

It has come to be realized very clearly in recent years that a great many of the pains and aches of the old, and especially those in the legs, are due more to inactivity than to any other factor. Old men who have to stand much suffer a great deal. As these pains and aches are worse in rainy weather, they have usually been set down to rheumatism. It has come to be recognized, however, that the word rheumatism should only be used whenever there has been an acute stage with fever and redness and swelling of joints. The other pains and aches are due to long use of muscles. Sometimes they are due to flat foot, often to enlargement of the veins of the leg, spoken of as varicose veins, sometimes to standing without any proper exercise of leg muscles. In the upright position the leg muscles are firmly contracted and the circulation in the thin walled veins is considerably hampered. Venous circulation is greatly helped by muscular contractions. Hence the necessity for some definite exercise of the legs, by walking, downstairs and the like, which thoroughly empties the veins.

While the return circulation is most important in the legs, sometimes the direct circulation through the arteries is disturbed. The feet of the old rather easily become cold, as it may require a good deal of warmth to restore circulation. At the end of a long day if an old person lies down with cold feet they may cause wakefulness for several hours. Sir Henry Thompson, the distinguished English surgeon, who lived to a well beyond eighty and wrote a book on old age when he was past fourscore, had a custom of putting his feet for at least ten minutes just before going to bed in water gradually made as hot as he could stand. This distended the veins, brought a large quantity of blood down to the legs, and so prevented insomnia. After he had been out at a meeting or a dinner, or any other occasion that might possibly make him wakeful, he extended the time of this pediluvium and slept undisturbed for from seven to eight hours afterward.

In general it may be said that all the advance in the care of the old has come from a greater attention to the hygienic details of living. There must be full conservation of mind, considerable activity of body and attention to details of health in the matter of air, water, food and bodily exercise. These, with the definite persuasion that life by no means necessarily ends with the seventieth year and only accidentally with anything later than that, and in the words of Bismarck that while mankind is persuaded that all the good things happen in the first seventy years of life there are many pleasant ones in the second seventy, there could be no reason why men should not live happy and happy considerably beyond the score and ten without necessarily impairing any of the unhappiness suggested by the Psalmist.

THE BORROWED TIME CLUB HEARKENS TO DEAD VOICES

THERE is a land of pure delight
Where saints immortal reign;
Infinite day excludes the night
And pleasures banish pain.

It was the voice of a man dead six years that intoned the old hymn he had loved to sing in life—a thin, wavering voice that took a sharp upward turn at the end of each line.

There everlasting spring abides
And ever-withering flowers.
Death, like a narrow sea, divides
This heavenly land from ours.

It was very quiet in the room where the gray haired listeners sat. Not a man of them was under the age of threescore years and ten. Most of them had known the hymn since they were boys. Here it was coming back to them in the ripeness of their years. The singer seemed very near, but they could not see him, except as this strangely intimate chamber music helped to bring them mental pictures.

The voice was that of their departed comrade, E. W. Hoard, and they had been with him many evenings when the Borrowed Time Club met to talk over the old days. He was ninety-three when he died, six years ago. He left to his club mates a tender memory—and his voice, the latter preserved on the record of a phonograph.

Another voice was saved to the living comrades, and it too sang an old fashioned hymn. "Father" E. F. Robbins, founder of the Borrowed Time Club, has been in his grave two years or more. A little, hacking cough preceded the singing from the funnel of the phonograph, and then this:—

There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains.

"I've heard him sing it many a time," whispered a member of the club. "It was his favorite hymn, and he'd close his eyes, rock gently in that big chair over there and twist the wrinkles of his face into a smile. He'd sing it in the little harness shop as he worked. That's where we organized the club, and whenever I catch the smell of harness leather I think of that shop and of 'Father' Robbins and the quaint way he sang to himself."

Back of the machine as the voices of the dead came out of it stood Philander Barclay, historian of the club, who had hit upon the phonograph as the means of preserving something more tangible than memories.

Mr. Barclay was master of ceremonies in this odd gathering of septuagenarians and octogenarians. The party took place in the chamber of Sceville Institute, in Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago. It was there the Borrowed Time Club came into existence, ten years ago. No man may belong to it who has not reached or passed the age of seventy years.

In 1902 a little group of men met in the harness shop of "Father" Robbins. There were many men of advanced years living in Oak Park. They felt the need of a rendezvous where they might come to tell of the days of the "deep snow" and after. There were twenty-five charter members. The club began its career with promise, and things went well for two years, but death ravaged the membership roll, and for a while there was little to do beyond paying the last tribute to departed brothers. To-day only seven or eight of the original members are alive. The club suspended its activities, but new members were drawn into it, and it has taken on what appears to be a long lease of existence. Meetings are held each week and sometimes there is an extra attraction. One of these was the phonograph feature, bringing back the singing, the chuckling and the good natured banter of "Father" Robbins and Mr. Hoard.

Members of the Borrowed Time Club Listening to Voice of Comrade Dead Six Years.

Mr. Hoard sang and talked for the phonograph record on September 6, 1905. A few months later he died. He had told something of his boyhood, of the simple life, of his coming to Oak Park when Chicago was much smaller than it is to-day. There was a short pause and the voice poured out its simple apostrophe to "the land of pure delight." The living comrades leaned forward, made to their ears, that they might not miss a familiar word or lose an inflection.

Something like a sigh swept over the room at the finish of the first stanza. The second brought tears to a few eyes. For the third every comrade, some of them none too strong, rose to his feet and joined his own voice with that of Mr. Hoard.

Bright fields beyond the swelling flood
Stand dressed in living green;
So to the Jews fair Canaan stood,
While Jordan rolled between.

"I could almost believe," said one of the singers, "that he was standing right in front of me just the way he used to stand when he was alive—one hand in his upper vest pocket and the other holding his cane. When I hear his voice it is hard to understand that he has been gone six years. He always did what he could to make this a land of pure delight. If he is where he can look down on us to-night and hear he will be glad, I know."

Again the phonograph started. This time Mr. Barclay provided something to relieve the tense feeling. The laugh of Mr. Hoard greeted that of "Father" Robbins.

"Why, hello, Robbie!" came the words. "We weren't looking for you to-night."

"Ah, you wasn't, eh? Well, you never can tell who's going to happen along when you ain't looking."

There was a laugh in concert down in the machine. The listeners took it up uncertainly, and for the first time in half an hour their faces lighted up with smiles and significant nods were exchanged.

"It's just the way they used to salute each other," whispered a man of seventy-five. "It didn't make any difference whether they came to the hall together or hadn't seen each other for days. It was a sort of mock ceremonial they went through and then they'd laugh just as you heard them now. They were only gray haired boys after all."

"Well, well, well! How you're getting on," said the voice of Robbie. "Mighty nigh grown up, ain't you? Congratulations and many returns of the day. Let me see, it's the ninety-third birthday, ain't it?"

"It was his ninety-third and it was his last," explained one of the party. "He died a few months after that."

"It's been a long time since we met," continued the voice of "Father" Robbins, and there was another familiar chuckle.

"Yes, a long time, Robbie. You and I are not so smart as we used to be, but I guess our hearts are young enough."

"Robbie" recited again the story he had told so many times; told of the years before he had met Mr. Hoard and the years after. It was a beautiful story of friendship, a simple tribute to a man he loved. He went back to the time when much of the present New York was a wilderness, recounted what he remembered of the last visit of Lafayette to this country, of the exciting period of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too"; of the first locomotive he ever saw, of his going West and of the growth of Chicago.

It is proposed that the Borrowed Time Club shall take the initiative in Oak Park toward the building of a club house, where men who have retired from active life may get together from day to day. Mr. Barclay is planning to take phonograph records of all the members who will consent to bequeath their speaking voices and their laughter to the archives of the organization.

L. D. Cogswell, seventy-nine years old, is president of the Borrowed Time Club. He announces that he does will resign the honor, because he expects "to go West to grow up with the country."

THE FAMILY HEARTH

'Twas Oliver Wendell Holmes who said "Happiness consists of four feet on a fender"—another way of spelling h-o-m-e. Understand, one can get considerable "pleasure" elsewhere, coarse or refined. There's considerable gratification in a night of fellowship with the "boys" at the lodge. One may be wildly hilarious as a "fun factory" at Coney Island, but when it's all done, after the last guffaw at the "factory," after, with more or less treacherous memory, you've sung "Auld Lang Syne" then you start—homeward. The cheap tinsel of regalia, the hollowness of ritual, somehow crowd in on you. The trite saying the "suverin gran potentate" as he gave you good-night grip at the street corner, "We can go home, Jim, when we can go nowhere else," strikes in still deeper. To Adam, paradise was home; to you, home is paradise. There the "kiddies" are; there "the best woman God ever made" greets you with face and eyes bright as June morning. What do the Chinese say? "A hundred men make an encampment; it takes a woman to make a home." Any influence that makes men think less of home is traitor to the man. The strength of the country is built on the home. It's a political safeguard. No anarchy for the man with a home. "No home" means Goths and Vandals. It's the strength of the church, too. Hearthstones were laid before altar stones. To the true home angels might be invited to stay and not find themselves amiss.

* * *

Young man, if you expect to attain success you must work. Success does not crown the efforts of a boy who runs away from school and shirks his lessons.

The home circle may be—ought to be—the most charming and delightful place on earth, the centre of the purest affections and most desirable associations, as well as the most attractive and exalted beauties to be found this side of paradise.

* * *

There are so many places of cheap amusement, and we may say so many cheap companies, so many dangers in the little town the same as the cities, that we must avoid by making the evenings at home so pleasant, that our young people will be content to spend their evenings at home, and find their recreation in the entertainment arranged for their diversion.

* * *

Success does not crown the effort of a youth who stands around the street corners smoking cigarettes and expectorating on the sidewalks.

* * *

Push! Push! It is just the word for the grand, clear morning of life: it is just the word for strong arms and young hearts; it is just the word for a world that is full of work as this is. If anybody is in trouble, and you see it, don't stand back; push!

* * *

It is always best to wait for the evidence before passing judgment. When you hear reports detrimental to young ladies or gentlemen, don't be hasty in forming conclusions. It is better to be charitable when any one is in trouble. To-day it is some one else's boy or girl; to-morrow it may be yours.

* * *

We have seen a picture by Harris entitled "No More Home." We can't forget it. For the first time the young husband staggers into that rich home intoxicated. And it is a rich home; notice the draperies, the pictures, the furnishings. The baby's crib, which the young mother prays may become its casket, rocks to sleep innocence. A thousand things are worse than death. The husband wears a flashing diamond, but lacks the diamond of character. See the roses dropping from the vase, withering, dying. See the roses dropping from the wife's heart, withering, dying. The closed piano — music is dead. the light is going ou. "No more home." God help those who live in homeless houses—houses where a husband gives black looks and vile oaths; where a woman's sarcastic and nagging tongue drives a man to drink quicker than snake bite; where a lazy son gives abuse and heartbreak instead of gratitude; where a shallow, thankless daughter believes in her chief end and aim in life to dress swell and marry a bank account and an auto, as though happiness always travelled in a touring car! Deliver us from such a home! Close it up quick! Put up the sign "House for Sale." Better sit on a stump of a tree out in the woods with an umbrella over your head and call that home.

* * *

Social workers and reformers all over this broad land of ours are constantly trying to remedy problems of vice and install new reform methods; and it behoves every mother of our Home, Sweet Home to do her share by exerting preventive measures upon her boys and girls. Prevention is better than reform.

* * *

The worst tragedies are not enacted on stage, but in homes. The divorce courts indicate that. Poverty tragedies in the little street back of us where some actors suffer nobly rather than beg. Tragedies in the big house on the "avenue" gilded prison houses for women, infernos for men, chambers of horrors for children. Breaking hearts, withering hopes, maddening brains, the crowd goes screaming by. No, all the tragedy is not back in the little street. But "when poverty comes in the door" doesn't love fly out the window? No, we've seen too many lovers in overalls and sweethearts in gingham aprons to believe that. When we write a book of fables the first one will begin: "Once upon a time there was a house of poverty. But when the wolf came to the door he turned away, for he heard them laughing and singing." Home doesn't consist in things, but of hearts. A woman in a magnificent palace in Nebraska said to us: "The happiest days of my life were spent in a sod house ten miles out yonder on the prairie."

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly. Any housewife can easily prepare it in five minutes.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect, and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this recipe, if the genuine Pinex is used. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If you ask him. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

NEW BISMARCK STORIES.

Early Letters Tell of His Ambition to Enter the Diplomatic Service.

Some interesting traits in Bismarck's character are brought to light in a volume of his correspondence with Gustavus Scharlach, which has just been published.

Scharlach was Bismarck's companion at the University of Gottingen. Leaving the university a term before Bismarck, he began a correspondence with him which lasted with more or less regularity for a long time. The letters show that Bismarck's earliest ambition was to enter the diplomatic service. His family, who wished him to enter the army, opposed this idea, and in April, 1834, we find him writing to Scharlach:

"I have renounced the portfolio of foreign affairs. I am going to amuse myself for some years with the sword of correction, which will serve to train the recruits. Then I shall take a wife, I shall have a child, I shall cultivate my lands and I shall undermine the morals of my peasants by an unrestricted manufacture of alcohol."

In another letter he writes: "If in ten years' time you come to see me I invite you in advance to drink as much potato spirit as you wish and to break your neck hunting the hounds as often as you like. You will find a stout moustached, landwehr officer swearing and cursing enough to shake the earth, murdering French, beating his dogs and his domestics, and tyrannized by his family."

In defiance of his parents, however, young Bismarck turned his studies toward the law with the intention eventually of passing the diplomatic examination. While awaiting the results of the various examinations Bismarck wrote in June, 1838, referring somewhat bitterly to the red tape delays:

"I doubt," he said, "if the most perfect fulfilment of my desires, the longest title, the greatest decoration in Germany, the most dazzling honour, will compensate me for such an existence."

DRIVE IT OUT.

There's an evil in the land,
Drive it out!
It's a curse to every man,
Drive it out!
It is whisky, rum, and beer
That enslaves us year by year,
Will you not these fetters clear?
Drive it out!

Do you see the drunkard's home?
Drive it out!
Do you hear the mother's groan?
Drive it out!
Do you see our youthful men,
Doomed to death by "Satan's den?"
Do you see the drunkard's end?
Drive it out!

Drive it out! Drive it out!
Men of love and faith and prayer,
Be the kind that do and dare;
Live for temperance everywhere!
Drive it out!
—The "Templar."

As the German Emperor Sees It.

I know very well that the pleasure of drinking is an old heritage of the Germans. However, we must henceforth, in every connection through self-discipline, free ourselves from this evil.

I can assure you that I, in my twenty-two year reign, have made the observation that the greater number of criminal cases submitted to me for adjudication—up to nine-tenths—are traceable to the consequences of alcohol.—Emperor William of Germany.—Tidings.

Why She Joined the W.C.T.U.

Mrs. Florence D. Richards, a delegate to the W.C.T.U. convention from Ohio, told the story of her conversion to the temperance cause, after years of indifference.

"When I first seriously considered the campaign against the liquor traffic," said Mrs. Richards, "I saw temperance speakers ridiculed on every side. Men, in their political speeches, dragged out that old saying about women being the clinging vine and the men the sturdy oaks. But when I saw so many of the oaks prostrate in the gutter, and so many vines clinging to the washboard for support, I made up my mind that it was time to do something."—Michigan Union.

The Lord Chancellor of England on Drink and Social Reform.

"A manly, properly fed, properly housed, properly educated and trained population to meet the trials that are coming upon us. You won't get any of these things unless you also get a sober population.

"What vast sums are wasted in drink, what immense suffering there is in families. There is hardly a family which has not experience of the evils of this traffic. What hindrance to trade and trade societies, benefit societies; how it leads to crime, disease, and insanity, and deterioration, and blights the rearing of children.

"You must give the people a free hand in their own locality to say whether they will have fewer of these publichouses, or whether they will have any of them at all. Judicious handling and upright decisions by the benches of magistrates will not solve this question at all.'

"I would enable them to do it by a direct vote.

"I hope this might have effect directly; but whether it is directly used or not, the indirect effect will be enormous. The people in the locality will know whether the place ought to be allowed to continue or whether it ought not.

"And when there is a philanthropic spirit throughout the land, a sense of the necessity for ameliorating the physical, moral, and mental condition of our countrywomen, is it not extraordinary that we should have the difficulty that we have in passing the smallest reform connected with this Licensing System?

"What is the reason? Do not let us beat about the bush. The reason is the political influence of the liquor trade—which is exercised in every corner, in every parish in this country, and practically every licensed house is a committee room and a centre of political influence."—Everybody's Monthly.

HOUSEHOLD MEAT BUYING.

To the housewife there are ways and means of being a successful buyer. The inexperienced one can frequently be misled in purchasing meat. A knowledge of a few essential facts will benefit the buyer and the eaters.

First of all, meat should be a bright red. Any tendency to a dark colouring is a result of old blood.

There should be no unpleasant odour. If there is there is danger of taint and subsequent poisoning.

Meat should be kept in a cold place and should be covered so that no odours from other articles, such as cheeses, etc., will be absorbed by it.

About one-third of an ox, roughly, is fat. No ox should be killed before it is four years old. A point is reached in the feeding at which it should stop. An experienced eye knows at once when a beast has reached this stage. Beyond it the food does little good and is so much waste. The animal would deteriorate if kept longer, and then would have to be fed up once more to get it to right condition. Five years old gives prime beef also, and the meat from a six-year-old animal is excellent. The fat shows in wholesome white lines amid the bright red of the lean.

Beef fat is a great test of goodness in the meat. If the fat looks yellow the meat is from inferior cattle. It may be aged, and then a band of gristle, broad and hard, above the lean will proclaim this as well as the shrunken, dry lean portion itself and the jaundiced fat. If the gristle be fine and small and the lean normal, then a yellow tinge in the fat will mean heat, terror, or feverish state through overdriving before killing. The suet of ox beef should be hard and white.

Heifer beef is very good indeed, and may be known by the comparatively small size of the bones and joints. Heifers give some of the finest and most tender meat. Ox-lean is looser in grain than is the lean of cow meat. While fine in grain and cow meat.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Dyspepsia, Gas and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly written on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why Diapepsin always relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever get a little for Ingestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some Pape's Diapepsin now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

'Tis time for Youth to sing, to sing,
And lightly on the soft Earth spring;
(Beseech thee haste, Dame Flora).

And to the good warm Sun who charms
The bitter airs, uplifting his arms;
(Haste, haste thee, beauteous Flora).

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Strength in the feeding grains helped to offset to-day for speculators on the bull side the rather discouraging effect of the unresponsive foreign market. At the end of the day wheat was 1-4c higher to 3-8c decline, corn was 1-4 to 3-8c gain, oats were up 1-4 to 3-4c and hog products ran from 2 1-2 down to 7 1-2 to 10c greater in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat 3/4d to 7/8d higher than Saturday, and corn 1/2d to 5/8d higher. Paris wheat closed 1/2c higher. Antwerp 1/2c higher. Berlin 1/2c higher, and Budapest 1/2c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 11.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat and oats was quieter, but cables were firm and prices bid showed no change. A little business was worked to the United Kingdom. The local market for ... is firm, with a fair amount of business doing. American corn is very strong and 1½c per bushel higher. An active trade continues to be done in flour, there being a good demand and export account. Millfeed is still scarce and firm. Butter quiet, demand chiefly for small lots. Eggs weak and 5c per dozen lower, on more liberal supplies. Provisions steady.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, March 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 87 carloads, comprising 1656 cattle, 229 hogs, 515 sheep and lambs, 58 calves and 85 horses.

Exporters.

Geo. B. Campbell, for Morris & Co., bought 36 London export steers, 1200 lbs. each, at $7.25; also 100 steers for Liverpool, 1180 to 1190 lbs. each, at $6.80.

Alex. McIntosh bought 75 cattle for J. Shannery & Son—steers at $6.90 and bulls at $5 to $6.60.

Butchers.

Best steers, $6.50 to $6.85; prime lots, $6.15 to $6.30; good, $5.90 to $6.10; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.25; inferior, $4.50 to $4.90; cows, $3 to $5.25, and extra quality cows, $5.30 to $5.60; bulls, $4 to $5.60.

Milkers and Springers.

Not many on sale; prices ranged from $40 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at $4 to $8, and one or two new, milk-fed of extra quality brought $9 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $4 to $5.25, with a few selects at $5.50; rams and culls, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $6 to $6.75, and one select lot of 16 at $7.40.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston reported hogs at this market at $7.10 for selects, fed and watered, and $6.65 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 11.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 9 were 1300 cattle, 230 sheep and lambs, 3000 hogs and 1275 calves. The offerings this morning were 1000 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 600 calves.

A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for cattle this morning, and prices for some grades were 10c higher, but there was no general advance. The weather was favorable, and the gathering of buyers was large, consequently an active trade was done. The quality of the stock was superior.

A load of very choice steers, weighing on an average of 1250 to 1300 pounds each, was held at $7.40 at the opening of the trade, but later it was offered at $7.35, and even this figure did not interest buyers. The top price paid for choice steers in small lots was $7, and some full loads were placed at $6.75 per 100 pounds. The demand was principally for steers weighing from 900 to 1000 pounds each, and for

...cement of true crimes were sent freely at up to $6.25. There were some very fat cows on the market, which were bought for shipment to Quebec, at $5.50, and bulls weighing from 1500 to 1600 pounds each, at $5 to $5.50 per 100 pounds. Prices for cattle were ruled about steady.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger, and prices were 10c per 100 lbs. higher, which was attributed to the increased demand from some packers, who have been of late to some extent in anticipation of lower prices.

Owing to the very limited supply of sheep coming forward, a stronger feeling developed in the market, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds. The demand was fair and sales of ewes were made at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds. Lambs were in good demand and sold for $7.40 per 100 pounds in some instances.

The demand for calves was good, of which the supply is steadily increasing; but, as there is no glut of good to choice milk-fed stock, prices for such are well maintained at from $10 to $15 each.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; do, medium, $5 to $6.25; do., common, $4 to $4.75; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; do., medium, $3.60 to $4.50; do., bulls, $3.60 to $5.25; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $30 to $65; springers, $35 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $6.90 to $7.10.

Hogs, f.o.b., $7.75 to $7.85.

Calves, $8 to $15.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, March 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 4200; market fairly active; others slow, 15c to 25c lower; prime steers, $7.50 to $7.75; butcher grades, $6.75 to $6.90; cows, $3.25 to $5.50.

Calves—Receipts, 2000; market fairly active, 25c lower; cull to choice, $5.50 to $9.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 30,000; market active, 5c to 15c higher; choice lambs, $7.90 to $7.60; cull to fair, $7.25 to $7.60; yearlings, $6 to $6.25; sheep, $3 to $5.60.

Marriage Question In May.

Ottawa, March 12.—May 7 has been set for the hearing of the argument respecting the Government power to enact a federal marriage law as proposed in the Lancaster bill, and also of marriages solemnized in similar circumstances to the Hebert marriage.

Yesterday learned counsel appeared before Sir Charles Fitzpatrick in the Supreme Court, but the proceedings were not gone on with.

E. L. Newcombe, K.C.; Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., and Eugene Lafleur, K.C. appeared for the Government, and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., appeared in opposition to the Government's right, and to support the argument that the province alone have power to legislate on the marriage question.

R. C. Smith, K.C., and Aime Geoffrion, K.C., appeared for the Province of Quebec, with Auguste Lemieux, K.C., as agent for the Attorney-General.

"We have," said Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, "anticipated this motion, and after a conference with my colleagues it has been decided that the argument will be heard, commencing on the first day of the May term."

Increase For Postal Men.

Ottawa, March 12.—In the neighborhood of 8,000 postoffice employes, or practically every one in the city postoffices, are affected by the bill of Hon. L. P. Pelletier to amend the Civil Service Act, which was last evening given its second reading and put through committee.

According to the provisions of the bill, increases in salary are granted of $160 a year until $800 is reached, and above that come increases of $80 a year till $1,800 is reached.

Chief clerks and office superintendents get annual increases of $100 till $2,200 and $2,400 respectively are reached. This is a recognition which the city postal officials have been asking for years, having first been brought to the attention of Sir William Mulock when he was Postmaster-General.

Hon. L. P. Pelletier stated that it was found necessary to take the step to preserve the service, the Department finding that they could not keep their men at the salaries which had been paid.

Coal Dealers Fined.

Kingston, March 12.—Finding them guilty on a charge of having sent out coal under weight, Magistrate Farrell yesterday imposed a fine of $100 and costs upon four dealers, Robert Crawford, James Sowards, James Swift and Booth & Co. The charge against the Frontenac Lumber & Coal Co. was dismissed.

The magistrate held there had been a pure violation of the city bylaw, in that loads of coal had been sent out with the wrong weight on the accompanying ticket. This bylaw was for the protection of the people and must be carried out. Citizens generally spent a large part of their earnings for fuel in winter and the bylaw was made to keep a check on the dealers.

Kingston Votes to Buy Bridge.

Kingston, March 12.—By a majority of 855, the ratepayers passed a bylaw authorizing the council to purchase Cataraqui Bridge from the Cataraqui Bridge Co. for $14,000. The city already has a large share in the company. A small vote polled. The vote stood: For 893; against, 108.

Suffered With Nerve Trouble For Two Years.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR HIM TO SLEEP.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nervous system alone may be diseased, therefore it is necessary for anyone suffering from any nervous trouble to procure a remedy which will at once quieten the nerves and build up the system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do this for you, providing you give them a fair trial.

Mr. Chas. W. Wood, Montreal, Que., writes:—"For two years I had suffered with nerve trouble, and it was impossible for me to sleep. It did not matter what time I went to bed, in the morning I was even worse than the night before. I consulted a doctor, and he gave me a tonic to take a half hour before going to bed. It was all right for a time, but the old trouble returned with greater force than before. One of the boys, who works with me, gave me half a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took them and I got such satisfaction that I got another box, and before I finished it I could enjoy sleep from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m., and now feel good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

KEEPING DOWN ANARCHY.

Troops Are Having a Hard Time Policing Pekin.

Pekin, March 12.—Armed peace holds sway throughout the city. The legation quarter is closed and cannon have been mounted on the walls. Sunday the old style troops started disorders and were ordered yesterday to proceed to Tungho. They tore down the republican flags a few hours before the inauguration of Yuan Shi Kai as President of the republic. Many natives followed suit and for a time the authorities were confronted with a serious situation. The Manchu garrison and part of the third division are acting as a bodyguard to President Yuan.

The Manchus hold the site of the destroyed gate to the Imperial City with Maxims, permitting only merchants to enter. Shooting occurs occasionally and decapitations daily. Frequently at night time fires are visible in the hills from the city walls, probably the houses of farmers are being looted. Few shops are open and the wealthy Chinese remain in legation quarter. If the leading men were not able to take refuge behind a foreign gun whenever trouble occurred, peace might come more quickly.

For the past several weeks repetitions of the stories of anarchy, atrocities and sufferings have been received from all the northern provinces. The legations are of the opinion that the Nanking Cabinet is not capable of re-establishing order, unless the republican armies are brought to the north, and question the Cabinet's ability to assemble sufficient force for that purpose.

Crothers To Tour.

Ottawa, March 12.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has decided this summer to make a tour of Canada from Halifax to Vancouver, visiting all of the industrial centres. He plans to go into the mines, to inspect the great factories and to see for himself the conditions under which the laboring men are working.

Mr. Crothers feels that if he is to make his position as Minister of Labor valuable to employer and employe, he must meet men both in their working shops and offices. In the west Mr. Crothers will visit the factories of Winnipeg and other points, while he is planning to inspect all the coal mines of Alberta and British Columbia, which have been the scene of so many industrial disputes during recent years.

Nova Scotia to Encourage Settlers.

Halifax, March 12.—In the House of Assembly yesterday the Government introduced a bill entitled "An Act for the Encouragement of Settlement on Farm Lands," which provides that the Government may buy up lands in farming districts of the province, divide them up into farms, and sell such farms upon terms to be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in council.

For the carrying out of this the Government is authorized to borrow the sum of $200,000, and the operations of the Government under this act are to be reported by the Provincial Secretary from year to year.

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Former Ottawa Citizen Finds Peterboro an Unhealthy City For Vagrants

GETS SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Nelson Spiers of Otonabee, faced a drunk and disorderly charge, in the Police Court this morning. He was fined two dollars. "They get drunk in Otonabee, but they don't get caught," remarked His Worship.

Will Make Inquiries.

"I would ask your Worship for a remand," said the Chief, in reference to the case of John Swaton, who had a vagrancy charge registered against him.

Swaton claimed Ottawa as his home.

"How did you get here?" queried the Magistrate.

"By train," replied the youthful-looking delinquent.

"Steal a ride?"

"No, sir, paid $3.40 to get here."

He was remanded until the 16th, and in the meantime the Chief will make some inquiries regarding his past.

Bunceed the Merchants.

Several of the merchants have a small monetary deficit to their credit, as a result of the enterprising actions of a local man. The latter's plan of action was to approach his unsuspecting victim with a hard-luck story, with the object of extracting a small sum of money to help him out of the deal. To one prominent George street merchant he chronicled the death of a certain beloved friend of his, and succeeded in obtaining sixty cents, on the assumption that he was to send a telegram notifying a certain friend of the occurrence.

In the prisoner's dock he presented a dejected and penitent-looking appearance, and in the course of a brief speech he attributed his downfall to liquor.

His Worship was about to dismiss him with a warning, when Chief Thompson suggested that he be placed under suspended sentence. This would enable the police to keep tab on the actions of the man, in future.

The Magistrate acquiesced in this, and was again about to dismiss the prisoner when Crown Attorney Wood suggested that the costs of the case be charged up to the prisoner.

His Worship acted upon this suggestion and fixed the costs at $1.50.

HOW NERVE CELLS ARE BROKEN DOWN

Every man or woman who works with the brain uses up daily an enormous amount of nerve force. Millions of tiny nerve cells are broken down and must be replaced if mental and bodily efficiency is to be maintained.

If brain fag, headaches, sleeplessness or irritability set in, the evidence is plain that nature is not rebuilding as fast as work is breaking down. You cannot allow this depleting process to continue long if nervous prostration or paralysis is to be warded off.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you to get the balance on the other side of the account, so that each day will add a little to your stock of health and vitality. A man whose work is largely mechanical may keep going with health below par, but the brain worker mus thave a clear head or fall behind in the race. Restore the wasted nerve cells with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and know the joys of good health and success.

SIX MONTHS IN THE CENTRAL PRISON FOR LOCAL YOUTH

Local Young Man Convicted on Two Charges of Forgery---Admitted That He Was Sorry That He Had Wronged His Friends

"The sentence of the Court is that you be confined in the Central Prison for a period of six months; sentences to run concurrently."

With these words, was concluded the case of Reginald Winch, who was charged with having unlawfully and knowingly committed forgery; the charges being, that he did cash two checks, one at the Bank of Montreal, for the sum of $300, and the other to Mr. Nixon for $60, both checks bearing the forged signatures of M. G. Robinson, J. Chamberlain, and E. R. Winch, executrix of the Chamberlain Estate.

Crown Attorney Wood appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. F. D. Kerr for the defence.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to the charges and elected to be tried by Magistrate Dumble.

Chief Thompson, the first witness called, related the circumstances of the case, leading up to Winch's arrest, at Port Hope, and his subsequent return to Peterborough. The first intimation that he had of the affair was when Mr. Nixon had reported to him, that he had cashed a fifty-dollar check for the prisoner, which he believed to be a forgery. This information was followed by an investigation, which culminated in the arrest of the prisoner, three hours after the alleged offence had been committed, at Port Hope. When searched, some three hundred and eighteen dollars, in addition to some small change, a check drawn and signed for one hundred dollars, some old checks marked paid, and some blank checks were found upon his person. The checks were all signed similarly.

Intended Going West.

The prisoner had admitted his guilt to the Chief, and stated that he was sorry for his actions, concluding his remarks to the Chief by saying that he had intended going West and when he arrived there, he purposed writing back to his people here to the effect that when he was in a position to do so, he would return the money.

Detective Newhall was next examined. He gave a brief account of his trip to Port Hope in connection with Winch's arrest. "I am sorry for having wronged my best friends," said Winch upon accosting the Detective in the Port Hope jail.

Bank Manager Testifies.

The Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Mr. R. W. Travers, identified the check as produced in Court. In its passage through the Bank, it had been referred to him by the ledger-keeper, who stated that it was overdrawn to the extent of $60. Mr. Travers "initialed" it, and it was cashed in the regular way. Later, the ledger keeper became suspicious, and they subjected the check to further and more careful examination and discovered that the signatures had been done by means of tracing. Witness admitted that it was a fair imitation.

Mr. Kerr, counsel for the defence, asked the witness if the parties whose names had been forged, had settled with the bank.

Mr. Travers admitted they had, and further added that the Bank was not pressing the prosecution.

Address of the Counsel for Defence.

In summing up the case Mr. Kerr counsel for the defence, said:: "It seems that there has got to be a succession of young fools to succeed other young fools who have grown older. Besides doing what was wicked, the prisoner acted the part of a jackass."

"Like all wrong doers," interposed the Magistrate.

"The prisoner is only a young man," continued Mr. Kerr, "and a long term would probably serve to make a confirmed criminal out of him. As usual, the most innocent parties in the case feel the matter most keenly. The Bank has not lost, and the foolishness of the crime is illustrated in the fact that within three hours after the offence had been committed, the guilty party was in the strong arm of the law.

The principle of law is reformation where reformation is possible, and I would ask your Worship that if you cannot see your way clear to allow the prisoner to go on suspended sentence, that you impose a sentence confining the unfortunate young man to the common gaol, and not place him where he will be brought in contact with hardened criminals. He is young and still has a chance to make good. He has good friends behind him, whose prayers will follow him in any effort he may make towards reformation.

A Duty to Perform.

"I would rather that the responsibility of dealing with this case had not fallen upon me," began his Worship, in a brief resume of the case. "But I have a duty to perform that I owe to the public. I have no confidence in the young man's promise to reform. If he had only ordinary common sense which is no great virtue, he would have refrained from taking the course that he did. I dare not deal with the case as a light offence." His Worship then imposed sentence, as stated above.

MARRIED 60 YEARS AGO CELEBRATE DIAMOND WEDDING

Mr. And Mrs. Jas. Williamson of Pontypool Were Married Here Sixty Years Ago Yesterday---Sons Reside Here

A FAMILY GATHERING

Sixty years ago yesterday, on March 11, 1852, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Williamson were married in Peterborough, then only a small village.

Yesterday at Pontypool they celebrated their sixtieth anniversary of their wedding.

A diamond wedding is indeed a rare occasion and yesterday's event was naturally marked by many congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Williamson from their relatives. There was a big gathering of members of the family, four generations being represented among those present, and the day was very pleasantly spent in quiet rejoicing. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are in the best of health, and have been living together by themselves at their home at Pontypool. Mr. Williamson is 84, while his wife has seen 82 summers and winters.

There are seven children living and four of them were present at yesterday's function: Mrs. John McCarroll, Emily; Mr. E. Williamson, Lindsay; Mrs. McIvor, of Smith, and Mr. Geo. E. Williamson, of Peterborough. One son, Mr. H. H. Williamson of Peterborough, and two daughters, Mrs. J. A. McGhee of Alpena, Mich., and Mrs. Porter of Wallaceburg, were absent.

A large number of grand children and one grand grand daughter were among those present.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, in Peterborough, will unite in wishing them congratulations.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, manic rheumatic pains, and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

WARM TIME IN HOUSE

Is Expected To-day When the Manitoba Boundary Bill Will Come Up For Its Third Reading

SOME AMENDMENTS

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, MARCH 12.—This promises to be one of the most interesting days of the present session in the House of Commons. The proceedings will start off with the introduction of Hon. G. P. Graham as the member for South Renfrew, which will give the Liberals a chance to cheer. Then will come the third reading of the Manitoba boundary bill, which will probably occupy the whole day and perhaps a good part of the night. There will certainly be one Nationalist amendment, moved by Lamarche of Nicolet, demanding a guarantee of all the rights possessed by any minority in Keewatin, and there may be others when that is defeated, as it is sure to be. The attitude of the Quebec Liberals on this question is a riddle. They were in caucus all morning discussing what course they should follow and called in Sir Wilfrid a few minutes before one o'clock. How long the talking will last depends much from Speaker Sproule. His ruling last night that it was not proper to discuss the details of a bill on its third reading will, if repeated today, lead to a very vigorous protest from the Liberals. This is the first time that any speaker has attempted a closure on the third reading, and it is attempted again to-day there will be "wigs on the green."

SPRING OPENING AT ELLIOT'S

In the Millinery Department novelty and newness seem to be everywhere. Millinery skill is here shown in a very high degree of art.

The walking hats are unusually attractive this season, the two principal styles are the New York Derby and the Pommander sailors.

The Derby sailor is shown in black fancy straw, faced with green satin braid, smartly trimmed with black and white quills, giving the neat precise tailored effect.

This style will be one of the favourite walking hats for this season.

Another pretty street hat is the Pommander Sailor. This style is one of the reigning favourites in New York.

The Pommander Hat has a very pretty effect. Some are shown in a natural colour chip, trimmed with quilling of a scarlet velvet ribbon, with Persian wings. Others are shown with dinted crowns and narrow brims. These styles, of course, come in many variations and never two alike.

The psyche hat is the dress hat for the coming season. It has a dressiness and stylish appearance that well suits it for the full-dress function.

Fashionable New York has set its seal of approval upon this graceful creation.

The psyche hat is especially made to be worn with the new coiffure. It is very becoming with the new style of wearing the hair.

It would be impossible to attempt to describe all the new styles, so numerous are they. Better see them. Miss Noble will be glad to see you.

Ready-to-Wear Dresses.

The higher-class dresses are shown in foulard, soft silks, some of them are hand embroidered with silk, others with art patterns interwoven in the material.

Also beautiful creations of lace and chiffon with satin foundations, representing the latest New York and Parisian models. These pretty dresses appeal to the art loving and careful dressers.

New Suits are shown with the new side effects, the fine quality of the cloth and the pretty trimming make them very attractive.

The dress skirt also show the effect of the prevailing side trimming, among the new skirts the new envelope skirt is among the most popular styles.

Just next to the millinery room is the new white-wear and corset room. See the new styles in corsets.

An Increase For Operators

MONTREAL, MARCH 12. — The Grand Trunk announced this morning that all their telegraph operators are to receive an immediate increase in pay, including pay for Sunday work.

Mr. George Grange Re-appointed Deputy Fire Chief Last Night

Fire, Water and Light Committee Pass Resolutions Calling For Two Dismissals But The Men Had Already Sent In Their Resignations

Mr. George Grange was appointed Assistant Chief of the Fire Department by the Fire, Water and Light committee at a meeting held last night. A position of fireman, vacated by Mr. R. Leahy, is also to be filled.

All the members of the committee were present, with Ald. Johnston presiding. A letter received by the chairman from Mr. Bruce Menzies, who has been Acting Deputy Chief for some time brought up a discussion at which press representatives were not present and which led to a motion by Ald. Anderson, seconded by Mayor Bradburn, that Messrs. Menzies and Leahy be dismissed.

Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Brown, that the matter be left over for a time.

The resulting vote defeated the amendment and it is understood that there was a quite a wordy clash between two of the aldermen.

It was next moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Buller, that Mr. George Grange be appointed Assistant Chief.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Gordon, that a man be secured to take the place of Fireman Leahy.

Men Had Resigned.

However, the motion for dismissal was unnecessary. About half past eight or 8.45, Deputy Chief Menzies and Fireman Leahy tendered their resignations to Chief Howard, to take immediate effect. Thus, at the conclusion of the meeting at 10 o'clock, the motion for dismissal was found to be too late, for the men by resigning had made dismissal impossible.

It was explained that the letter referred to was written by Deputy Chief Menzies to Ald. Johnston, stating what Fireman Leahy had said came to him through several other sources from Chief Howard. It was shown that the substance of the letter was a fabrication and without foundation. The charges made by members of the committee are reports dto have been incompetency and insubordination.

ESTABLISH FIREMEN'S BENEFIT FUND WITH OBJECTS OUTLINED

Has Outgrown Its First Advancement And is Now Placed in The Hands of Committee---Founded to Aid The Firemen

The Firemen's Benefit Fund was defined and established by the Fire, Water and Light Committee on Monday night. The Fund has been in existence for a number of years, but owing to its development and for other reasons, it has been deemed advisable to place the whole matter in the hands of a Committee for future administration. The name decided upon is the Firemen's Benefit Fund, and the following rules shall govern it ,according to the decision of the committee.

The fund shall be administered by a Board, which shall be known as the Firemen's Benefit Fund Board, and shall be composed of the Mayor of the city, the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council and the Chief of the Fire Department.

The Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee shall be Chairman of this Board.

The Board shall meet when called by the Chairman, who shall call a meeting when there is business for it to do, or when requested to do so, by two members of the Board.

The City Treasurer shall be the Treasurer, and the City Clerk the Secretary of the Board.

All donations received by the firemen or by any officer of the Department, on account of the firemen shall be given the Treasurer, who shall deposit all moneys of the Fund in a special account in the Bank that has the City account.

Payments out of the Fund shall be made, and only be made, on the order of the Board, and all cheques shall be signed by the Chairman, and the Treasurer.

The fund may be used, on the order of the Board for special relief for any member, or the family of any member of the Fire Department, in case of sickness or death, for tokens of sympathy in such cases, and for providing special articles for the comfort, or recreation of the members of the Department which they may desire and which would not be properly payable out of city funds.

Prospects Are Brighter Than at Any Time Since The Miners Quit Work---Deadlock is Broken

THE MINIMUM WAGE

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 12.—Under the presidency of Premier Asquith representatives of striking coal miners and mine owners met this afternoon, thus evidencing the important fact that the deadlock has been broken and there is again some possibility of a settlement. It is understood that the Welsh and Scottish owners signified their intention at last of accepting the principal of the fixed minimum wages. This is the most important announcement since the negotiations. There is a distinct feeling of hopefulness in old London to-night.

Life Boats Missing

NEW YORK, MARCH 12.—The S. S. Columbia of the Anchor Line, from Glasgow, arrived here to-day, three days over due, with her upper cabin "S" navigating bridge and some life boats swept away in a storm which, the captain says, was the worst ever experienced.

BEAT UP GUARDS

Four Desperate Prisoners on Their way to Kingston Make a Bold Attempt for Liberty

OVERPOWERED OFFICERS

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, MARCH 12.—Four desperate prisoners, on their way from the Stoney Mountain penitentiary, Manitoba, to Kingston penitentiary, beat up their three guards, and but for the small miscalculation of time and the timely interference of the local police, would probably have killed Deputy Warden O'Leary and his assisting guards, and escaped from the eastern flyer as it left the Union station this morning. They were heavily manacled and shackled together, and to prevent accidents they were held over in the Toronto police cells over night and accompanied to the train this morning by two detectives and a constable of the local force, in addition to their three guards. The three local men got the party into the smoking car and got off just as the train pulled out of the station. The three desperadoes commenced to beat the guards with their iron shackles. They were big powerful fellows and soon knocked O'Leary and his two assistants out. There were only a few passengers in the car and they gave a screaming alarm in time for the three Toronto police to swing onto the last step of the car. They rushed forward and found the three guards helpless on the floor, with the prisoners beating them insensible. One of them, called "Cigarette" Brown, was partly out of his shackles and assisting his fellows to get out of theirs. With very little ceremony Constable Hunt and Detectives Miller and Sockett, the local men, jumped on the three desperadoes, and in a short time had them under control. O'Leary and his two assistants, one of them a Manitoba man, were badly exhausted in the struggle, and are suffering severely from loss of blood. The Toronto police remained on the train until Kingston was reached. Once freed of the shackles it would have been an easy matter for the prisoners to get weapons and control the train.

The four prisoners who nearly escaped are: Frank Kelly and Harry Jones, robbery and attempted murder, twelve years. They escaped from Iowa penitentiary and nearly escaped from Stoney Mountain; Arthur Brown who kidnapped Miss Gladys Price, school teacher, last September, eight years; and John Bonner, horse stealing, eight years, has escaped from gaol three times. They are being sent to Kingston, because it is a stronger institution than Stoney Mountain.

Last year the business of the "SALADA" Tea Co. increased 1,000,000 lbs. over the year previous. In the first seven weeks of this year their increase has averaged over 14,000 lbs. per week.

LABOUR MEN ARE ON TRIAL

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., MARCH 12.—All the defensive machinery in the knowledge of expert lawyers will be used in the trial of the forty-six prominent labour leaders who are slated to appear in the Federal courts to-day to plead to indictments charging them with the transportation and use of dynamite and nitro glycerine, in connection with the five year campaign against open shop, including one hundred explosions, and culminating in the Los Angeles Times explosion and the subsequent arrest, confession and imprisonment of the MacNamara brothers. It is expected the trials will last for months.

TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1912

HOW IT SEEMS.

The innocent and the guileless in the ways of political manipulation, may think that Mr. Bourassa, the apostle of Quebec Nationalism, means what he means in denouncing the Nationalist members of the Borden government. The Conservatives won their Quebec support by the favour and efforts of Mr. Bourassa, and Mr. Bourassa, so it seems, is posing in opposition to Messieurs Monk, Pelletier and Nantel, the Nationalist members in Mr .Borden's cabinet, so as to make it appear that Mr. Bordenis strongly resisting the demands of the Nationalist extremists, and hurrying them over to what he considers, better friends than himself, the Manitoba government. The incongrous combination of political elements in the Borden cabinet, demand a good deal of wiggling to strike a straight course.

LAW ENFORCEMENT.

A woman writes a letter which appears in another column, referring to the deplorable results that follow the operation of the "bar," which, under the best administered conditions, and the strictest compliance with the license law, is the cause of a great deal of intemperate drinking. But, when the law is outraged, and defied, the consequences are naturally more deplorable. A couple of charges is laid before the police court of selling liquor to Indians, contrary to law. When one reflects upon the exceedingly evil effects, moral and physical, which come to this class of citizens from strong drink, it is no surprise that the law specially protects them from the ravages of strong drink. The hotelkeeper, or drink dealer that breaks this law, is deserving of exemplary punishment. If in these cases that are to come before him to-morrow, the Magistrate finds the charges proven, he would not err, in the public interests, and in the interests of decent public opinion, in inflicting a severe penalty. Habitual breakers of the law, thanks to a conveniently blind inspection, should not expect much clemency when, by the activity of the police, offences charged, come to trial, especially if the offence is clearly proven. The law-abiding character of a community depends upon the effectiveness of the administration of the law; and it is a notorious scandal that the liquor law is not enforced in Peterborough with any reprehensible degree of severity.

LONG RANGE RIFLE RANGE.

In the Review of last night appears the following paragraph:

"The Minister of Militia will bring his estimates before parliament shortly. Rifle ranges will be provided for out of a lump sum for that purpose. The rifle range proposed at Peterborough, which has been approved by the Departmental officer of the permanent corps sent to Peterborough for that purpose, will be still further inspected by the Minister himself. In the event of its being possible to make all the arrangements following the opinions already secured theron, the opinion of the 57th Regiment committee appointed for that purpose will be made to the regiment, which it can then take into its consideration. The immense range of the new rifle makes the question of ranges a difficult and expensive one."

This paragraph was no doubt supplied by the representative of West Peterborough, who by the way uses the Review for serious, or other than wild-cat, politics, in which latter case another medium of airing his activities or his idiosyncracies is selected.

Under the late government a site for a rifle range was selected, convenient to the city and, it is understood, satisfactory to the local military authorities. The range selected was situated about two miles from the armouries, at the shortest practicable distance for a rifle range, from he city, and was excellently adapted, for its specific purposes and could be used by the public for other purposes, in the long intervals between, its official use, so to speak.

But new masters mean new laws. It would not do for the new powers that be, the local powers that be, to recognise as right anything done by the late government, no matter how well it might be adapted to serve military purposes and the convenience of our citizen soldiers. The exact location of the range proposed under the new regime is not of course openly known except to the Militia Department and those in its confidence, but it is pretty well understood that it is situated in the township of Douro, about two miles east of Nassau and consequently about five and a half miles from the armouries, and about six miles from the city area generally.

It is said that the range site selected by the late government was excellently adapted to the purpose, and acceptable to the military authorities, which by the way are the ones to be suited; but for some reason or cause—reason not being a usual element—or caprice or obstinancy, it is thought proper to select a new and comparatively inaccessible site which will compel rifle men to make a day's march before reaching the targets. It is hoped that the new site will please the 57th which will do most of the shooting on a new range. It is very important that the best facilities for rifle practice should be provided for our volunteers, for it goes without saying that the real value of a soldier comes from his ability to shoot straight, and it is far better economy to spend public money to supply facilities and inducements—to encourage rifle practice—than to spend it upon the fuss and feathers, frog and flourish department. The 57th has one of the best armouries in the country, and it deserves the best possible rifle ranges, easy accessibility being one of the prime conditions of the best rifle range.

A STRONG OPPOSITION.

The Guelph Mercury thus refers to the new leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature:

"The present leader of the Opposition is a comparatively young man, who has already won distinction at the bar of Ontario, and who has by some intuition adopted the strategy that proved so effective in the case of Mr. Blake. During the present session, short as it has been, he has stepped in ahead of Sir James Whitney with advanced popular propositions and has thus forced the hand of the premier and the government. This may be expected to go on during the remainder of the session and and from year to year.

"Already the personal and professional superiority of Mr. Rowell have been made manifest, and it will become more and more pronounced as the years come and go, for Sir James resembles the French Bourbons in that he forgets nothing and learns nothing. With Hon. A. G. MacKay for his right-hand man, Mr. Rowell should be able to make, during the present parliament, a fine record for himself and his party, and this cannot be without a serious effect on the fate of the Conservative party at the next election."

One evidence of the justice of this commendation is found in the fact that the new Liberal leader, to employ the vernacular of the day, makes Sir James Whitney "sit up." In the opening days of the Legislature Sir James was inclined to frown down Mr. Rowell, then to pooh-pooh him. Next he shows a tendecy to take Mr. Rowell, and what he stands for, respectfully. Sir James may not have liked to be stirred from his go-as-you-please pace, but at Mr. Rowell's initiative he has done some things he might not otherwise have done. Mr. Rowell's progressive ideas, his energy, his insight into things, have stimulated the government. An opposition, in the legislative or administrative sense, may not be able to do things, but it can, if alive and alert, keep the government moving. With Mr. Rowell and Mr. McKay and several other equally aggressive critics on the opposition side of the Legislature, a capable watch will be kept upon the actions of the government which, with its large majority and the temptation to assume a domineering attitude, will be a distinct advantage in the public interests. A strong government, if only numerically, will be all the stronger and better from a public point of view, of a strong opposition.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Among the causes assigned by Dr. Merchant for the inefficiency of the bi-lingual schools is irregularity of attendace on the part of the children. The Brantford Expositor asks how many more intimations does Dr. Pyne need to be given that the truancy laws of this province are a farce before taking steps to make them effective?

The Conservative Ottawa Journal says that "whatever be the explanation, whether relief from the onerous responsibilities of the premiership, or pleasure in watching the difficulties of his untried successors, or merely that defeat acted like a tonic, certain it is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier looks ten years younger and acts twenty years younger. His spirits are buoyant, almost boyish. That he may long be spared in such health and spirits will be the sincere wish of us all."

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY FOR SUPPLY OF TEACHERS

It is the duty of a Government to see that every child in, at least, older Ontario, is taught by a duly legalized teacher. Special provisions may be made, and are made, for the newly-settled parts of the Province, but that one-third and even a greater proportion of schools in different inspectorates are either without teachers of any kind at all, or are taught by teachers without any legal qualification, and that this condition of affairs should continue for years, is a serious situation.

It is not the urban schools in which this deficiency is felt, but in the rural sections. That this deficiency in the supply of teachers is due to the closing of the Model schools is now admitted by all, and the fact that the Government is about to re-establish these in some localities is the best proof of an admission of the mistake that it made in abolishing them.

Let us for a moment examine the equipment for teaching that is involved by comparing what is represented in the two certificates that are as nearly as possible on a par, the old Normal school certificate and the present one. To obtain a Normal school certificate before the abolition of the Model school, a candidate had to have (1) second-class non-professional certificate, (2) a three months' course in professional training in a Model school, (3) three years' experience in actual teaching, and (4) a professional Normal school certificate.

Now, what are the present conditions? To get the same certificate, all that is required is (1) a Normal entrance certificate, which is not better, to say the least of it, than the old second-class, and, (2) the Normal school course. That is, before the abolition of the Model schools, a teacher had to have, in addition to present requirements, (1) a three months' course in a Model School, when he practically learned methods of teaching under an experienced teacher, and (2) a three years' probation in teaching. This accounts for the deterioration of our rural schools. The three years' experience in a rural school was a splendid training in practical work before entrance to Normal school. Anyone can see what advantage a teacher trained under the old system had over one under the one at present in vogue. Every experienced teacher admits this.

And, undoubtedly, the dearth of teachers in the Public Schools will be followed by a dearth in the High schools, if the Education Department puts into force its threatened legislation of requiring a year's teaching in Ontario from the graduates of the Normal College before granting their certificates. This regulation is threatened to prevent the exodus of teachers to the West. What would we think of Toronto University withholding a degree in Arts for a year from a student after graduation to keep him in Ontario? Does the Senate, when it grants the degree, enquire whether the student is going to remain in Ontario or not? The cases are exactly on a par. If some brilliant students go to the United States and distinguish themselves, all right-thinking people rejoice, and feel a pride in such success.

HOT SHOT FROM THE COAST.

(Toronto Star)

In a recent issue of the Vancouver Sunset the editor of that journal penned a broadside in criticism of a message sent to Ulster by the Orangemen of Vancouver. The message was written in the grandiloquent language seldom used in these days outside the sacred precincts of a secret society.

Among the statements made in the cable occurred this passage: "Canada taught the priestly machine-manipulators a lesson last September, and, if necessary, will give the hordes of Jesuits another and a more effective lesson."

Just how the defeat of reciprocity was a blow to the Jesuits is not made clear in the cable sent to Ulster by the Orangemen of Vancouver. But no doubt the brethren in Ulster will accept the cable as evidence of a wonderful victory achieved over Rome and her minions in this country.

The editor of the Sunset attacks these fraudulent representations without gloves. "The writer of this article," he says, "is an Orangeman, he comes of Orange stock of many generations before him in Ireland, and in Canada, but he has never yet found his political philosophy to lead him into the company with which the Orange body of Canada now finds itself in political alliance." He refers to the Borden Cabinet, which, at one and the same moment, is violently Orange and violently Nationalist.

MR. BORDEN'S POLICY.

(Calgary Albertan.)

The Calgary Herald is quite enthusiastic about Mr. Borden's naval policy and the fact that the premier has not announced any of the details of that programme does not dampen its ardour or prevent it carolling one high, clear note in favour of the thing, whatever it may be. That shows loyalty to party, but it is doubtful whether such criticism is quite convincing.

The Herald believes that Mr. Borden should be given time to frame a policy. But some few years ago he had a policy inspired by what he believed to be an emergency which existed at that time. He declared for the same policy right up until September [illegible] and that emergency became more threatening as time progressed. That emergency reached the climax during the recent election and Mr. Borden knew then what he intended to do. There was nothing but the cash contribution.

He used that policy to defeat the Laurier government in Ontario. But as soon as Mr. Borden comes to office, the emergency it seems, suddenly loses its threatening aspect. Mr. Borden forgets about his cash contribution, throws off his old policy and takes on the policy of the Nationalist.

In the matter of the naval policy, the Nationalists are in control. Mr. Borden promised one thing when out of office and goes to the other extreme when he assumes office. He got into office to some extent because he had a certain naval programme. He has cast that aside and has taken a course which doubtless will mean that there will be neither Canadian navy nor a cash contribution.

IS THE BOLT GENUINE?

(Montreal Herald.)

It is unfortunate for Mr. Sevigny, Mr. Lamarche, and the other bolters that there should be a very marked degree of cynicism about all the reports which come out of Ottawa concerning their little filibuster. On its face it looks all right. They seem to have broken with the Government, and whether they like it or not their act will cause the Borden Cabinet to lose influence in Quebec. It will take a great deal more than First Aid measures to revive either Mr. Monk or Mr. Pelletier. But there does appear to be a good deal of doubt whether the bolt of the five was not tolerated, was not permitted, was not even arranged. Those who remember Mr. Bourassa's bolt in 1905, find in the Sevigny-Lamarche bolt of to-day a very milk and waterish imitation. There is so little fight in it that the only real fighting is still that done by Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne. The incident has been seized upon with much eagerness by supporters of the Borden Cabinet, who are smothering it with praise for holding out against Mr. Bourassa's dictation, until it almost looks as though the bolt was part of a plan, worthy of the practical brain of Mr. Rogers, to produce this impression, and calculated, at the same time, to make some little difficulty for the Liberals, both from Ontario and from Quebec. It would be better, having regard for the honour of public life, if the revolt were sincere if it were made with all the penalties in view which follow upon the breach of party allegiance, and if the bolters were determined to continue their opposition to the party whose action they condemn. Unfortunately, hardly anybody expects to see them punished for their present recalcitrancy, or to see them desert the Ministers they have discredited by their speeches and condemned by their acts.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Grey and Faded Hair to Its Natural Colour

It is easier to preserve the colour of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and colour restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, colour and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, colour and beauty, and makes it grow.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, MARCH 7.—Misses Jessie and Bertha Nicholls spent Sunday at their home here.

Miss Winnie Beatty and Miss Edith Nugent are in Toronto this week attending the millinery openings.

Miss Beech, of Peterborough Normal School, was the guest of Miss Jessie Nicholls over the week-end.

Mrs. Staples, of Lindsay, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Wm. Earle.

Mr. H. M. Cawker, of Winnipeg, Man., spent a few days at the Parsonage last week.

Several Omemee young people were guests at an enjoyable gathering at the home of Miss Valera Laidley, Janetville, last Friday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Irvine, of Lindsay, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marie.

The Misses Townsend, of Burnt River, spent the week-end with Miss Jessie Nicholls.

County Judge McMillan, of Lindsay, held division court in town on Monday morning.

Property is booming in Mt. Pleasant. One of our families is moving out to that village this week.

The death occurred in Omemee on Saturday afternoon of Mrs. Thos. Kennedy, Sturgeon st. The deceased had only been ill for about a week, and her death came as a shock to the village and community. She was seventy-nine years of age, and had been a resident of Omemee for many years. Two sons, Thos. R. and Wm. J., of Peterborough, and one daughter, Mrs. Grigg, of Renfrew, mourn the loss of a beloved mother. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, and interment was made at Emily Cemetery. Rev. R. Burns, pastor of the Methodist Church, of which the late Mrs. Kennedy was an honoured member, conducted the services.

Mr. Victor Johnson, of Lindsay, was in town last week.

Mr. Geo. Balfour, of Lindsay, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Kennedy last Monday.

A very successful basket social was held last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Mahood, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. (Dr.) Irvine, of Lindsay, sang a solo in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening, which was greatly appreciated by the large congregation present. Ballots for voting on Church union were distributed at both services.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

EATON'S ARE HOPELESSLY OUTCLASSED BY VICS ARE BEATEN BY 16 TO 1

WINNIPEG, MARCH 11. — (Special.)—In a match that started off amid the greatest excitement and deteriorated into an utter rout, the Winnipeg Victorias, holders of the Allan Cup, to-night made good their claim to the retention of the silverware by defeating the Eatons of Toronto by a score of 6 to 1 and won the round by 24 to 5. The half time score was 4 to 0, and up to that time Eatons did not have a really good chance to score, while the Vics., with all the play in their favour, could not get in on Bricker, who was on the job with a vengeance. In the second half the visitors made a stand for a few minutes, but once the Vics. regained their stride it was nothing but rushes and shots and Bricker's marvellous work in the flags.

In Saturday night's game the visitors showed speed that was equal to that of the champions, but the locals were evidently stiffened up as a result of their gruelling match against Calgary on Thursday and did not show the marvellous skating that has marked their work all year. In the contest to-night the men showed the effects of the Sunday rest and the careful handling received as from the initial face-off the locals skated like fiends. Rankin, Laflamme and Meeking who in the first game skated from end to end without any hindrance, were held in their tracks for the most part, and when they did get away it was only to be overhauled at centre ice by Dion, Caldwell, Baker and Bawlf. Never have the locals shown such speed, and that they kept up to the very end testifies to the stamina of the players.

Eatons and their friends were completely nonplussed by the manner in which Ontario's finest went down to defeat before western prowess. The visitors had no excuse to offer and took their defeat good-naturedly. It almost looked, on the play, as if the Vics. had been holding back on Saturday on account of the manner in which they to-night made the visitors look like juvenile hockeyists. The match was played under O. H. A. rules that favoured the visitors, and with an O.H.A. referee to see that the regulations were lived up to.

The challengers went into the play with every confidence that they would cut down the four-goal margin obtained against them in the opening game. For a few minutes Eatons more than held their own, but it was a flash in the pan and it was not very long before the locals were beating a tattoo on the pads worn by Bricker .Vics. were shooting in their poorest form, Baker and Bawlf missing over half a dozen chances each before the half ended. The locals were satisfied at half time with their eight goal lead on the series, but they could not hold themselves in check, and Bricker probably saved more goals than he did in half of the games he played in the Ontario series.

The crowning humiliation of the match was inflicted near the middle of the second half, when "Bas" Baker, in goal, stopped a shot, skated up the ice, passed every opponent, and slid the puck to Dion who scored. The crowd, jubilant over the retention of the cup, seized on this play, and nearly went wild in its enthusiasm. The tallying of goals became so rapid in the end that Laflamme and Hyland laughed outright when their best efforts were nipped in the bud.

Hyland was the only player outside of the brilliant Bricker who could make any headway against the conquering Vics. Hyland was dangerous and had he shot well might have had several more goals.

Caldwell as a referee was a great hit with the crowd. He was the best seen here this year. Regina Capitals will likely play a sudden-death game here Wednesday night for the trophy.

In the second half Rankin went up to rover and Laflamme went to point, but the change made little difference. The teams were banqueted at the Grange after the match.

"DUBBIE" SHEA, Who Will Get a Chance to Make Good With the Peterborough Canadian League Team This Season.

catcher, a good hitter and fast on the base paths, and might be useful as a second receiver for Manager Templin, who has already secured the services of a veteran backstop, who will do most of the work behind the bat. Shea will be given a chance to make good with Peterborough. He would certainly work his head off to land a berth here.

President Fitzgerald of the Canadian League, has announced the appointment of the following umpires:

Wm. Pearson, Toronto.
Emil Brichter, Bay City, Mich.
C. J. Johnston, Buffalo
Stanley Yerkes, New York city.

Word has been received here from Toronto that the Ontario Legislature has granted a charter to-day to the Peterborough Baseball Club, Limited, which is capitalized at $10,000.

Messrs. W. S. Davidson, D. McCabe, W. McIlroy and Manager Templin of the local ball club, left on the 4.20 C.P.R. train this afternoon for Hamilton, where they will attend the schedule meeting of the Canadian League to-morrow afternoon.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Adamson and Dobbin's team defeated Parker's Dye Works in a hard fought game at the Brock street rink last night by 5 goals to 2.

The Brinton Carpet Company defeated the Lock Works seven in an interesting game at Brock Street rink last night by 7 goals to 4, leading at half time by 2 to 1. It was the 'steenth defeat of the season for the Simcoe street establishment, who have yet to win a game in two years years trying. The Brinton team would like a game with the clerks of the Mercantile League

Jack Thirnbeck's Midgets, challengers for the Graham-Clarke Cup, will make their first appearance of the season to-night when they will clash with the Northern Lights in an exhibition game at the Brock street rink. The Midgets will line up as follows:

Goal—Walker.
Point—Primeau.
Cover—Callaghan.
Rover—Barrie.
Centre—Halpin.
Right wing—White.
M. Kenneally will referee.

Shamrock Social on Friday evening March 15th, under auspices Ladies' Aid of George St. Methodist Church. Excellent programme and refreshments. Admission 25c. t-t

Curling Notes

Peterborough lost by seven shots, in the game with Keene, this morning. The match was played on local iee, with three rinks aside, and was productive of some good curling.

Two rinks went to Claremount today, where they will engage in a friendly game with the Claremount curlers.

The following skips have entered the fourth round of the Consolation event: Messrs. Read, Wightman, Fitzgerald, Morrow, Foote, Renwick, Brightman.

The Sailor Boy squad will play for the chinaware to-night.

BASEBALL

"Dubbie" Shea, who played with the Peterborough Midland League team some years ago and was a prime favourite with Peterborough fans, has been strongly recommended to Manager Templin of the Petes by local followers of the game. Shea was with Brantford last year but could not pull with Manager Kane. He is a classy

Joe. West of Toronto, winner of the National Bowling Association's individual championship last year. He failed to make as good a showing at the Canadian Bowling tournament just closed at Toronto.

BEST AMATEUR TEAM IN THE WORLD ARE VICTORIAS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, MARCH 12.—Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O.H.A., writing in the Toronto Star to-day says: After their remarkable showing in the Allan Cup series is completed, when Calgary and Eaton teams were snowed under by a far superior team, the Winnipeg Victorias must be acknowledged as the best amateur hockey team in the world. Locally, the collapse of the O.H.A. champions in last night's game, came as a bolt from the blue. After their good showing on Saturday night under western rules it was firmly believed here that they would win out under the O.H.A. code. The Victorias clearly demonstrated their superiority and are entitled to all the honour that goes with the trophy.

PETERBORO BOY INVOLVED IN BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL

PRINCE ALBERT, MARCH 12 — Real estate is very active in Prince Albert, at present, owing to the many lines of railways to be completed into the city this year and particularly the line from here to Hudson Bay. A big sale went through to-day, when a syndicate composed of local men and outsiders purchased for $50,000 the northwest corner of First avenue east, and Eleventh street from W. B. Goodfellow. The property has a frontage of 132 feet on First avenue east and 144.8 feet on Eleventh street. The deal was put through by S. & W. R. McLeod.

Mr. Goodfellow bought this property about thirty years ago and is reported to have paid somewhere about $100 for it. This serves to again illustrate the fortunes that are being made in real estate almost daily in Western Canada.

Mr. Goodfellow was originally a Peterborough boy, a carpenter, who learned his trade with Mr. Thos. McKee.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The Fire Brigade received a telephone call at 11.15 this morning, to the home of Mr. Wm. Cleary, 201 Stewart street. This was a chimney fire. No damage.

RICHARD CARLE IN A NEW MUSICAL COMEDY

At last we are to have the popular agitator of laughs, Richard (Himself) Carle with us in "Jumping Jupiter" at "The Grand" next Tuesday evening, March 19th.

Perhaps none of the funny men of the stage are more cherished by playgoers than this eccentric man of the elongated and elastic physique, comically lachrymose voice and almost always tentative manner. Certainly no other funster even remotely approached Carle's method of putting laughs over the footlights, whether with a song, a dance or quip or a quirk.

Report has it that "Jumping Jupiter" will rank in its laugh values with the former stellar mediums of this comedian and that his supporting company surpasses in quality any of his former rosters. In Boston, where Carle has just finished a two months' run, it was the greatest success of the season. Mr. Carle elaborated "Jumping Jupiter" from a well known farce by Sydney Rosenfeld, and his skill in fitting himself with parts that best exploit his own characteristic talents is so well known as to guarantee that he will be seen at his best in "Jumping Jupiter." At the same time he has generously provided all his associates with numerous opportunities to shine at their best.

Karl Hoschna, composer of "Madame Sherry" has fitted "Jumping Jupiter" with an equipment of musical numbers that do credit to his melodic invention as well as his reputation as a composer of popular music. The big song hit of the show is "Little Girl I Love You.' This noted company is headed by Edna Wallace Hopper (specially engaged) who will be seen in the best role that has fallen to her lot since "Floradora."

THE MODERN HEAD DRESS

Causes Baldness. — We Cannot Change the Head Dress, but We Can Prevent Baldness.

Up to the time we began to civilize him a bald headed Indian was a thing unknown. Wearing nothing on his head except the covering furnished by nature and being a stranger to the use of a hair brush, especially the public one, the scalp and hair had plenty of ventilation, much sunlight, and, hence, a condition favourable to a luxuriant growth of hair existed at all times.

It was the adoption of air and light excluding head gears and artificial head decorations generally, together with the occasional use of a community hair brush, which gave the dandruff germ its opportunity. Since this parasite has multiplied to an alarming degree until now there is hardly a person who is not troubled more or less with dandruff and falling hair.

Many, to be sure, have passed the worrying stage. Having become chronically bald they realize that nothing is capable of producing natural hair for them. Let these be a warning to all who are experiencing the significant annoyance of dandruff and falling hair.

Dandruff, which is due to a germ, and falling hair can both be overcome by the regular use of Newbro's Herpicide.

This wonderful scalp remedy kills the vicious germ which causes dandruff, cleanses the scalp and stops the hair from coming out. The destruction of the germ permits the hair to grow naturally and luxuriantly as nature intends.

Herpicide makes the hair bright, snappy, light and fluffy.

One dollar size bottles guaranteed. For sale at all drug stores.

Send 10c in stamps or silver for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

ICE BOATS ARE LOST

Examiner Special:

ERIE, PA., MARCH 12.—It is feared that two ice boats, each with a crew of four men, have been lost in Lake Erie. They left Cleveland yesterday morning at 11 o'clock in an attempt to make Erie in record-breaking time and nothing has been heard of them since they passed Connaut, Ohio. It is thought they raced into one of the open spots in the ice. Searching parties are being organized here.

Church Union At St. Andrew's

Although the actual voting returns of St. Andrew's congregation in regard to church union, are not yet known, there is a majority in favour of the movement in the voting of the elders, the adherents and the members.

A presbytery meeting is being held this afternoon and the result of the polling will be announced to-morrow.

'Agricultural Cars

Not only the farmers, but citizens, would have found much to interest them in the "Better Farming Special" train, sent out by the Department of Agriculture to show the farmers between Windsor and Montreal what is being accomplished in the improving of farming methods today.

Those who are interested in pure milk would have seen the effects of the bacteria from a single fly in sterilized milk, also the effects of a piece of straw, a hair, and other foreign matter that should ever be kept from the milk supply. The sterilized milk will remain in good condition for a year, while the other samples, in each case, was very noticeably affected.

The city man would have seen the tuberculous nodules or lumps on the inner side of a cow's ribs, or the same on other parts of its internal organs. Poultry fanciers would have been shown the lungs of a chicken badly marked with tubercular spots. A man at Manvers, this morning, told the expert in charge of the exhibit that last year sixty of his hens died and he was at a total loss to explain the cause. He opened one of the dead fowl and the only unusual indications noticeable were numerous white spots o the lungs. The farmer was shown the exhibit and stated that the lungs of his hens were identical in appearance only not so badly spotted. The farmer's sixty hens had dropped dead, one after the other with tuberculosis and he did not know what disease they had.

The train consisted of nine cars and was supplied by the C.P.R. with the Industrial Commissioner of the company, Mr. H. P. Timmerman, in charge. The exhibits were provided by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The trip is from Windsor to Montreal and over several branch lines .It has extended through the past three weeks, and 1000 farmers have visited the cars daily.

Four cars are devoted to exhibits that ar epractical and easy to understand. The subjects dealt with are, poultry, seed and grain, the use of cement on the farm, tile drainage, care of fruit, fruit packing and spraying, the care of bees, extracting honey, fertilizers and a large number of other subjects. There are three day coaches in which thirty-five minute lectures are given. In charge of each department is an expert, and the whole might be described as a miniature agricultural college on wheels. Only two hours are spent at each place, however, and it is next to impossible to dwell at length on the subjects. The attendance of farmers was fairly good Mr. George A. Publow, Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes, was in charge of the exhibits.

"Mercury Shoes." Fashion's latest fad is the Mercury shoes, made by fixing Ostrich tips on the leather. This fantastic fad also rules that no feathers are to be worn on hats.

TIT-BITS

HOLD ON BOYS

Hold on to virtue; it is above all price to you in all times and places.

Hold on to your good character, for it is and ever will be your best wealth.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to strike, steal or do any improper act.

Hold on to the truth, for it will serve you well and do you good throughout eternity.

Hold on to your good name at all times, for it is much more valuable to you than gold.

Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited or imposed upon.

Hold on to God. He is the best treasure of earth and heaven.

Hold on to innocence with a tighter grip than you hold on to life.—Selected.

FRIENDSHIPS.

Try to form friendships with people of brains and cheerful souls. You will be tremendously benefited.

Learn to enrich and embellish your life with study and good deeds and you will be surprised at the splendid harvest of happiness and contentment that will be yours.

Be on the look-out for the frank face, the honest hand, and the clear eye of the friend who is worth while. —Chicago Tribune.

Never indulge in family quarrels in the presence of the cook. It distracts her attention from her work.

Always keep in your pantry a pound or two of ten-cent coffee, selected especially for the use of neighbours.

Try to avoid the useless habit of nodding and smiling when talking through the telephone to a friend. Reflect a moment—the friend does not see you.

Beans may be baked by putting them in a pot and placing the pot just inside the furnace door before retiring for the night. If the beans are cooked too much they can be used for fuel.

Every house should have a large front porch for the convenience of the boy who delivers the Sunday papers.

AN OFFSIDE PLAY

Edgar M. Church, the famous football veteran of Philadelphia, was talking at Franklin Field about football's charm.

"When I was playing in '91's class games," said he, "there was a '91 chap who lost a dear relative. The funeral took place the day we played '92, and at the game's end, as I was crossing over to the college the funeral procession glided slowly past.

"All of a sudden a head was thrust out of one of the mourning coaches and a voice said:

"'Have we licked 'em, Churchy?'

"'Yes,' said I.

"'Hurrah!' shouted my classmate, and drew in his head again, and drove on sorrowing."—Philadelphia Times.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets Quickly Put Disordered Stomachs Right

It's a revelation to the chronic dyspeptic to feel no discomfort after a hearty meal, when that meal is followed by one Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet. He is hardly prepared for the almost magic relief which the tablet gives him from the various discomforts to which he is accustomed after eating.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets are for stomachs that are sour—relieve stomachs that feel as if a stone had been swallowed—stop heartburn—and give the needed assistance to stomachs that are weakened.

Containing in themselves the active principle needed for digesting every kind of food, Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets enable even the weakest stomachs to get the good out of what is eaten, preventing the accumulation of undigested food and gas. With a little help for a while, the digestive organs recover their strength, do their work properly, and your troubles are over.

Don't go on suffering! Get a 50c. box of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets from your druggist today. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 147

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IN one of Robert Louis Stevenson's books, a young man receives this advise from a friend who has seen something of the world: "Be soople, Davie in all things immaterial."

With the end of Lent, the most prolific wedding season of the year will commence. How I wish that every twain who are to become one this spring would take the above advice for their matrimonial motto, and honestly resolve on their wedding day to try to be "soople in all things immaterial."

I wish also that they might be able to get the right point of view on what is material and what is not. So many things are immaterial that we fume and fret and worry ourselves about. And so many things are vital that we seem to hold very lightly.

For instance, any third party will certainly admit that it is comparatively immaterial whether that call on which Mrs. Newlywed's heart is set is made Friday evening, or put off until the next week in deference to a smoker which Mr. Newlywed particularly wishes to attend.. But the most concerned do not seem to be able to look at this mater as immaterial. And no one will deny that the peace and harmony of the home are most vital in the lives of these young folks. And yet, over that immaterial point, they lightly soil and tarnish these precious and vital things.

In a witty little volume by one of the modern women writers, a young wife is pictured as inquiring of her husband, who has just come from their home to the summer place where she is stopping, if he brought down a particular belt which she has repeatedly charged him not to fail to bring. Of course, he has brought the wrong belt and for a moment she is ready to scold. Then the following dialogue takes place:

"Look here, could you use some chocolate nougat, instead of the belt? Because I have got that.'

"'Of course I could, Tommy, dear, and it doesn't make much difference, anyway. Where's the nougat?'

"Mr. Wilbour struck an attitude.

"'And there are still people who wonder why I married you!' he exclaimed. 'Toots, you're a brick.'"

If more women were like that, fewer men would be asking themselves why they ever married. Furthermore, when a woman like that wants something which is really material, she usually gets it.

Nor is this preachment aimed chiefly at the feminine sex. Quite to the contrary. "Be soople in all things immaterial," is an admonition which men need as much if not more, than women.

To be sure, as I can feel some logical person thinking, both do not need to be soople all the time. But there is little danger of that.

A very happy couple, who seem to grow more devoted every year of their married life, once told me that they made a resolution on their wedding day that each would give up more than half the time. If any two people will make a resolution to be soople more than half the time, and will really try, despite failures and discouragements, to live up to that, they will be practically sure of a happy married life.

"A WOMAN" SAYS THE SALE OF LIQUOR IS INCREASING

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It seems to me that the sale of liquor in Peterborough must be increasing to a very considerable extent. On Saturday, while I was walking along Hunter street and on Simcoe street, I met more men under the influence of liquor than I have met in Peterborough in many a long day. How can it be accounted for? Is the population becoming more addicted to drink, or how does it come about? It is too bad to see so much distress in many homes, as there exists, while so much is being expended upon drink. I asked this question of a gentleman to-day, and, while not accounting for my particular experience on Saturday, he stated that if I would only visit three or four of the hotels on any pay night of any of the different manufacturing establishments, I would find the bars not only lined the full length of the counter, but two or three deep.

Is there any way by which the mothers and children and families of those who are spending their livelihood can be protected? I should think that the sober second thought of the community would put an end to the evil.

Yours truly,
"A Woman."

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98% of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver and that this condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Rexall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant, and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and aid in producing a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nauseau, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea, or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons, or old folks. Three sizes, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

INTERESTING FACTS GLEANED AT THE DAIRY MEETINGS

Prospects Are Bright For The Extension of Dairy Work Along Scientific Lines in The County of Peterboro—Officers Elected at The Meetings.

The meetings which were held during the past few days in connection with the cow testing movement, at Trewern, Peterborough and Norwood, resulted in considerable interest being shown in this work, which is having a decided effect in increasing the yield of milk and fat of the dairy herds in the Peterborough section. As an instance of this it was shown by returns submitted by representatives of the Department of Agriculture who conduct the cow testing work, that the yield of some 20 herds whose owners have followed up record work for more than two years have now reached the splendid average of 6,137 lbs. milk, and 212 lbs. fat per cow. These herds are made up of Durhams, Holsteins, Ayrshires and Jerseys, and show the result of careful selection of the male and female in developing a good milking strain. In comparison with this we find that in the returns of 75 herds which have been recorded in cow census work in the Peterborough section durig the past winter, the average is only 4,400 lbs. of milk per cow—a difference of 1,737 lbs. and if we eliminate the herds in the testing associations this average is reduced to 3,800 lbs. per cow, a difference of 2,337 lbs. per cow, which is, no doubt, largely due to the information obtained by farmers keeping records of individual cow's yield.

The prospects seem very bright for an extension along this line of work in the Peterborough section and the Department of Agriculture has decided to continue the services of Mr. A. L. Andress as Recorder, and he will be pleased to supply information to farmers wishing to take up the cow testing work.

Officers of the different associations were elected, as follows:

Trewern—President, J. R. Mann; Vice-Pres., J. Donaldson; Committee, L. Fowler, Elmer Milburn, Allan Mann.

Shearer—Pres., Hugh Fife; Vice-Pres., W. J. Bullock; committee, Harold Hall, Harry Evans, W. E. Wood.

Peterborough—Pres., S. Matchett; Vice-Pres., R. B. Jackson; committee, R. A. Hardbridge, Fred Campbell, W. R. Shields.

Norwood—Pres., F. J. Greenbank, Vice-Pres., H. A. Thistlewaite; committee, Louis Brown, J. F. Elliott, John Marks.

HER MESSAGE TO SISTER WOMEN

FOUND RELIEF AND CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mrs. Jacob McLean Could Not Lie Down Without Suffering Agony Till She Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

GRINDSTONE ISLAND, Magdalen Islands, Que., March 11.—(Special.)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work for the suffering women of Canada, can no longer be denied. Every corner of the Dominion furnishes some noble woman who is willing to speak out and tell her suffering sisters where they can find relief, and Mrs. Jacob McLean, of this place, is one of them.

"I am fifty-six years old," Mrs. McLean states, "and at that critical time of life that comes to every woman.

"I had Rheumatism, Diabetes, and Pain in my limbs so I could not lie down without suffering the greatest agony. I found relief in two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Nine out of ten of the suffering women of Canada will find that the cause of their sufferings is diseased kidneys. If they cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills their sufferings will cease, and they will find health and energy that will make them new women. Ask your neighbours.

THE BOY SCOUTS' SUMMER CAMP

About one hundred and fifteen boy scouts have signified their willingness to participate in the summer camp which Mr. C. E. Jamieson of the local corps proposes to hold this summer. The plans have already been forwarded to the Militia Department at Kingston and until they see fit to sanction the movement, no further steps can be taken by the local authorities to further promulgate the proposition.

The camp will in all probability take the form of a county camp. That is ,patrols from outlying towns such as Norwood, Havelock, etc., will be eligible for representation in the camp Mr. Stubbs has already received a communication from a certain party, offering a suitable site for the camp. It is within ready access of Peterborough and possesses the necessary facilities for the purpose. However, no action will be taken until the militia department at Kingston have been heard from.

It is proposed to conduct the camp for a period of six days, and will be along lines similar to the annual camp conducted by the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Jamieson announced himself to the Examiner as being ready and willing to assume responsibility for the fire and good behaviour of the squad providing that he is given absolute management. Otherwise he would prefer to refrain from taking any part in the movement.

DAIRY MEETINGS FOR NEXT WEEK

The annual convention of the Peterborough Cheese and Butter Makers' Association, which will be held in the City Council Chamber on Wednesday, March 20th, at 1.30 p.m., promises to be one of the largest ever held by the Association, as Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for the Eastern Province, will be present ,and deliver an address. Mr. Publow visited the chief dairy centres of Great Britain last summer, so is in a position to give a great deal of valuable information to the makers of this section.

The annual meeting of the Cheese Board will be held on the same day at 10.30 a.m., in the Bank of Montreal Chambers.

PETERBORO'S POPULATION IS GROWING

In Spite of The Rush to The West—Winter is Still Here And so Are The Immigrants Who Are Arriving Daily

MANY NEW ARRIVALS

Despite the large migration of people from this city to the West, the effect on the population is being somewhat counteracted by the small parties of immigrants, who are arriving daily. During the past two weeks, about fifty new arrivals have taken up their abode within the city, while the passing of another two weeks will reveal a still larger showing.

Emigration Season Opens Briskly.

Montreal returns show that Canada's population has been increased by over 3,000 adults since Saturday last—enough to populate a good-sized town. They are mostly immigrants from Great Britain, and arrived in the steamships Empress of Britain, Grampian and Lituania. This is the largest number of immigrants which has arrived this year, and it marks the opening of the real immigration season, as nearly all the lines coming to Canada are booked to their limit up till the middle of June.

A cablegram received at the office of the Allan line in Montreal reports the sailing of the Turbine "Virginian" form Liverpool March 1st, with 1,498 passengers—58 first, 468 second, and 972 third class.

Passengers Have a Rough Voyage.

The heaviest snow-storm of the winter swept over the Province of Nova Scotia yesterday. The Allan steamer Virginian arrived at Halifax after a very rough passage. A terrific sea smashed through the saloon windows and did considerable damage.

Her first-class passengers left by special, early in the morning, escaping the snowstorm, but the immigrants, of whom there were 1.569, left on three trains this afternoon, and are having a hard time. The first train is stuck in No. 3 cutting in the Folly Mountains, beyond Truro, and a snowplow that was sent out ahead is lost. So far as the train despatching department can learn, the other two immigrant trains are freed. The drifts north of Truro are the worst in many years.

A numbe of these are booked for Peterborough and their arrival is hourly looked for.

Immigrants Cost $8.00 Each.

In the past ten years the Canadian Government spent on immigration the sum of $8,402,598, varying from $499,000 in 1901 to $1,079,129 in 1911. The total amount spent in the British Isles in the promotion of immigration was $1,768,136.

The total immigration in the ten years was 1,715,326, and the distribution by provinces was as follows: Maritime Provinces, 71,358; Quebec, 248,604; Ontario, 367,690; Manitoba, 298,389; Saskatchewan and Alberta, 502,709; British Columbia, 185,959.

Looking For Gus Kohn

Tobacco Manufacturers Reported Unable to Locate Former Wholesaler Not at Address Designated

SECURED $6000 CREDIT

Certain manufacturers of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes are trying to locate Gus. Kohn, who opened a wholesale tobacco store four or five months ago on George street, south of Charlotte street. It is understood that as a tobacco broker he secured credit to the extent of about $6,000, and that settlement for this amount has not yet been made. He left Peterborough around the 1st of February and left as a temporary address the General Delivery, Toronto. However, it is stated that mail addressed to him there has not been called for. It is asserted that while Mr. Kohn did not do much of a local business he sold considerable stock outside of the city. In this regard it is also asserted that from the prices quoted, a small margin of profit was accepted. An effort is being made to try to locate Mr. Kohn by those who are financially interested.

"USE & OCCUPANCY" INSURANCE

A number of merchants were burned out in London last November. Their stocks were insured but they lost their Christmas trade and the profits they would otherwise have made. They might have insured against such loss by taking out a "Use & Occupancy" policy in the Liverpool & London & Globe. Have you such a policy? If not enquire from one of the Company's agents and secure proper protection. Agent, W. H. Hill.

NEW HOTEL FOR NORWOOD.

Several Local Men Are Said to be Interested in the Matter.

That Norwood will shortly be favoured with a new hostelry is the information that has just leaked out relative to a movement which is on foot towards the promulgation of the plans for the erection of a suitable building. It is understood that a number of local men are interesting themselves in the financing of the project, and pending a real estate transaction which is about to be consummated, nothing definite is known.

As already announced in these columns, Mr. D. N. King of this city, has leased the Norwood House with a view of taking possession within a few weeks. He is at present having the place remodelled and expects to have the mready for occupation on the 1st of April.

MISSIONARY EVENING

A very pleasant evening was spent at Charlotte street Epworth League, last night on account of it being missionary night. The topic dealt exclusively with the Japanese. Some interesting readings were given, including the plea for Japan by Miss Montejoy, the women of Japan by Mrs. Thistlewaite and the shrines and temples of Japan by Miss Annie Hilton. Miss Rigby and Miss Hasel Austin, favoured the League with a vocal and piano solo respectively, which was enjoyed by all present.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

INTERMENT IN PETERBORO

The Examiner received a letter from Mr. Ed. Dawson, Nanton, Alta., confirming the sad intelligence, recently given in the Examiner, that his father, Mr. Alex. Dawson, was accidentally killed in Vancouver, B. C., on Thursday, March 7th, by a runaway team of horses. Mr. Dawson, at the time of meeting his death, was on his way home from California, where he had been residing for the past year or so, to Kilowna, B. C., where he had intended making his home, alongside his son, Albert.

Mr. Ed. Dawson, of Nanton, Alta., a son, will accompany the remains of his father from Calgary to Peterborough, where they are expected to arrive on Wednesday or Thursday, next.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 o'clock on Thursday, March 14th. There will be service at the Chapel of Little Lake cemetery.

PIELESS WEEK FOR 10,000.

Chicago Union Working Girls Plan Self-Denial Campaign.

Ten thousand union working girls in Chicago are going to deny themselves luxuries for a week in order to raise a campaign fund to help other working girls organize unions and enforce union conditions.

The union girls will try to deny themselves nickel shows, dances, chocolates, pie, ice cream and ice cream sodas.

One hundred agreed to walk to work each day and give their car fare to the camapign fund. Another hundred agreed to donate their savings for the week.

There are 125,000 women and girls in Chicago, who work in factory or shop. The 10,000 who belong to the Woman's Trade Union League are planning a campaign to unionize the remaining 115,000.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

The funeral of the late Mr. Francis Reynolds, who passed away at the residence of his niece, Mrs. John Brown 29 Crescent street, will take place on Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. W. C. Riddiford will conduct a service at the house at 3 o'clock, after which the funeral cortege will proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

The deceased gentleman, who was seventy-five years of age, was born in Cavan township. For some years he resided in Alexander, Maine, coming to Peterborough about four years ago. He was in creed an Anglican and during his sojourn in the city he has made many friends. He has been ailing for some considerable time, therefore the end was not wholly unexpected. Death was due to heart failure.

The late Mr. Reynolds is survived by one sister-in-law, wife of the late John Reynolds, five nephews and four nieces.

A MAN WITH PILES CANNOT WOR

The depressing, undermining influence of piles seems to affect mind as well as body until the sufferer from this annoying ailment feels miserable and utterly cast down.

The itching, stinging sensations which accompany piles are bad enough. The search for cure and thought of a surgical operation do not tend to cheer one up. Many get discouraged and allow their futures to be ruined by this wretched ailment.

It is so easy to relieve piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment that it seems strange that anyone should neglect to give this treatment a thorough trial. If you could only read some of the letters from cured ones who had suffered ten, twenty or thirty years you would no longer doubt the effectiveness of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the relief and cure of piles.

CHIEF OF POLICE LAYS CHARGES

Hotel Keepers Will Appear in Police Court To-morrow

Mr. Chas. Nixon, proprietor of the Grand Hotel, is charged by the Chief of Police, and a summons has been issued, for selling liquor to an Indian, Hanlon Howard of Hiawatha, whose brother, Ben Howard, it will be remembered, was a runner, and was killed while under the influence of liquor, by being struck by a G. T. R. train. The two bartenders at the Grand Hotel are also charged with supplying liquor to minors, there being two charges against the two bartenders. Fred Blastorah of the Palace Hotel, is also charged with supplying liquor to Indians. These cases will come up in the police court to-morrow. All these charges have been laid by Chief of Police Thompson.

FUNERAL OF MR. ALEXANDER DAWSON

The body of the late Alexander Dawson will arrive in Peterborough on the arrival of the 11.35 (C.P.R.) train from the West, and will be taken to the cemetery vault.

The funeral service will take place in the Little Lake Cemetery Chapel, at 2.30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Pogue officiating.

A SCOTTISH FARMER'S RETORT

A Scottish farmer, who had gone to the laird to pay his rent, was complaining about the bad season, the poor crops, and the small prices he was getting for his grain, and hinting that a reduction in the rent would be acceptable.

"But, John," said the laird, "you were saying that all your crops had been poor this season. I have been told however that you had a very good crop of beans."

"A guid crop!" ejaculated the farmer. "Mon, laird, if ilka beanstalk had been a piper he wadna hae heard his next neebor playin'!"

IF I HAD ECZEMA

I'd simply wash it way with that soothing liquid, D.D.D. Prescription. The very first drops instantly stop that awful itch. We have sold many other remedies for skin trouble, but none that we could personally recommend as we do the D.D.D. Prescription.

OBITUARY

MR. SAMUEL MILLIKEN.

The death took place this morning of Mr. Samuel Milliken, at the residence of his son Frederick R. Milliken, 307 Burnham street. Mr. Milliken has been ailing for the past two years with heart trouble and his demise was not unexpected. The late Mr. Milliken, who was born in Otonabee, has been a life-long resident of Peterborough, always living and working in this place. He was married to Lavella Campbell, who predeceased him some twenty-five years ago. For years he worked with the late J. Z. Rogers of the Peterborough Canoe Company, but more recently with the Dickson Company. He leaves behind him three sons, Frederick R. Albert I., and Frank S. ;also five sisters and one brother, Miss Milliken Mrs. T. Fair, and Mrs. R. Clinkscale, Peterborough, Mrs. J. Crawford, Douro, Mrs. S. J. Rickey, Yonkers, N.Y., and Mr. David Milliken of Midland. Mr. Millikan was a member of Court Peterborough, Canadian Order of Foresters and an adherent of St Andrew's Presbyterian church, and an ardent Conservative in politics. He was well liked by all his friends and was of a quiet disposition.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of his son Frederick, 307 Burnham street, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon at the Little Lake cemetery.

DEATH OF MRS. KIRBY.

Word was received in Peterborough on Monday of the death at Winnipeg, of Mrs. Kirby, formerly Miss Josie Bradburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bradburn, formerly of Peterborough.

Mrs. Kirby will be remembered as one of the most popular and respected young ladies of the city. She had for a number of years suffered with articular rheumatism. Her mother and brother both reside in Winnipeg.

Mr. Kirby, it will be remembered, was employed in the drug store of the late Mr. John McKee. After his marriage he removed to Ottawa, and opened a drug store, subsequently taking up the study of medicine and eventually entering upon the practice of his profession.

Mrs. Kirby has many friends in Peterborough who will regret to learn of her death.

DEBATE ON BUDGET

Legislature Grows Warm Discussing Various Topics

NEEDS OF AGRICULTURE

Toronto, March 13.—The debate on the budget in the Provincial House elicited some vigorous speeches yesterday and nearly everything in sight was discussed.

Mr. T. W. McGarry charged the Opposition with joining hands with their confreres at Ottawa to turn the provinces one against the other. In his speech in the budget debate he made reference to the remarks of Mr. Molloy, a Liberal member in the Manitoba Legislature, who had made the statement that if eastern Canada wouldn't accede to the wishes of the western provinces in matters of policy, the west would be justified in withdrawing from confederation.

For nearly half an hour, Mr. McGarry spoke on the policy of the Government with regard to timber limits and mines. He regarded as deplorable the gigantic sales of timber that were made during the Ross administration.

In spite of the fact that the hon. member opposite thinks the province is being depleted of its timber lands," said Mr. McGarry, "the amount of red and white pine and pulpwood is now double what it was under the old Government. Why in unlicensed land alone," he continued, "we have $100,000,000 worth of red and white pine and pulpwood."

Mr. McGarry then told of the Government revenues from mines at the present times. For Cobalt Lake alone $1,095,000 had been received.

"We have actually got over $20,000,000," he thundered, "from these very mines that the old Government disposed of for $5,000." (Applause.)

Mr. McGarry paid a tribute to J. L. Englehart, the chairman of the T. & N. O. commission, and said that Mr. Englehart's equal in point of efficiency couldn't be got for a salary of $25,000. And yet Mr. Englehart was devoting his whole time and ability in making the road the success it is to-day.

Hon. A. G. MacKay took the Departments seriatim and prodded the special tender spot of each.

He also took a wallop at the Agricultural Department. He admitted that the revenue had been doubled, but he gave figures showing, he said, that more attention should be given to this great asset of the province. In 1904, 8 1-2 per cent. of the total expenditures was devoted to agriculture and in 1911 just 7 per cent. had been given to the same purpose. "Is this not an indication that agriculture is not receiving a fair share of the public money?" he asked. Are we going to allow the Agricultural Department to drift into the same state as the Educational Department?"

The recent appointment of a Deputy Minister of Agriculture also came in for a jolt or two. He considered that it might be a hard task to get a proper man for the post, but the Government should be willing to give more than $3,000, even $4,000, or even as high as $10,000, in order to get a properly qualified deputy minister, one who knows everything pertaining to the problem of agriculture. He didn't wish to say anything against the man who had been appointed. He was a very likeable chap and formerly a newspaper man, but he didn't know much about agriculture.

W. Proudfoot, Centre Huron, declared that the Government members kept persisting that they did not have any blowing of horns for the work they were doing, and yet every member that speaks indulges in horn-blowing, he said.

It should be much cause for pride on the part of the Government, he contended, to see the item of the 5 per cent. liquor tax in the public accounts. He hoped that item would soon not appear at all, and that the Government would no longer appear to have entered into a partnership with the liquor men.

With regard to statute revision commission, Mr. Proudfoot thought it was a mistake to appoint a body of judges to be the chief advisers.

G. H. Ferguson, Grenville, adjourned the debate.

NO SETTLEMENT YET.

Conference at London Adjourns, But Outlook Is Better.

London, March 13.—Although nothing definite was achieved at the joint conference of the coal owners, miners and Cabinet Ministers yesterday, the prospect of a settlement of the coal strike is decidedly brighter. The executive of the miners' federation met late last night and adopted a resolution recommending that the federation agree to Premier Asquith's plan for a joint conference in the various districts for the settlement of the minimum wage proposals, on the understanding that none of the districts resume work until a national settlement is effected.

Should the federation, as is expected, adopt this recommendation, it will be a decided step forward, as a general agreement on a minimum wage is likely to have considerable influence on the obdurate Scotch and Welsh owners.

The Prime Minister again had an audience with the King and informed His Majesty of the proceedings at the joint conference.

The extent to which the strike is curtailing railway service is indicated by the fact that the Northeastern railway alone has suspended 1,269 trains. It is estimated that the unions, excluding the miners, are paying out $250,000 weekly to those out of employment, while 160,000 men are working on short time. The funds of the North Wales Miners' Association are almost exhausted, and the association has been obliged to stop strike pay.

To Confiscate Lightweight Coal.

Kingston, March 13.—As a result of four dealers being fined for delivering lightweight coal, the city council has taken action to have all coal found under weight in future confiscated.

OPINION THE SAME

Sir Wilfrid Has No Desire to Raise the School Issue

DISAPPROVES OF COERCION

Ottawa, March 13.—The ostentatious request from the Government side that Sir Wilfrid Laurier come out from the lines of Torres Vedras and declare his policy on the Manitoba school question was met last night during the final struggle to secure a third reading for the Manitoba boundary bill. His stand was that he did not wish to revive the school question now. The Nationalist amendment proposed by Messrs. Mondou and Lamarche early in the afternoon, providing for the insertion of a clause guaranteeing the continuance of any rights to separate schools now obtaining in the district of Keewatin, was supported by a somewhat larger number of speakers than voted for it when a similar amendment was proposed in committee, but was rejected by the Government on the ground that it was superfluous. The vote was 160 to 24.

When the boundaries bill was called for third reading, the Premier moved to return it to committee to amend the description of the boundaries and to strike out clause 7, which guaranteed the rights of the Hudson Bay Co.'s rights as superfluous. A. Mondou (Yamaska) was straining at the leash with an amendment, but J. J. Hughes (Kings, P.E.I.) got in ahead of him with a plea for compensation of Prince Edward Island in regard to subsidy in view of the grant to Manitoba in lieu of public lands.

Then Mr. Mondou got his chance, and moved to refer the bill back to committee in order to add the following section: "Section 22 of the Manitoba Act, 1870 (33 Vic. cap. 3) shall apply to the territory added to the province under the provisions of this act, with the substitution for paragraph 1 of said section 22 of the following paragraphs."

"Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational or separate schools which any class of persons have, at the date of the passing of this act, by law or practice, in the territory added to the province under the provisions of this act."

Mr. Mondou spoke very briefly in French.

He had had the intention, he said, of obtaining an expression of opinion in committee the other day on his amendment, but circumstances preventing this, he desired to accomplish his end at the present stage.

P. E. Lamarche (Nicolet) speaking in French, declared that the principle contended for in the present amendment was not a new one. Section 3 of the British North America Act declared that where boundaries were extended the Dominion had the right to interfere with the sovereign rights of a province.

A. A. MacDonald, Liberal member for Pictou, declared that Mr. Mondou's amendment was superfluous. If section 22 of the B.N.A. Act were in effect in the territory of Keewatin there was no need of saying it should apply. He asked the Minister of Justice for his opinion.

Hon C. J. Doherty concurred in Mr. MacDonald's contention. Of course, if rights did not exist in this territory susceptible of being maintained, no good purpose would be served by the enactment of the proposed clause. It was not susceptible of doubt, he said, that the section of the Manitoba act (the amended B.N.A. Act) which granted and guaranteed the maintenance of separate schools in the territory of Manitoba at the time of the admission of the province, where such schools were established by law or practice, applied to the territory of Keewatin.

William Chisholm (Antigonish) asked whether, even if there were no separate schools in Keewatin, they had not the right to them.

"If there had been a commissioner-in-council in Keewatin," Mr. Doherty answered, "there would have been that right, but no commissioner-in-council had ever been constituted."

To the promoters of the present agitation, he said: "It is not wise to be crying 'wolf, wolf' all the time unless you are sure the wolf is there."

There was perfect protection for any rights actually existing in the annexed territory in the constitution of Manitoba. It was not their way, however, to induce Manitoba to deal generously with the minority to tell them they must.

D. A. Lesperance (Montmagny) taunted the Liberals with remaining within the lines of Torres Vedras instead of declaring their position. He would vote against the amendment, but he did not wish his vote to be interpreted as a denial of minority rights. The amendment was superfluous, and he had entire confidence that Manitoba would do the right thing.

J. H. Rainville (Chambly-Vercheres) declared: "We are not called on to-day to give a constitution to Keewatin, but to annex Keewatin to a province which already has a constitution. We could not in any way touch the constitution of Manitoba."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that, although he believed that Manitoba should receive an extension of her boundaries, he had thought it his duty to oppose the passage of the bill for reasons which he had given in a former speech.

Sir Wilfrid went on to say that if, on the school question, he had remained within the lines of Torres Vedras, it was not with any intention of remaining there permanently. (Laughter.)

"So far as I am concerned," continued the leader of the Opposition, "I approach the question at this moment not in my capacity as leader of a party, but as an individual. My attitude on this question is well known; it had been well known for sixteen years. I stand to-day, in 1912, on the same ground and on the same platform as in 1897. I would not then interfere with the autonomy of Manitoba; I will not now, in Opposition, interfere with the autonomy of that province.

"As to the amendment, I say it is beyond doubt that if my hon. friend wished to maintain in the new constitution of Manitoba the legislation of 1875, he could not have adopted a more ineffective method. That amendment would not in any way add to the rights or privileges of the minority in the new territories and is already contained in the Manitoba Act."

After a brilliant peroration on the beauty of peace, Sir Wilfrid stated that he would never raise his hand to stir up discord and for that reason he would vote against the amendment.

SUGGEST IMPROVEMENTS.

Associated Boards of Trade Wait on Ontario Premier.

Toronto, March 13.—Sir James Whitney yesterday received a deputation representing the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade, who presented the resolutions adopted at their annual meeting on Feb. 28. Among those present were: W. G. Trethewey, Dr. Reason, London; P. S. Coate, Chatham; A. J. Young, North Bay; H. J. Sims, Berlin; R. S. Gourlay and F. C. Morley, Toronto. The resolutions dealt with were: Fish and game preserves, advocating the benefits to be derived from stocking lakes with fish fry and wild rice the establishment of a prison farm in Northern Ontario, with a view to demonstrate the suitability of soil and climate for agricultural pursuits; urging the extension of the T. & N. O. Railway to Hudson Bay, and the vigorous opening up of the Temiskaming country by a system of branch lines; also the extension of the provincial railway north to Georgian and south to Toronto, as well as the construction of a complete system of radial electric lines through Southern Ontario, controlled and operated by the Government and local municipalities and acting as feeders to the main line of the T. & N. O., south from North Bay; development of Northern Ontario, including the construction of adequate roads and the clearing of lands for prospective settlers; that the Government get control of new townsites previous to incorporation; that the agricultural possibilities of old Ontario be developed, and farm laborers be encouraged to come to the province; that the good roads movement be extended in every possible way.

Sir James thanked the deputation for the suggestions, made and gave his assurances that the different recommendations would receive careful consideration.

Germany's Trade Problem.

Berlin, March 13.—The Reichstag yesterday adopted a resolution asking the Government to prepare comprehensive statistics on production as a preliminary to the negotiation of future commercial relations.

The statistics shall also include the costs of production, raw material and land, wages, the cost of living, social reforms and tax burdens in the countries chiefly competing with Germany.

Minnesota Farmers For Canada.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 13.—The first colonist train of the season left here yesterday with about 200 homeseekers for different parts of the Canadian Northwest. The train was composed of more than sixty freight cars and several passenger coaches. Railway representatives declare that the movement to Canada this year will be much greater than ever before.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses
I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an eyestrain to undue up and down strain. To remedy this the segment must be set low, so low that the subject when looking down glances by and below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eyes. Of course, this means that if reading, the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.
We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Panoptic Kryptok. Ask for ... Kryptok.

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"This good-bye—do you remember it? The exact language, I mean?"

"I do; it made a great impression on me. 'I shall hope for our further acquaintance,' she said. 'We have one very strong interest in common.' And if ever a human face spoke eloquently, it was hers at that moment. The interest, as I understand it, was our mutual sympathy for our toiling, half-starved, down-trodden brothers and sisters in the lower streets of this city; but the eloquence—that I probably mistook. I thought it sprang from personal interest, and it gave me courage to pursue the intention which had taken the place of every other feeling and ambition by which I had hitherto been moved. Here was a woman in a thousand; one who could make a man of me indeed. If she could ignore the social gulf between us, I felt free to take the leap. Cowardice had never been a fault of mine. But I was no fool even then. I realized that I must first let her see the manner of man I was and what life meant to me and must mean to her if the union I contemplated should become an actual fact. I wrote letters to her, but I did not give her my address or even request a reply. I was not ready for any word from her. I am not like other men and I could wait. And I did, for weeks, then I suddenly appeared at her hotel."

The change of voice—the bitterness which he infused into this final sentence—made everyone look up. Hitherto he had spoken calmly, almost monotonously, as if no present heart-beat responded to this tale of vanished love; but with the words, "Then I suddenly appeared at her hotel," he showed himself human again, and betrayed a passion which though curbed was of the fiery quality, befitting his extraordinary attributes of mind and person.

"This was when?" put in Dr. Heath, anxious to bridge the pause which must have been very painful to the listening father.

"The week after Thanksgiving. I did not see her the first day, and only casually the second. But she knew I was in the building, and when I came upon her one evening seated at the very desk in the mezzanine which we all have such bitter cause to remember, I could not forbear expressing myself in a way she could not misunderstand. The result was of a kind to drive a man like myself to an extremity of self-condemnation and rage. She rose up as if insulted, and flung me one sentence and one sentence only before she hailed the elevator and left my presence. A cur could not have been dismissed with less ceremony."

"That is not like my daughter. What was the sentence you allude to? Let me hear the very words." Mr. Challoner had come forward and now stood awaiting his reply, a dignified but pathetic figure, which all must view with respect.

"I hate the memory of them, but since you demand it, I will repeat them just as they fell from her lips," was Mr. Brotherson's bitter retort. "She said, 'You of all men should recognize the unseemliness of these proposals. Had your letters given me any hint of the feelings you have just expressed, you would never have had this opportunity of approaching me.' That was all; but her indignation was scathing. Ladies who have supped exclusively of silver, show a fine scorn for the common ware of the cottager."

Mr. Challoner bowed. "There is some mistake," said he. "My daughter might be averse to your addresses, but she would never show indignation of extraneous conditions. She had wide sympathies—wider than I often approved. Something in your conduct or the confidence you showed shocked her nice sense; not your lack of the luxuries she often misprised. This much I feel obliged to say, out of justice to her character, which was uniformly considerate."

"You have seen her with men of her own world and yours," was the harsh response. "She had another side to her nature for the man of a different sphere. And it killed my love—that you can see—and led to my sending her the injudicious letter with which you have confronted me. The hurt bull utters one bellow before he dies. I bellowed, and bellowed loudly, but I did not die. I'm my own man still and mean to remain so."

The assertive boldness—some would call it bravado—with which he thus finished the story of his relations with the dead heiress, seemed to be more than Mr. Challoner could stand. With a look of extreme pain and perplexity he vanished from the doorway, and it fell to Dr. Heath to enquire:

"Is this letter—a letter of threat you will remember—the only communication which passed between you and Miss Challoner after this unfortunate passage of arms at the Clermont?"

"Yes. I had no wish to address her again. I had exhausted in this one outburst whatever humiliation I felt."

"And she? Did she give no sign, make you no answer?"

"None whatever." Then, as if he found it impossible to hide this hurt to his pride, "She did not even seem to consider me worthy the honour of an added rebuke. Such arrogance is, no doubt, commendable in a Challoner."

This time his bitterness did not pass unrebuked by the coroner: "Remember the grey hairs of the only Challoner who can hear you, and respect his grief."

Mr. Brotherson bowed.

"I have finished," said he. "I shall have nothing more to say on the subject." And he drew himself up in expectation of the dismissal he evidently thought pending.

But the coroner was not done with him by any means. He had a theory in regard to this lamentable suicide which he hoped to establish by this man's testimony, and, in pursuit of this plan, he not only motioned to Mr. Brotherson to resest himself, but began at once to open a fresh line of examination by saying:

"You will pardon me, if I press this matter. I have been given to understand that notwithstanding your break with Miss Challoner, you have kept up your visits to the Clermont and were even on the spot at the time of her death."

"On the spot?"

"In the hotel, I mean."

"There you are right; I was in the hotel."

"At the time of her death?"

"Very near the time. I remember hearing some disturbance in the lobby behind me, just as I was passing out at the Broadway entrance."

"You did, and did not return?"

"Why should I return? I am not a man of much curiosity. There was no reason why I should connect a sudden alarm in the lobby of the Clermont with any cause of special interest to myself."

This was so true and the look which accompanied the words was so frank that the coroner hesitated a moment before he said:

"Certainly not, unless—well, to be direct, unless you had just seen Miss Challoner and knew her state of mind and what was likely to follow your abrupt departure."

"I had no interview with Miss Challoner."

"But you saw her? Saw her that evening and just before the accident?"

Sweetwater's papers rattled; it was the only sound to be heard in that moment of silence. Then—

"What do you mean by those words?" inquired Mr. Brotherson, with studied composure. "I have said that I had no interview with Miss Challoner. Why do you ask me then, if I saw her?"

"Because I believe that you did. From a distance possibly, but yet directly and with no possibility of mistake."

"Do you put that as a question?"

"I do. Did you see her figure or face that night?"

"I did."

Nothing—not even the rattling of Sweetwater's papers—disturbed the silence which followed this admission.

"From where?" Dr. Heath asked at last.

"From a point far enough away to make any communication between us impossible. I do not think you will require me to recall the exact spot."

"If it were one which made is possible for her to see you as clearly as you could see her, I think it would be very advisable for you to say so."

"It was—such—a spot."

"Then I think I can locate it for you, or do you prefer to locate it yourself."

"I will locate it myself. I had hoped not to be called upon to mention what I cannot but consider a most unfortunate coincidence. As a gentleman you will understand my reticence and also why it is a matter of regret to me that with an acumen worthy of your position, you should have discovered a fact which, while it cannot explain Miss Challoner's death, will drag our little affair before the public, and possibly give it a prominence in some minds which I am sure does not belong to it. I met Miss Challoner's eye for one instant fro mthe top of the little staircase running up to the mezzanine. I had yielded thus far to an impulse I had frequently combatted, to seek by another interview to retrieve the bad effect which must have been made upon her by my angry note. I knew that she frequently wrote letters in the mezzanine at this hour, and got as far as the top of the staircase in my effort to join her. But I got no further. When I saw her on her feet, with her face turned my way, I remembered the scorn with which she had received my former heart-felt proposals and, without taking another step forward, I turned away from her and fled down the steps and so out of the building by the main entrance. She saw me, for her hand flew up with a startled gesture, but I cannot think that my presence on the same floor with her could have caused her to strike the blow which terminated her life. Why should I? No woman sacrifices her life out of mere regret for the disdain she has shown a man she has taken no pains to understand."

His tone and attitude seemed to invite the concurrence of Dr. Heath in this statement. But the richness of the one and the grace of the other showed the handsome speaker off to such advantage that the coroner was rather inclined to consider how a woman, even of Miss Challoner's fine taste and careful breeding, might see in such a situation much for regret, if not for active despair and the suicidal act. He gave no evidence of his thought, however, but followed up the one admission made by Mr. Brotherson which he and others must naturally view as of the first importance.

"You saw Miss Challoner lift her hand, you say. Which hand, and what was in it? Anything?"

"She lifted her right hand, but it would be impossible for me to tell you whether there was anything in it or not. I simply saw the movement before I turned away. It looked like one of alarm to me. I felt that she had some reason for this. She could not know that it was in repentance I came rather than in fulfilment of my threat."

A sigh from the adjoining room. Mr. Brotherson rose, as he heard it, and in doing so met the clear eye of Sweetwater fixed upon his own. Its language was, no doubt, peculiar and it seemed to fascinate him for a moment, for he started as if to approach the detective, but forsook this intention almost immediately, and addressing the coroner, gravely remarked:

"Her death following so quickly upon this abortive attempt of mine at an interview startled me by its coincidence as much as it does you. If in the weakness of her woman's nature, it was more than this—if the scorn she had previously shown me was a cloak she instinctively assumed to hide what she was not ready to disclose, my remorse will be as great as any one here could wish. But the proof of all this will have to be very convincing before my present convictions will yield to it. Some other and more poignant source will have to be found for that instant's impulsive act than is supplied by this story of my unfortunate attachment."

Dr. Heath was convinced, but he was willing to concede something to the secret demand made upon him by Sweetwater, who was bundling up his papers with much clatter.

Looking up with a smile which had elements in it he was hardly conscious of, perhaps himself, he asked in an off-hand way:

"Then why did you take such pains to wash your hands of the affair the moment you had left the hotel?"

"I do not understand."

"You passed around the corner into —— street, did you not?"

"Very likely. I could go that way as well as another."

"And stopped at the first lamp-post?"

"Oh, I see. Someone saw that childish action of mine."

"What did you mean by it?"

"Just what you have suggested. I did go through the pantomime of washing my hands of an affair I considered definitely ended. I had resisted an irrepressible impulse to see and talk with Miss Challoner again, and was pleased with my firmness. Unaware of the tragic blow which had just fallen. I was full of self-congratulations at my escape from the charm which had lured me back to this hotel again and again in spite of my better judgment, and I wished to symbolise my relief by an act of which I was, in another moment, ashamed. Strange that there should have been a witness to it. (Here he stole a look at Sweetwater.) Stranger still, that circumstances by the most extraordinary of coincidences should have given so unforeseen a point to it."

"You are right, Mr. Brotherson. The whole occurrence is startling and most strange. But life is made up of the unexpected, as none know better than we physicians, whether our practice be of a public or private character."

As Mr. Brotherson left the room, the curiosity to which he had yielded once before, led him to cast a glance of penetrating enquiry behind him full at Sweetwater, and if either felt embarrassment, it was not the hunted but the hunter.

But the feeling did not last.

"I've simply met the strongest man I've ever encountered," was Sweetwater's encouraging comment to himself. "All the more glory if I can find a joint in the armour or a hidden passage to his cold, secretive heart."

XI

ALIKE IN ESSENTIALS

"Mr. Gryce, I am either a fool or the luckiest fellow going. You must decide which."

The aged detective, thus addressed, laid down his evening paper and endeavoured to make out the dim form he could just faintly discern standing between him and the library door.

"Sweetwater, is that you?"

"No one else. Sweetwater, the fool, or Sweetwater, much too wise for his own good. I don't know which. Perhaps you can find out and tell me."

A grunt from the region of the library table, then the sarcastic remark:

"I'm just in the mood to settle that question. This last failure to my account ought to make me an excellent judge of another's folly. I've meddled with the old business for the last time, Sweetwater. You'll have to go it alone from now on. The Department has no more work for Ebenezar Gryce, or rather Ebenezar Gryce will make no more fool attempts to please them. Strange that a man don't know when his time has come to quit. I remember how I once scored Yeardsley for hanging on after he had lost his grip; and here am I doing the same thing. But what's the matter with you? Speak out, my boy. Something new in the wind?"

"No, Mr. Gryce; nothing new. It's the same old business. But, if what I suspect is true, this same old business offers opportunities for some very interesting and unusual effort. You're not satisfied with the coroner's verdict in the Challoner case?"

"No. I'm satisfied with nothing that leaves all ends dangling. Suicide was not proved. It seemed the only presumption possible, but it was not proved. There was no blood-stain on that cutter-point."

"Nor any evidence that it had ever been there."

"No. I'm not proud of the chain which lacks a link where it should be strongest."

"We shall never supply that link."

"I quite agree with you."

"That chain we must throw away."

"And forge another?"

Sweetwater approached and sat down.

"Yes; I believe we can do it; yet I have only one indisputable fact for a starter. That is why I want you to tell me whether I'm growing daft or simply adventurous. Mr. Gryce, I don't trust Brotherson. He has pulled the wool over Dr. Heath's eyes and almost over those of Mr. Challoner. But he can't pull it over mine. Though he should tell a story ten times more plausible than the one with which he has satisfied the coroner's jury, I would still listen to him with more misgiving than confidence. Yet I have caught him in no misstatement, and his eye is steadier than my own. Perhaps it is simply a deeply rooted antipathy on my part, or the rage one feels at finding he has placed his finger on the wrong man. Again it may be—"

"What, Sweetwater?"

"A well-founded distrust. Mr. Gryce, I'm going to ask you a question."

"Ask away. Ask fifty if you want to."

"No; the one may involve fifty, but it is big enough in itself to hold our attention for a while. Did you ever hear of a case before, that in some of its details was similar to this?"

"No, it stands alone. That's why it is so puzzling."

"You forget. The wealth, beauty and social consequence of the present victim has blinded you to the strong resemblance which her case bears to one you know, in which the sufferer had none of the worldly advantages of Miss Challoner. I allude to—"

"Wait! the washerwoman in Hicks Street! Sweetwater, what have you got up your sleeve? You do mean that Brooklyn washerwoman, don't you?"

INVALUABLE TO EVERY FARMER

Its Wonderful Power in Curing Sick Cattle and Colicky Horses Makes "Nerviline" Worth Its Weight in Gold.

The stockman or farmer that doesn't know of the thousand and one uses of "Nerviline" around the stable has a great deal to learn. "Why, I wouldn't think of looking my stable door at night without knowing I had a supply of 'Nerviline' on hand. I always get a dozen bottles at a time from my druggist. To cure colic, indigestion, and bad stomach in a horse or cow there is no remedy on earth in the same class as 'Nerviline.' Last summer I had a $250 horse that got the scours, and I would have lost him if I hadn't been able to give him Nerviline. I poured a full bottle of Nerviline in a pint of water down his throat and saved his life. I know of neighbors who have saved many heads of valuable stock, stricken with colic, just by using Nerviline. It is equally good as a rub-on liniment, and I know from my experience that for man or beast, internally or externally, 'Nerviline' is worth a dollar a drop.—James E. McCullough, Stock Breeder, etc."

A WEAK, ACHING BACK CAUSED HER MUCH MISERY

Could Not Work and Had No Ambition For Anything.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes:—"A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak, aching back which caused me much misery, for I could not work and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights, I tried many kinds of pills and medicines but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never in trouble with a sore back or sick headaches. I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine, and can highly recommend them to any sufferers."

AN ANCIENT DRAMA

Fragments of "The Trackers" Have Been Put Together.

A discovery of great interest to classical scholars has been announced at a meeting of the Egypt Exploration Fund, held at Burlington House under the presidency of Lord Cromer.

Dr. Hunt pointed out that it was customary in ancient times to produce tragedies in sets of threes, which were followed by a Satyric drama. Only one specimen of such a drama had come down the "Cyclops" of Euripides. A fair sample of Sophocles was now recovered.

When found, the papyrus in question was much broken up; in fact the various fragments were not even all obtained in the same year. But they had fitted together remarkably well, and now made up the first 16 columns of the play, accounting for over 400 lines, which was probably half of the original whole.

The play was "The Trackers," of which practically nothing beyond the title was previous known. It was based upon the familiar myth of the exploits of the infant god Hermes—his theft of Apollo's cattle and his invention of the lyre.

An element of comedy was supplied by the grotesque figures of Silenus and the chorus, whose imitation of dogs upon the scent lent itself to some rather broad humor.

With this papyrus were smaller fragments, also clearly Sophocleau, of a tragedy, taken from the tale of Troy.

Biblical fragments found included one of some length of the Shepherd of Hermas, which was evidently a popular book among the early Christians in Egypt.

ROUMANIA'S NEXT QUEEN

Crown Princess Marie, whose post-marital conquest of her husband will terminate with a great celebration in the royal palace at Bucharest. The Crown Princess, a daughter of the late King Edward's brother, married when just past sixteen, and though she bore her husband three charming children, for years suffered his indifference in silence. Lately, however, she turned the tables on her gallant spouse by forsaking the royal nursery for the ballroom, with the result that she awakened first his interest, then his jealousy, and finally his respect and love. Though the coming celebration is not publicly heralded as a love feast, it is current gossip that it is to mark the beginning of a second honeymoon for the heir presumptive and his pretty English wife.

Why doesn't somebody write an article on how to build one of those $1,500 bungalows at a cost of not exceeding $5,000?

FELLOWSHIP FOR TORONTO DOCTOR

Dr. A. S. Moorehead Was Awarded F. R.C.S. by London Medical Body.

Dr. A. S. Moorehead of Toronto has been awarded the final fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons. The young Toronto doctor who has won so signal a distinction from the great London medical school is Dr. Andrew Samuel Moorehead, youngest son of Mr. Thomas Moorehead, born some thirty years ago on the town line near Uxbridge. He received his secondary education at Markham High School and came to Toronto University, graduating from the Medical College in 1906 after an excellent course, being a medalist in his graduation year. He then spent six months in Buffalo hospitals, was house surgeon in Toronto General Hospital for a year and a half, and then went to St. Mark's Hospital, London, England, where he was also house surgeon. Dr. Moorehead holds the degrees of L.R.C.P. and M.R.C.S. and his final distinction of F.R.C.S.

SIX CENTS A DAY

What is All it Costs to Live The "Simple Life."

Within half a dozen miles of London the wealthiest city in the world, there has dwelt a man who for two months recently lived the simple life on six cents a day.

His home was on the Essex marshes, half a mile to the east of Canon House Station. Here he built a hut of the most primitive description—it was constructed of hoops and sacks of rags—besides a stream which meanders through the pasturage of a sympathetic or tolerant dairy farmer.

A few yards distant from this hut was another of even more primitive construction. It was about 4 ft. high, 4 ft. broad, and 6 ft. long. In it four children lived, sleeping at night with nothing between them and mother earth (and that earth often soaked with rain) save some old sacks.

The man himself lived in comparative luxury, revelling in the warm glow of fires of coke gathered by the children from refuse heaps on the marshes.

Rentless and taxproof, this man of the marshes found life much less of a burden than the workers, his method being to live on the simplest of fare. This was supplied to him mainly by the children for whom he had provided the luxury of the four-foot by saturated tent.

AGED NEGROE SLAVE

In Custody Many Times, but Never His Right Age.

With no known friends or relatives living in Canada, Alex. Jones, a colored man, died in Toronto jail. Some time ago he appeared in the Police Court charged with vagrancy, and was sentenced to serve the Winter months in the jail, as his poor health and age hindered him from earning a living. Death was attributed to general breakdown. When Jones was admitted to the jail he gave his age as 67. He was well known about town, and had been a frequent visitor to the police stations, although never for any serious offence. Every time he was taken in he gave a different age, and his memory was the only faculty he seemed to have lost. For many years back he was feeble and shaky and was unable to do much work. Some three years ago he was taken to the police station, and the charge against him at the time was one of non-support. The complainant was a colored woman, about 30 years of age, and when laying the charge she said that her husband, although much older than she, found enough time to visit friends and not do any work. She said that she had to do all the work, and had got tired of it. Jones was brought before the sergeant in the station, and in trembling tones gave his name. He said he was born in the South, had been a slave, and had lived in Canada for more years than he could remember. Asked about his age, he said that he was not sure, but, figuring out from the time he had been owned on a plantation in the South, he thought he would be more than 90. He looked the part as he deplored his fate, brought on, as he said, by a jealous young wife. Until he was taken to the cell and locked up he muttered the reminiscences of the sad days he had spent in the South.

DRESSES FROM FISH SKINS

Habits of the Gold Indian Tribe, East Siberia

Among the most unique and wonderful garments worn at the present day are the curious fish-skin dresses worn by the wealthy ladies of the Gold Indian Tribe, living along the Amur River, in East Siberia. Though at present living in a primitive state and unable to read or write, these people are producing the most astonishing ornaments, designs and embroidery work, equalling if not surpassing the handiwork of our best mod ern artists.

The dress is composed entirely of several layers of fish-skin, the undermost representing the skin of the garment proper, the uppermost showing the ornaments in their cut-out forms. Between these two layers is inserted a middle layer, which serves as a back-ground, throwing out distinctly all parts of the ornaments. The pieces of fish-skin forming the ornaments are generally colored blue. The front and back of the dress are adorned with these cut-out pieces of fish-skin sewed with fish-skin thread.

A combination design of the cock and fish are the two forms generally employed for ornamentation. The former plays a predominant part in the ornamental art of all the Amur peoples, and is more frequently reproduced than all other animals put together. To be skilful in needlework is regarded as a great merit, and increases exceedingly the value of a girl in the eyes of her father, who, a careful calculator, includes the amount brought in from this talent in the purchase price of his son-in-law. Men, on the other hand, strive to possess a woman experienced in this line of work. Marriage is a commercial matter, and the bride in nearly all cases is purchased outright from her father. The purchase price is furs, Chinese stuffs and sometimes money, one hundred rubles (about fifty dollars) will obtain the best looking needlewoman in the community. A man can buy as many wives as his purse will admit, three being about the limit.

THE INFANTA EULALIE

King Alfonso's aunt, whose book on divorce set the Spanish Court in an uproar and threatened the writer with excommunication from the Catholic Church and the curtailment of her $50,000 yearly allowance. The book advocates liberal divorce laws and the recognition of a lay morality—a morality outside the Church—but its publication during the time when clerical and anti-clerical factions threaten the peace of Spain, is considered most unpolitic.

ELECTRO-FED CHICKENS

Electrically-grown chickens will be a feature of the British poultry market in the future. It is now a fact that chicks "treated" with high-frequency electricity grow faster and plumper than chicks which grow up in the ordinary way. For a month past Mr. T. Thorne Baker, scientific expert, has been experimenting with twenty-four young chickens, all of which were exactly the same weight when they came under his care. Twelve of the birds he placed in a "foster-mother," and these were allowed to grow in the ordinary way. The other twelve birds were placed in a "foster-mother" in which the perches are wires, and through these wires 5,000 volts of electricity are passed every day. So powerful is the current which passed to the electric "foster-mother" that sparks fly out to one's finger when put near the perches. Mr. Baker decided upon a test to prove which of the chickens had thrived the most. In appearance the twelve electric chickens were obviously larger and more healthy-looking than the other twelve. Four birds from each "foster-mother" were taken out haphazard and carefully weighed. The electric chickens had grown over 15 per cent. heavier than the ordinary birds. In weighing the birds a curious thing was noticed in the demeanour of the electric and non-electric chickens. Those which had been under high-frequency treatment remained perfectly calm and sedate when Mr. Baker placed them on the scales. Not so the ordinary fowls. They squawked and kicked violently when taken out of their "foster-mother," and when on the scales they blinked their eyes and opened their beaks in fright.

Killed in Road Collision.

Mr. Percy Collins, well known in the leather trade, was driving round a dangerous corner at Rushden when his trap collided with a greengrocer's truck. The trap was overturned, and Mr. Collins was thrown to the pavement, fracturing his skull.

Better than Co-operation.

Fifty employees of a wholesale boot and shoe manufacturer of Paris have just had a stroke of good fortune. M. Delatour, the manufacturer, who is a millionaire, has resolved to hand over his works, plant, and stock to fifty of the men who helped him to make his fortune. The value of the works is about $400,000. It is stated that M. Delatour's benevolence arose from a meeting with an old domestic servant, who told him she was depressed at the thought of what would happen to her if he dismissed her.

Had Boils
On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But, Got No Relief Until He Used

Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Bettzen, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

THE FIGHTING SCIENTIST AMONG PANAMA SAVAGES

ATTACKED by Ferocious San Blas Indians, Whose Mountain Fastnesses He Was Exploring, Dr. von Teuber Drilled Four Men with One Bullet and Fought for His Life with Their Companion

DR. F. R. VON TEUBER, formerly official photographer for the Isthmian Canal Commission, a naturalist and ethnologist of note, tells here the story of one of the adventures that befell him when he penetrated the wild country lying back of the San Blas coast of Panama a few years ago.

Dr. von Teuber, who is an Austrian by birth and education, first became interested in the strange San Blas Indians and their equally strange country when serving aboard the Orienta, Panama revenue cutter, as a physician. He has made three attempts to explore the region and is now arranging a fourth expedition.

While his purpose in entering the country was entirely peaceful, he repeatedly found it necessary to defend himself against the natives, and the incident of which he tells, which took place during his second expedition, is of the thrilling and desperate kind which should more properly fall to the lot of a fighter and adventurer than of a scientist.

DR. F. R. VON TEUBER

SAN BLAS is mystery. To speak of the San Blas coast, the San Blas mountains, the San Blas flora and fauna, the San Blas minerals—particularly of the San Blas Indians, is to venture up the line where knowledge ends and hazy conjecture begins.

Science has never tabulated San Blas. Ethnologists, geologists, naturalists—explorers of all kinds who do the pioneer work in strange lands and supply exact data for those dry text books and ponderous technical volumes so necessary in the scientific conquest of the world—have never reduced San Blas to a matter of formulae, diagrams and Latin terms.

San Blas, loosely, is a strip of territory lying along the Caribbean east of Colon in the Republic of Panama. Hedged about by mountain ranges, impenetrable jungle, treacherous shores, and inhabited by some of the wildest and least intelligent of savage races, it remains a no man's land almost at the very threshold of that great undertaking of modern civilisation—the canal.

Stories of its rich gold deposits, of its invaluable mahogany forests, have tempted the treasure seeker and the exploiter as keenly as its scientific possibilities have attracted the more sober investigator. But all attempts to profit by its wealth, material or otherwise, have met with failure, sometimes through the difficulties of its natural position, more often through the ferocious suspicion and untamed hostility of its various tribes.

And so I think you can see what a fascination the word San Blas has for a man with some scientific enthusiasm, with some taste for scientific discovery and with a great deal of curiosity and love of strange adventure.

I made preparations for an expedition into the San Blas region in the winter of 1907. I had had some previous experience there and I understood fully what I was attempting. My object was to obtain a complete collection of native implements and weapons, skulls from the burying grounds and information on language, customs and racial characteristics. My discoveries I intended to offer to the Smithsonian Institution.

The Panama-Playa-Chico-North Bay Expedition, as we called it, was formed in Colon in December. Under my leadership were my brother, Carl von Teuber; William Bartlett and John Bradley, of Boston, and Denton Smith, of Norfolk, Va. At the last moment we added another recruit, a Spanish American, Blanco by name, who afterward proved himself a valuable and faithful member of our party.

Our outfit consisted of Mauser rifles, with both steel and soft nosed ammunition; Smith & Wesson .45's, United States army knapsacks, two fly tents, rice, sugar, salt, crackers, dried fish, coffee, tea and a set of medical supplies. The average weight of the packs was sixty-eight pounds to a man.

We started from Colon on January 9, 1908, in the government launch, running up the coast to Playa de Damas. After a stop here we took up our march along the palm fringed coast and on January 19 reached San Isabel, the furthest outpost of Panamanian civil authority. Our plan was to cut inland from San Isabel and find the head waters of the Mandinga River, which we purposed to follow down to the Mosquito Gulf, thus completing a circuit through the heart of the San Blas country.

Our troubles began at San Isabel. Bradley had fallen ill of a fever that baffled my diagnosis. The news of our coming had spread through the region and had excited the natives, who are incredibly sensitive to and fearful of the approach of whites. Every attempt was made to dissuade us from our purpose. The blacks of San Isabel, descendants of Congo slaves and deeply detested by the San Blas Indians, made all kinds of objections to furnishing us with guides—the only genuine one being their dread of the mountain tribes into whose territory we wished to advance.

On January 22, however, we made a start with two negroes who took us inland some miles by canoe and were finally induced to lead us into the jungle. Many a futile effort has been made to convey in words some idea of a virgin tropical forest, with its heart breaking barriers and hopeless density, a steaming, fetid hell of lush vegetation where men go mad in their frenzied conflict against perverse nature. My own must remain inadequate. Suffice it to say that we were plunged into torment such as only the trackless wilds of Central and South America can inflict upon intruders. We hewed our way literally foot by foot, stumbling among pitfalls, enmeshed by stout creepers and waylaid by clouds of ticks and other insect pests until our strength went from us and we could have wept from sheer weakness and despair.

Our way led upward at a stiff angle, as we were now climbing the coast range. There was no vestige of a trail. We were all soft, for our tramp up to San Isabel had been mere promenading to this. Our packs weighed upon us grievously. Bradley's temperature had gone up again and he was delirious at times. Bartlett showed signs of the same trouble. All in all we were in pretty bad shape when we conquered the ascent and the negroes, pushing over a last stretch, brought us to a little creek, which they said was a tributary of the Mandinga.

Penetrating the Wilds.

At this point the guides refused to go further and we allowed them to return. We made camp as best we could in the thicket, slept the sleep of exhaustion and with daybreak attempted to resume the trail breaking. Without the assistance of the blacks we found progress impossible. Lacking their subtle instinct of direction and jungle travel we were helpless in the maze of giant ferns, bamboos, hardwoods and palms, interlaced and grown about with poisonous vines and thorny shrubs. Snakes added to our dangers, and the ticks became such a torment that we were forced to stop frequently, light smudges and smoke them out of our clothing. Finally, as our only refuge, we took to the little creek.

The stream here was narrow and not deep, but its bed was treacherous and precipitous. Wading in single file, we sometimes sank to our waists in quicksands, sometimes descended sheer, rocky slides, where the water overwhelmed us and shot us, drenched, bruised and gasping, to the pool below. Fallen trees impeded us, lying breast high across the water course. Through and over these various obstacles we dragged ourselves, constantly exposed to ambush and attack by hostiles on either flank, but sacrificing caution in our desire to reach the Mandinga.

For three days we followed this wretched creek, suffering terrible hardships, with never a dry stitch of clothing upon our bodies, living on soggy crackers and black coffee and such tiny fish as we could scoop up with our hats in the shallows. Our camp each night was pitched where a strip of sand or rock offered room for a fire. Our spirits were none too high. Bradley and Bartlett continued to show signs of intermittent fever. On the twenty-eighth, our supplies having been rendered almost useless by water, Smith was so fortunate as to bring down a wild boar and we had our first meat meal.

Soon afterward we came upon a faint trail opening upon the bank of the stream. Owing to the windings of the creek, which we had not dared to leave, we had made a direct advance of some seven miles only, according to my observations, and I decided to follow the trail in the hope that it might prove a short cut between two loops of the water course. Such, in fact, it turned out to be, and in the afternoon we were again on the creek. In climbing down the steep embankment Bradley fell with his pack and accidentally fired his rifle, the shot narrowly missing my shoulder. Another interval of wading brought us to a point where the creek flowed into a considerable river, undoubtedly the Mandinga.

We had now reached our objective, but our situation was not much improved on that account. Bradley was in a delirium with a temperature of 101, Bartlett was in little better shape. We had no craft nor the means of making any, and the Indians, with whom we had expected to trade, remained obstinately hidden. The shyness of the savages worried us as promising trouble. We could not doubt that we had been observed and that a gathering of the tribes would result.

The very night of our arrival at the Mandinga brought the first alarm. We were encamped on the shore of the creek, on a bed of dried palm leaves alive with scorpions and red ants, whose attentions were adequately reinforced by mosquitoes and sand flies. Sleep was hardly to be thought of, and when there came a rustle in the thicket, followed by a pinging shock through the tent, we were up and under arms on the instant. We found that a poisoned spear had been launched at us, penetrating the canvas and burying itself in the tent pole. There was no indication of the whereabouts of the enemy who had sent this sinister message, but we took good care to insure ourselves against further surprises of the kind. With our rifles, we raked the thicket thoroughly, swinging our fire in a half circle.

I Staggered Back Under the Shock, Clutching at the Tree for Support, and My Hand Fell Upon My Rifle.

Hostilities had now been declared through no fault of our own, and we put ourselves in a posture of defence, dividing the watches and setting outposts. On the following day we were aware of the approach of a considerable body of natives along the shore of the river. We were ready for them, but made peaceful signs, and presently a group came into view, unarmed, as if inviting a conference. Leaving my followers with levelled weapons, I walked forward and addressed the group. They were powerfully built men of a coppery brown, with straight, black hair, naked save for a girdle of twisted bark, and considerably taller than the coast Indians of the San Blas country. They belonged, as I saw, to the dreaded mountain tribes with whom their brethren of the coast are constantly at war, a people even less approachable and more savage than the lowlanders.

"You go 'way," he said directly. "No white man here. You go 'way—back." And he pointed up the creek by which we had come. "Indian no sell sand."

Some time before the Panama Canal Commission had attempted to open negotiations with these natives for the sale of sand from the rivers to be used in the concrete work on the canal. The agents were unable to make the Indians understand why they should part with their sand, and the incident served only to excite the suspicious savages to the highest degree.

I tried to tell the interpreter that we did not wish to touch the sand, that we could not return the way we had come, that we were ill and must hasten down the Mandinga to the coast. They remained sullen and hostile.

"You no go 'way, we kill," was the ultimatum of the interpreter, and on these terms the conference closed.

My party was greatly disheartened by our failure to get the friendly aid of the Indians in procuring a canoe or a raft. Our diet now consisted entirely of rice and coffee. There seemed no chance of obtaining any of the relics for which we had come among these people, and all of us were eager to reach the coast.

Attacked by Indians.

I started next morning from the camp and made my way along the shore of the Mandinga to determine our chances of continuing the journey on foot. Retreat was out of the question. It was equally unthinkable that we should remain where we were. I did not want to come to open warfare with the savages. The only solution seemed a hurried disencampment and a forced march.

I had my machete, with which I made myself a path, and carried my Mauser, loaded with a clip of steel jacketed ammunition. I had gone perhaps a mile down the stream and was hewing through a thicket when I caught the sound of voices out in the stream. Working my way to the bank, I saw a large canoe, fashioned from a single log of mahogany, containing six mountain Indians, who were paddling up stream. Leaning my rifle against a tree and throwing down my machete, I stepped out in full view of them and threw both my hands above my head, hailing them with a laugh.

They were perhaps forty feet distant when they heard and saw me. Nothing could have been more peaceable and disarming than my pose toward them. I had not the slightest idea of any danger. I showed no weapon. My hands were up. I called to them both in English and in Spanish that I wanted to talk. They jabbered excitedly together for a moment and the canoe was suddenly headed in my direction. The man at the bow and the man at the stern paddled vigorously. The other four stood up, seizing their spears.

I was still unaware of any aggressive intention on their part when the man in the bow dropped his paddle, reached to the bottom of the canoe before him, brought up a musket and fired it at me point blank.

In the horror and panic of the instant I felt that the charge had taken effect about my abdomen and groin. I staggered back under the shock, clutching at the tree for support, and my hand fell upon my rifle. So far as I was capable of thought I was sure that I was done for. It was the primitive fighting instinct, the impulse of the stricken man to return an unprovoked blow while yet he has the strength, that brought the weapon to my shoulder and my finger to the trigger.

I fired once. I heard the savages scream, saw the standing group melt in a heap of writhing bodies and outflung arms and the canoe tilted as the four who had been standing amidships fell across the gunwales. A violent trembling seized me, and deadly sickness. I leaned against my tree, feeling that the hand of death was upon me. When I looked again the Indians were struggling about the overturned canoe in a ruddy froth. Two were floating away upon the current. Two others, one coughing his last breath with a punctured lung, clung to the dugout. Another, he who had shot me, was swimming down stream with his weapon and powder horn held high. The last, the man who had paddled at the stern, was coming straight for me.

Such is the San Blas Indian. He fights like the jaguar, against any odds and without knowledge of fear. This savage, who had seen four of his companions drilled like beads for a string with the deadly steel bullet of my weapon, hurled himself toward me with a face of demoniac rage, exposing himself to my fire while he swam shoreward. He carried a jagged spear in one hand and when within his depth lifted himself, all dripping, and charged with the yell of a wild beast through the shallows and up the bank.

I was scarce conscious, what with pain and the intense nervous excitation of the attack and the terrible effect of my fire. I do not believe that I was afraid, but I was all of a jangle. I certainly thought that my side was shot away. I had slid to the ground behind the tree, clutching my rifle in a shaking grip.

That dreadful cry aroused me and by the time I swung my weapon around the distorted face of the Indian danced before my blurred vision. He was within striking distance, his tense, muscled figure thrown back for the spear cast, the wet hair plastered over his staring eyes, when I blotted out the apparition, pumping desperately at the trigger and yelling I know not what primal yell of rage and defiance.

I must have thrown myself backward into the thicket immediately afterward. All my impressions of the deadly affair come to me through a red haze, like glimpses caught from a fantastic dream. I remember crawling through the underbrush, pausing to press my hand against my numbed side and to look stupidly at the red stains on my hand when I brought it away. But no more than a minute or two could have passed before my last enemy was upon me.

It was the one who had fired the musket; he who had paddled in the bow. He had swam ashore, reloaded and tracked me. He was crouching to draw upon me again when I dodged away around a close grown clump of palms.

Men do strange things, play strange games, at the tensest and most desperate moments of life. There in that lonely jungle of the San Blas hills a child might have laughed to see the naked warrior and the white man play at tag among the trees. I discovered an unexpected agility. My opponent was no livelier or trickier than I. I clawed around to the right, circling swiftly as he followed, but checking and turning back as he sought to outwit me.

I do not know why I led him, unless it was that I was sick at heart with the slaughter. But we played the senseless game around the palms until my anger came back to me at being chased hither and yon, and with a spring I came to meet him.

I knocked up his ancient musket as he did my rifle and each with a hand upon the other's weapon we wrestled for a space. He bore me backward with the grip of his naked feet on the earth and dashed my shoulder painfully against a trunk. But here I had a purchase and I hurled him back, releasing my hold upon the musket and bringing down the muzzle of my own rifle. With the last shot in the clip I killed him.

The Race with the Canoes.

Staggering back to the shore I waded out to the overturned canoe. The wounded savages had all disappeared. Whether any of them reached shore or not I shall never know. It had come to me suddenly that here was the craft we had all wanted. I had the dugout righted and partly bailed out before I thought to look at my wound again. I found that the charge had inflicted no injuries more serious than bruises and lacerations. The musket had been loaded with insufficient powder behind a collection of pebbles, nails and metal slugs.

I attempted to paddle the waterlogged canoe up stream, but made slow work of it, and was presently aware of a whole fleet of similar craft far down the river coming up. I made haste to get to shore again and to press on toward the camp on foot. The canoes passed me in spite of my frantic efforts to keep the land and warn my companions. Stumbling through the jungle, running, falling, running again, I was forced to keep out of sight from the water and in my haste I made but poor progress. As I neared the camp I heard firing ahead of me and was certain that the fleet of canoes had attacked the party.

As I came out into the little clearing where our tents stood I found my brother, Smith and Bartlett plugging away with rifle and revolvers across the water. The canoes were in plain view and were crowded with natives who were standing up and pop-popping with their muskets. But they were firing at the opposite bank of the creek, not toward us.

For a moment I could not understand, until, seeing puffs of smoke from a hostile shore and observing the stature and costume of the natives in the canoes, I knew that these new arrivals were acting as allies instead of foes. They were coast Indians on an inland expedition. The mountain Indians, their hereditary enemies, had made an attack on the camp, and the newcomers had joined heartily in the fray, through no friendliness for the whites, indeed, but through the bitterness of their ancient feud.

By this timely aid the mountain natives, whose fellows had attacked us, were driven off. After some chaffering the coast Indians agreed to take our party down to the Mosquito Gulf. We surrendered our rifles and supplies, installed Bradley as comfortably as possible on the bottom of one of the dugouts, and embarked, quite willing to escape the jungle on any terms.

We were taken, against our will, to Mandinga Island and later to Cardi Island, off the coast, being held treacherously in captivity at each place for some days. Finally, by threats and pleading, we were allowed to proceed to San Isabel.

Bradley died while on his way to Colon with Smith and Bartlett in a small sailing vessel. Blanco was shot and killed at San Isabel when some of the Mandinga natives, who had followed us there and were lingering in the vicinity, attempted to burn the hut where I had stored such relics as I had been able to collect while in captivity. My brother and I finally won clear of the San Blas country in safety, having failed of the success we had hoped for, but bringing with us what is still the most satisfactory collection of scientific data and curiosities so far gathered in that wild and inaccessible region.

Behind the Mask of the Girl Bohemian.

NEW YORK is full of mes. We talk about our ubiquitous selves in ladies' magazines and Sunday supplements, with illustrations showing a few Flatiron buildings and a border design of tight skirted lady journalists and Brooklyn bridges.

We prate that art is long, funds are short and hall rooms small; we sigh whole windy columnfuls of career stuff and rave of the professional woman and her rewards, even while we cry ourselves to sleep on our lonely and dingy pillows.

Back in our native Xenia, Ohio, and Brownsville, Pa., our erstwhile friends rock their babies and read our latest contribution to the Home Comfort. We are made honorary members of the Ladies' Aid and Literary Society, and the Daily Gazette eulogizes us frequently and fondly as "a former Brownsville girl."

Meanwhile we write continuously, and occasionally we sell; we sleep in fourth floor backs and dream of Xenia's wide verandas; we feel our careers with all our energies and starve our stomachs. We eschew marriage, dote on platonics, address our men friends as "pal" and "old boy," but read Robert W. Chambers; we wear tailored shirt waists and pink ribbon in our under bodice.

Whole hordes of us haunt the theatres and hotel lobbies, ghoulish for "Why I am a Suffragette" or "The Stage as a Career" interviews from the latest divorcee or millionnaire wifebeater. The following morning we slip long coats over our flannelette kimonos and hasten to the newsstand for a paper. A dynamite explosion has killed our headliner and the scoop is reduced to half a stick beneath the death notices. We accordingly reduce breakfast to an egg boiled over the gas jet and fish up a tin of crackers from the trunk.

We frequent tea rooms and are much given to "finding places." The "find" is usually a subcellar done in weathered oak and with an atmosphere of Bohemia and spaghetti, but in ultra-Bohemian moods we ferret out a sixty cent table d'hôte dinner where we drink water tumblers of pale pink sherry and have our choice of Hungarian goulash or boiled halibut.

We speak lightly of interviews and important editors, but fail to remark that we have waited five hours for five minutes of curt editorial attention. We write home of fashionable New York as if we too gave monkey dinners and enjoyed annual nervous breakdowns. We send picture postals of ourselves luxuriating in sixty horse power limousines, but fail to note that the picture was taken in a field-lighted Eighth avenue gallery and that the sixty horse power is distant cardboard.

We write of opera, drama and art, talk intimately of the magians and discuss "The Blue Bird" in detail—this is, after we happen to meet the dramatic editor in the subway and ride as far Forty-second street with him. We inform our second cousin who lives in St. Louis that all the new spring hats are small and that flowers are used entirely, omitting the fact that our own is proving an exception and is a large flat with a ribbon bow from two seasons before.

Sometimes we "arrive;" we write a book or a play. Sometimes the book is a best seller, but not often; sometimes the play is a success, but not often. Then we buy Long Island swamp lands, afford a Japanese chef, and earnest young men in Spillville, Iowa, write for our autograph and tell us that ours is the book which has most influenced their lives. Paradoxically enough, we may write to-day and awaken to-morrow rich in royalties and fame. But then we write back to Xenia in the spirit of the lowly and talk of egg omelets and interior decorating.

Sometimes we marry; it may be the sporting editor or the man who picks up our umbrella on the elevated—we marry shamefacedly, but we stow the pad and pencil pretty far down in the trousseau trunk.

Often we just plod on, dashing our tin foil at Xenia and Brownsville, cold creaming the wrinkles and writing mushy "From My Garden" stories. We are chosen godmother to the first baby of the girl who used to do back sporting on the Star, and we try not to wish things. When we do, we turn the photograph of one of the "old pal" species face downward and sob it all out to the dingy pillow.

STRUCK IT RICH

Ontario Man Claims he Has Millions in the Cariboo Belt

Mr. W. M. Ogden of Vankleek Hill, Ont., who has been mining in the west for some years, says he has struck it rich in the Cariboo district. He says that he has discovered a rich placer gold claim on Lightning Creek, and firmly believes that he has got at least $6,000,000 in sight as the result of careful development work.

Lightning Creek, in the height of its boom in the early days of a now historic rush from all parts of the world, yielded up no less than $12,000,000 in placer gold, according to the official record. Over 10,000 people sought their fortunes in Cariboo district between the 50's and the 70's. Then the reaction set in when the best then known ground was worked out and no new important discoveries were made.

Mr. Ogden says he never lost faith in the district, and has at last struck something worth while on the upper reaches of the creek.

HON. HENRI S. BELAND, M.P., Beauce, Quebec.

A WEALTHY FOUNDLING.

A French peasant who was passed by a motor car near Lyons, saw the car stop for a moment a few hundred yards further on. When he reached the place where it had stopped, he found a twelve-months old baby boy lying in the middle of the road. He took the child to his cottage. His wife undressed the baby to make sure that he had not been hurt, and in his clothes found $3,200 in bank notes, and a piece of paper, on which was written: "To look after and educate the child."

"NOT SCRAPPY" HE SAYS

"Perhaps you don't think so," Tyrus Cobb said, "and perhaps I couldn't convince you, but nothing hurts me as much as to have players and fans think I try to injure men on the opposing teams. They tell how I try to spike this player or that. I'd give anything in the world to take away that impression. It isn't as bad now as it was a few years ago. Then there used to come a chorus of hoots every time I happened to collide with another player, or every time I accidentally spiked one of the opposing baasemen in sliding."

BARBAROUS EXECUTION

An obviously insane man guillotined before a crowd.

Sixty persons who had been privileged to attend the decapitation of a condemned murderer at Dresden, Germany, witnessed a scene of horror that made their blood run cold. The culprit was a casual laborer, named Hoshlert who, for the sake of some paltry savings, in a ruthless and barbarous manner killed an old man with whom he had been on terms of intimacy, and buried the body of the victim in his own garden.

During his last days he had given trouble to his gaolers by attacks of frenzy, real or simulated, and he had to be dragged out into the snow-covered courtyard where the guillotine stood up spectrally in the illumination of electric light. An official of the Public Prosecutor's Department read out the death sentence, to which the doomed man replied with a vehement and incoherent outburst, in which protests were mingled with torrents of foul abuse. This was cut short by the executioner's assistants hauling him away to the scaffold. He was, however, a powerful man, and, in spite of the heavy fetters on his limbs, threatened to be more than a match for those who were holding him. Three warders hastened to their aid, and, uttering appalling yells, Goshlert was, after a terrible struggle, strapped on to the bascule, and his screams were silenced by the fall of the knife.

A DARING PROMOTER

Ernest Terah Hooley's ship has gone down.

After a most sensational career, Ernest Terah Hooley has been sent to jail for a year. The hounds of the law have closed with him at last, and the most daring promoter of the age is a convict. In the course of his brief, but spectacular, career Hooley made in the neighborhood of $40,000,000 for himself and friends. In a single coup lasting three days he made a profit of $10,000,000, but a year later he was a bankrupt with liabilities of $5,000,000, and with few assets. After a long trial he was acquitted, and disappeared from view for some years. He was next heard of as an employe of the Czar of Russia, for whom he was to work a great tract of Siberian property, supposed to contain gold. In 1904 he was arrested on a charge of swindling an English merchant by the sale of shares in these gold mines. Again Hooley escaped, though his partner was sent to prison. Once more he was prosecuted in connection with the sale of some Canadian mining stock. He was not convicted, however. The offense for which he was finally laid by the heels seems a small one compared with some of the schemes in which he was involved. He merely sold a property to a man and told him it was unencumbered, when as a matter of fact there was a mortgage against it. The amount of money involved was only a few hundred pounds.

He had a tremendous following, and had he not undertaken ventures of overwhelming magnitude, he might have built up the greatest fortune of the day. When he undertook to raise a loan of $80,000,000 for China, and to establish a monopoly in the Australian mutton trade, his backers began to leave him, and his collapse soon followed, for even his great fortune sank under the weight that was placed on it when the public declined to ease him of his stock in several large enterprises. His trial was sensational because of the revelations concerning men of title who had taken pay from Hooley. It was said that he had contributed lavishly to the Conservative campaign funds in order to secure a knighthood, but that either Queen Victora or Lord Salisbury vetoed the scheme. While he had the money he was a liberal supporter to many charities, but when the crash came he seemed to have hardly a friend left in the world.

THE MARQUIS OF ANGLESEY.

A curious mixture of nobility with socialism can be seen in Burton-on-Trent in the person of the Mayor, the Marquis of Anglesey. The Mayor-Marquis has taken up the novelty of giving municipal balls for all the members of the populace.

HIS CROWN OF GOLD

Father Bernard Vaughan, the distinguished English priest and author said of an unbeliever during a recent talk in Toronto:—

"He misunderstands. He is like the little school girl.

"A school teacher inculcating principles of morality in her young charges, said one day:

'Now, my dears, if you do right always you will each wear a golden crown.'

"'My papa wears a gold crown now,' a little girl of 6 years piped.

"'I have often seen your father, Bessie,' said the teacher, with a puzzled smile, 'but I never noticed his gold crown. When and where does he wear it?'

"'He always wears it,' said the little girl, poignantly, 'on his roof.'"

DIED AT 103 YEARS

Lived Under Six Sovereigns and Attended Mass Under Seven Popes

Pierre Payette dit St. Amour, one hundred and three years of age, who lived under six British sovereigns, and attended mass under seven Popes of Rome, died at the Grey Nun's Asylum, Montreal. The venerable French Canadian died peacefully, saying a few minutes before he died, "It would not take a very hard blow to put an end to me now."

The old man, a unique figure among the inmates of the Home, was born at Ste. Sophie in 1809. He had lived therefore, in the reigns of George third, George fourth, William fourth, Victoria, Edward seventh and George fifth. Pius seventh was Pope of Rome when Mr. St. Amour first saw the light of day. He died in 1823 and since that date, Leo twelfth, Pius eighth, Gregory sixteenth, Pius ninth, Leo thirteenth and Pius tenth guided successively the affairs of the Roman Catholic Church.

For the greater part of his life, Mr. St. Amour lived at St. Jerome, and it was not until two years ago, at the age of one hundred and one, that he became an inmate of the Grey Nun's Asylum. With him from St. Jerome came the companion and guardian of his old age, in the person of Pierre Desjardins, himself at that time, ninety-nine years old, whose self-imposed duty it became to render the numerous small services which extreme old age demands, to his old friend.

Pierre, now one hundred and one years old, is heartbroken to-day and shuffles aimlessly around the corridors of the big building, his head bowed and tears in his age-dimmed eyes. These two ancients regarded with disdain, as mere youths, the eighty and ninety year old inmates of the institution, were each others' only company, and Desjardins feels that half of him is dead.

The old man could neither read nor write, but he was a keen debater in a small way, and a very logical reasoner. When the Duke of Connaught visited Montreal and paid his official visit to the Grey Nunnery the dead man and his century old companion were at the head of the line which stood up to greet their Royal Highnesses, and the Governor-General, hearing of their extreme age, greeted them individually, and shook their hands. The incident made a profound impression on the two old men and they were fond of referring to it in prideful manner since.

THREW STOOL AT JUDGE

A Prisoner Hurled It With Great Violence at the Court.

While Thomas Field was in the dock at Birmingham Assizes charged with breaking a pawnbroker's window and with theft he picked up a stool in the dock and hurled it with great violence at Mr. Justice Ridley, the presiding judge.

The stool passed over the head of the clerk of assizes and struck his lordship's desk, and glancing off caught the judge above the eye. His lordship immediately retired to his private room.

After an absence of about five minutes his lordship returned. He had a red mark on the forehead over the eye, but the skin did not appear to have been broken. The prisoner was then brought back.

Addressing him his lordship said: "Don't throw anything like that again. You might kill me next time."

The Prisoner: "I meant it for the witness; I did not mean it for you."

The prisoner was found guilty, and the judge said he would have to serve out the remainder of a sentence on a previous conviction and do five years' penal servitude in addition.

A HUGE HOTEL

A London Hostelry That Will Have a Thousand Bedrooms.

Sir Joseph Lyons has stated that the Strand Hotel Company will build near Regent Street what will be the largest hotel in Europe. It will have 1,000 bedrooms, superb lounges and reception-rooms and the tariff will be on the popular lines of that of the Strand Palace Hotel. "The board are confident," Sir Joseph Lyons told the shareholders, "that it will not only be a financial success and supply a great public need, but that the edifice will be, for durability, practibility and comfort one of the landmarks of London.

"Building will begin next year, and the work will be expedited as much as possible.

The Hotel Cecil, which is at present the largest hotel in London, has bedroom accommodation for 900 persons.

HANGMAN OF 500

James Berry, Now Evangelist, Advocates Abolition of Punishment

With the grim record of having executed 500 men and women, abandoning his calling to become a preacher, James Barry the famous English Executioner-Evangelist is touring the Provinces. Mr. Barry is materially opposed to capital punishment, and in collaboration with Mr. Edward Lockmare, of The Hereford Times, has been instrumental in giving the question wide publicity.

"I remember," said Mr. Berry, "the case of Mary Ledee, of Lincoln, accused and convicted of murdering her husband. Nine years after her execution a dying man in Wrangle, Lincolnshire confessed to the atrocity. At the hour of execution Mrs. Ledee was herself so near the point of death that she had to be carried in a chair to the scene of her last moments. Another case in Gloucester, a laborer on purely circumstantial evidence was executed for the murder of a policeman. Nine months later three robbers in Carlisle on the eve of execution confessed to the murder in Gloucestershire. The case of John Lee, of Teignmouth, Devonshire—Oh, these are merely representative of a large class of innocent men who have suffered the extreme penalty.

"Out of my 500 cases I can recall only four, all men, who feared to face the ordeal. Two of these were forced to the scene shrieking to an insufferable degree, the other two literally fighting tooth and nail for their lives."

DESCENDANTS OF ARCADIANS

They Live on Magdalen Island, in Gulf of St. Lawrence

Up in the centre of the Gulf of St Lawrence the small group of Magdalen Islands are populated by three or four of the lineal descendants of the Arcadians under Champlain and De Monts, who were driven out of New France, Nova Scotia, by the English.

Since the first settlement in 1763, states a writer in Rosary Magazine, generations of the same families have raised scanty crops in the valleys and fed sheep and cattle on the high conical hills which constitute a prominent feature of an insular landscape.

Year after year men have gone out on the waters of the gulf in search of the cod, mackerel and lobsters on which a livelihood depends. They are a simple, primitive people, these natives of the Magdalens, laboring all the while under circumstances that are most discouraging.

The archipelago contains twelve or thirteen distinct islands, including several grim rocks which are not inhabited and never will be. But the remarkable feature about the physical formation of the whole group is the way in which one island is in some instances connected with another by a long stretch of sandy beach, enabling a person, if he desires to do so to go for a score of miles or more along the most barren shore in the world, one that is uninhabited and unrelieved by vegetation of any kind, the only animal life being the thousands of gulls, terns, gannets and other sea fowl which are extremely numerous in all this region.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the ailing would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look it, on all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am working $30 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

Baby's Rash Became a Mass of Horror

Parents Decided He Could Not Be Cured. "Cuticura" Soon Made His Skin Perfectly Clear.

A Toronto man, Mr. Robert Mann, of 7284 Queen St. East, says: "Our boy was born in Toronto on Oct. 13, 1908, and when three months old a slight rash appeared on his cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When it broke, matter would run out, starting new blisters until his entire face, head and shoulders were a mass of scabs and you could not see a particle of clear skin. We did not know what to do for him and tried about every advertised remedy without avail, finding soaps of these only added to his suffering and one in particular, the — Remedy, almost put the infant into convulsions. The family doctor prescribed for him. This did not do any good, so we took him to a hospital. He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and he got worse, if anything. We then called in another doctor and inside of a week the boy was, to all appearances, cured and the doctor said his work was done. But the very next day it broke out as bad as ever.

"We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course and so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing his flesh. The Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1909, and soon the cure was complete. Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease." (Signed) Robert Mann, May 3, 1910.

In another letter, dated June 29, 1911, he adds: "My boy has never had any more trouble since using Cuticura."

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most successful treatment for skin and scalp troubles of infants, children and adults. A single set is often sufficient. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. LANDED EXPLORERS.

Dr. Douglas Mawson's Vessel Returns to Hobart Again.

Hobart, Tasmania, March 13.—The ship Aurora, which sailed from this port on Dec. 2 last with the Australian Antarctic expedition, under the leadership of Dr. Douglas Mawson, returned to Hobart yesterday. The Aurora is commanded by Capt. J. K. Davis. She landed two separate parties at two points in the Antarctic regions, one under Dr. Mawson, on Jan. 19, and the other under Dr. Wilde, who is a veteran of Shackleton and Scott marches, on Feb. 19.

The Aurora found no trace of the Clarie coast, from which it is concluded that it was an ice barrier that has broken up since Durville's discovery in 1838. The Aurora left Antarctic on Feb. 21, and will return in the spring.

Some of the best known British explorers are with the parties landed by the Aurora, which muster 25 men in all. The most advanced feature of the equipment is a monoplane in charge of Lieut. Watkins, who has taken part in a number of aviation meets.

Speaking of the value of the aeroplane in exploration, Dr. Mawson said prior to the departure of the expedition: "An aeroplane can fly over an ice crevasse or a ridge as easily as over anything else, whereas a party on foot might have to search a long time to find a pass ,and an aeroplane can do a journey of 150 miles in three hours."

Lieut. Ninnis of the Royal Fusiliers, who is an expert on surveying and sledging, and a Swiss, Dr. Mers, an adept with the skis, are included in the expedition, and Australians and New Zealanders complete the complement.

Landed Two Parties.

Chicago, March 13.—A cable to The Daily News from Hobart, Tasmania, reads:

"The Aurora, the ship used by the Australian exploring expedition, headed by Capt. Douglas Mawson, returned to Hobart yesterday, after landing one party on Adelaide Land and another on Determination Land, the most westerly point reached by the American expedition under Capt. Wilkes in 1840."

May Make Amundsen Professor.

Christiania, March 13.—A motion was presented in the Storthing yesterday for the establishment of a chair for Roald Amundsen in Christiania University. The matter was referred to the budget committee. The Premier announced that the Government tomorrow would propose that a grant be made Amundsen to enable him to undertake an Arctic expedition.

TEMPERANCE PARTY.

It Will Get Into Fray at Once and Contest Bye-Elections.

Toronto, March 13.—Ontario's political temperance party has been launched.

Ald. Austin of Toronto has been placed in command, as chairman of the new and much opposed committee on political action.

Independent temperance men have guaranteed the committee ample means for its work of organising the electors and putting independent temperance candidates in the field as bye-elections occur.

A provincial organizer will be appointed at the next meeting of the committee.

President Jos. Gibson, who fought the appointment of the committee at the convention, made the most enthusiastic speech in favor of independent political action of the gathering.

The other members of the committee are: Controller McCarthy, Hy. Moyle, Miles Vokes, Mayor Lees of Hamilton; Frank Buchanan, Wingham, and B. H. Spence.

The committee will hold its next meeting after the close of the Dominion Council of Royal Templars of Temperance, which convenes in triennial session in the new court house building, Hamilton, next Tuesday.

The council will be presided over by James Hales of Toronto. W. W. Buchanan of Winnipeg will be among the western delegates in attendance.

A plan for a new temperance propaganda on a wide scale will be acted upon by the Dominion Council, which will sychronize with the new political movement in this province.

Brothers on Trial for Murder.

Montreal, March 13.—Fred. and Henry Seybold, brothers, were both held yesterday for the murder of Mrs. M. Burney, which occurred on March 2 in a basement on Coupal lane. Each has accused the other of killing Mrs Burney. A curtain pole stained with blood, with which the murder is supposed to have been committed, together with a heavy mallet, was presented in evidence. The testimony of several neighbors was taken yesterday.

Mr. Carnegie skips the rope for exercise, the skipping of letters when he spells having proved insufficient for his needs.—Chicago News.

Harry Payne Whitney, we are told, lost $250,000 on the English turf this season. Now we know why he is so popular among English horsemen.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Colds

Don't trifle with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption inevitably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

as a quick cure for colds and grip, and by its use the more serious diseases may be avoided.

MARKET REPORTS.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 12.—Cables of Manitoba spring wheat came weaker, owing to the prospects of increased shipments from the Argentine. The demand was much smaller and the prices bid were 3d to 4½d lower, consequently only a few loads were worked for May-June shipment. A steady feeling prevails in the market for oats, with a fair volume of business doing in car lots for local and outside account. An active trade continues to be done in flour for domestic account, but the demand from foreign buyers was quieter. Millfeed continues scarce and in good demand from all sources. A fair jobbing trade is passing in butter at firm prices, but the demand for round lots is quiet. Eggs are active but easy at the decline. Provisions steady under a fair demand.

MAYONNAISE.

The Way the Genuine Dressing Is Prepared by French Cooks.

Housewives concoct all sorts of dressings — cooked and uncooked — which they call mayonnaise, but which are not properly entitled to that name. The genuine mayonnaise as prepared by French cooks is made by combining olive oil, egg yoke and vinegar without cooking in such a way that the mixture will not curdle. The proportions of these ingredients and the method of putting them together may be varied, and mustard and similar seasonings may be added; but fundamentally the real mayonnaise is always the same. The following rule will be found a good one:

Have ready one egg yolk, one scant cupful of olive oil, three teaspoonfuls of vinegar, a saltspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of sugar, a light dust of cayenne and a level half teaspoonful of powdered mustard. Break the yolk with a fork, beat the mustard, salt, pepper and sugar into it and when a smooth mixture has been formed begin adding the oil, drop by drop, until the whole begins to look like creamed butter. Then pour in the oil faster until all is used. While the oil is being added the dressing should be beaten constantly with a fork. Last of all, pour in the vinegar very slowly, beating the dressing rapidly while doing so. Set it on ice to stand until wanted and add it to the salad the last moment before serving.

It is well to have everything very cold when making this dressing, although excellent mayonnaise has been made without the use of ice, but the oil must not be so cold that it has begun to thicken. It is sometimes stated that the drop by drop method is unnecessary, but while success may be obtained by putting the ingredients together more quickly it is always risky to do so. The drop by drop method practically insures success. If desired lime juice may be substituted for the vinegar.—Exchange.

FRENCH POLICEMEN.

They Can't Be "Fixed," and They Are Always Polite.

The laws of France relative to the out of door life of the masses are made in the interest of the people. Furthermore, they are enforced. There is no fixing things with a French policeman. If your bicycle has suddenly been twisted into junk by a careless driver the belted and brass buttoned gentleman who arrives on the scene questions you with intelligence and jots down in his notebook the facts of the occurrence as near as he can ascertain them. Throughout the interview he is polite, alert and painstaking in getting at the exact truth, and, whether or you or the offending driver or both accompany him to the police station, he conducts you with a quiet dignity and an air of fulfilling his duty. It does not make the slightest difference in France who you are or whether or not you have mutual friends or come from his "ward" or are a relative of Congressman So-and-so. If you are at fault you must pay the damages. If the other fellow is to blame you will be ushered from the presence of the commissaire de police with as much ceremonial politeness as would be shown at a diplomatic interview.

If it is boiling hot or freezing cold and you are in need of information, go to the nearest policeman, address him as "monsieur" and raise your hat. He will immediately return you a military salute, listen attentively and give you, as carefully as possible, the necessary information, saluting you again as you raise your hat to leave him.—F. Berkeley Smith, "Parisians Out of Doors."

"Mad as a Hatter."

What is the derivation of the phrase "Mad as a hatter?" One explanation is that it was originally French, "As mad as an oyster" (huitre), that bivalve being supposed to be extremely unintellectual. Another theory is that the phrase had reference to Collins, the English poet, author of the "Ode to the Passions." He was a hatter at Chichester, and it has been said that the lunatics with whom he was confined at one time called him "the hatter" and that the phrase originated thus.

SPEED OF A SHOT

Finding the Velocity of a Missile a Simple Matter.

MEASURED BY A PAPER DRUM.

The Whirling Cylinder Registers the Projectile's Flight With Minute Accuracy at Any Desired Distance. Wing Shots and Shot Charges.

Persons at all interested in gun firing of any kind, whether of the revolver or rifle or of heavy ordnance of any kind, occasionally come upon the term "muzzle velocity" and velocities of the missile at stated distances.

"How can anybody tell how fast a bullet is traveling when it leaves the muzzle of a weapon?" is a likely comment on the part of the layman.

As a matter of fact this approximate velocity of the missile may be one of the easiest of determinations to make.

In the first place, a drumlike cylinder is made of fixed diameter and of sufficiently stiff paper to allow of its revolving rapidly on a spindle. Using a cylinder of small circumference, it is necessary that the speed approach 2,000 revolutions a minute. These revolutions are produced by electric power, and the count is made by an exact mechanical register.

The gun is placed securely at the required distance from the drum and is sighted directly at the center of the cylinder, which is spinning at so many rods, even miles, a minute, as its circumference determines. With the drum's speed adjusted an electric current discharges the weapon, the bullet striking the center of the drum as measured from top to bottom.

The reader understands that with the drum stationary the bullet would pass directly through it on the line of its diameter, coming out on the other side with scarcely a shade of impediment. With the drum's periphery whirling at the rate of 2,000 revolutions a minute and its diameter only a fraction more than a foot this would mean a rate of 2,000 yards in sixty seconds. Thus in the fragment of a second necessary for the bullet to enter one side of the paper drum, cross it and out at the other side the opposite side of the drum would show considerable deviation from an exact diameter of line of passage.

It is this space of deflection shown inside the further rim of the drum that is used for the computation of velocity of the missile. The speed of the cylinder may be computed to the ten thousandth part of a second if necessary and the lineal distance run in that time be charted in perpendicular lines on the inner side of the paper. At whatever line the bullet penetrates outward it registers its time in crossing the diameter of the cylinder. If it has required the ten-thousandth part of a second for the bullet to fly one foot its muzzle velocity to the mile may be computed by any schoolboy. By the same process, too, the bullet's velocity at 100 yards or 500 yards may be determined.

Years ago before wing shooting had become an art the farmer with his muzzle loading shotgun and charge of black powder would shoot directly at a wild goose or duck in full flight. He evolved a theory of his own as to the oncoming bird, holding that the heavy breast feathers "turned" the shot. He waited until the bird had passed him when, firing directly at it, he could bring down his quarry.

But it was not because the bird was not vulnerable, coming breast on. The fact was that it flew over his charge of shot. Before he could pull the trigger and the hammer fell on the percussion cap and the comparatively slow black powder could be ignited and exploded, sending the shot twenty-five or thirty yards, the bird had flown yards perhaps beyond its position when the fowler first touched the trigger. But firing directly at the bird after it had passed the shot charge had a strong tendency to drop as it flew, and the bird flying on a level line "got in the way" of the charge.

Today the modern nitro powders are immensely quicker than was the old black gunpowder, yet it has been an engineering problem to determine just how fast and in what line a charge of shot will travel. In this determination the revolving drum device has shown several important facts which have been taken in connection with the speed of individual game birds and the effects of windage on a shot charge.

That most important fact as to the flight of shot from a modern shotgun is that at forty yards the shot are "strung out" for approximately fifteen feet. While the leading pellets in the string have greatest velocity and killing power, at this distance even the trailing pellets are of sufficient force to kill.

All this has led to the modern practice of the fowler to reckon with the speed of his shot, the speed of the bird, the influence of the wind in "drifting" the charge, and out of these established facts to "lead" the bird sufficiently to kill it rather than maim and cripple it.—Marvin Holton in Chicago Tribune.

SIRES AND SONS.

Frederick P. Keppel, dean of the School of Arts of Columbia university, has received the decoration of the Legion of Honor from the republic of France.

Lieutenant John M. Timmons, newly appointed chief naval aid to President Taft, is an athlete and something of a man bird. At Annapolis he was captain of the varsity crew in 1900.

Charles Lord of Canstown, son of George Montagu Bennet, seventh earl of Tankerville, a real English peer and heir to vast ancestral estates in England, is attending a private preparatory school in Boston incognito.

William Lowther, father of the speaker of the house of commons, celebrated his ninetieth birthday recently. Mr. Lowther was for many years in diplomatic service and sat in parliament for more than twenty years as a representative of Westmorland.

The new president of Switzerland has had a thorough training for the place. He is M. Forrer, a federal councilor, and has served in every department of the Swiss government, except the treasury, and for the last five years has been at the head of the postal and railway departments.

George Bakhmetieff, the new Russian ambassador, is no stranger at Washington, having been secretary of the legation during the administration of President Arthur. He speaks English fluently, is a man of broad ideas and has a wealth of native wit and saving humor and an American wife.

Laundry Lines.

A pinch of salt and a tiny lump of lard added to starch when boiling will prevent the iron sticking to the cloth.

To help whiten clothes add a teaspoonful of borax dissolved in the last water in which the garments are rinsed.

When laundering madras curtains place them one at a time full width on the rod at the window, run another rod through the hem of the lower edge, removing when perfectly dry. They look much better and newer than when ironed.

Recent Inventions.

A Chicago hotel steward has invented a machine which can wash and dry 18,000 dishes an hour when operated by two men.

Combining a magnifying glass with a spring clamp to hold a needle, an inventor has perfected a device to make the threading of needles an easy task.

A self dumping barge invented in Europe unloads its contents by tipping over bodily when water is pumped into a tank supported over one side of the deck.

English Etchings.

England has one horse to every ten persons.

It is illegal to advertise for lost property and to add "No questions will be asked." The penalty is a fine of £50.

The library at Cambridge university, England, was founded in 1475, and the famous Bodleian at Oxford was instituted in 1597.
